MASQUERADES were in fashion in the court of Edward III., 1340, and in the reign of Charles II. 1660, masquerades were frequent among the citizens. The bishops preached against them, and made such representations as occasioned their suppression, 9 Geo. I. 1724. They were revived and carried to a shameful excess in violation of the laws, and tickets of admission to a masquerade at Banbury were on some occasions subscribed for at twenty-five guineas each, 1776. See Mistress. MASS, in the Roman church, is the office or prayers used at the celebration of the Eucharist, in memory of the passion of Christ, and to this every part of the service alludes. The general division consists in high and low; the first is that sung by choristers, and celebrated with the assistance of a deacon and sub-deacon, low masses are those in which the prayers are rehearsed without singing. Mass was first celebrated in Latin about 394; it was introduced into England in the 7th century. Prostration was enjoined at the elevation of the host in 1201. Dr. Daniel Rock, in "The Church of our Fathers" (1849), describes an ancient MS. of "The Service of the Mass, called the Rite of Salisbury," and compiled for that cathedral, by St. Osmund and others, during the 12th century. The English communion service was adopted in 1549, see Masses, and Ritualism.

Permanent endowment of this college 130,000, for the enlargement of the buildings and 26,000, annually) was granted by parliament, June, 1845. This occasioned much controversy in England, a motion being made for its abolition almost every session. The college was repaired and enlarged in 1860. By the Irish Church act, passed 26 July, 1869, the annual parliamentary grant was to cease after 1 Jan. 1871, a compensation being made. A synod held here, Sept. 1875, condemned mixed education. At first the mayor was chosen for life, but afterwards for periods of irregular duration, now he is chosen annually, but is eligible for re-election. He must be an alderman and have been sheriff. His duties commence on 9 Nov. In early times the mayor was always an M.P. for the city. The prefix LORD is peculiar to the chief civil officer of London, Dublin, Edinburgh, York, Dundee, Glasgow, and Belfast.

The first mayor of London, Henry Fitz Alwin, held office for 24 years appointed 1189 or 1191.

After Dangerfield's apprehension, on suspicion of forging these letters, papers were found concealed in a meal-tub at the house of a woman with whom he cohabited, which contained the scheme to be sworn to, accusing the most eminent persons in the Protestant interest, who were against the duke of York's succession, of treason—particularly the earls of Shaftesbury, Essex, and Halifax. On Dangerfield being whipped the last time, as part of his punishment, 1 June, 1685, one of his eyes was struck out by a barrister named Robert Francis. This caused his death, for which his assaulter was hanged.

century, and was introduced here by Thomas Holcroft.

MELORA or MELORIA, a small isle in the Mediterranean, near which the Pisan fleet defeated the Genoese, in 1241, capturing many bishops going with much treasure to a council. The total destruction of the Pisan fleet on 6 Aug. 1284, by the Genoese near the same place, after a most sanguinary conflict, was considered to be the just punishment of their impety.

MELOS (now Milo), one of the Cyclades in the Egean sea, early colonised by the Spartans. During the Peloponnesian war the Melians adhered to Sparta, till the island was captured, after seven months' siege, by the Athenians, who massacred all the men and sold the women and children as slaves, 416 B.C. A statue of Venus, found here in 1820, was placed in the Louvre, 1834.

MEMPHIS, an ancient city of Egypt ("of which the very ruins are stupendous"), is said to have been built by Memus. It included several grand temples with the tombs of the kings. The invasion of Cambyses, 525 B.C., began the ruin of Memphis, and the founding of Alexandria, 332, completed it. It was restored by Septimius Severus, A.D. 202. In the 7th century, under the dominion of the Saracens, it fell into decay.—MEMPHIS, Tennessee, U.S., on the Mississippi, was taken from the confederates by the federals after a severe conflict, 6 June, 1862.

The cyclorama of Memphis as it might have appeared at the departure of the fleet from Egypt 1492 B.C., painted by Herr Edmund Beninger, was exhibited at Niagara-fall, Westminster, Jan. 1892.

persons, chiefly Irish, 4 Dec. 1785. The road from London to Holyhead has long been regarded as the highway from the British metropolis to Dublin; Mr. Telford was applied to by the government to perfect this route by the London and Holyhead mail-coach road, which he did by erecting beautiful suspension bridges over the river Conway and the Menai Strait, commenced in July, 1812, finished in July, 1825, opened 30 Jan. 1826. The Britannia tubular bridge over the Menai was constructed by Stephenson and Fairbairn in 1849-50; see Tubular Bridges.

MENDICANT FRIARS. Several religious orders commenced alms-begging in the 13th century, in the pontificate of Innocent III. They spread over Europe, and formed many communities; but at length by a general council, held by Gregory X. at Lyons, in 1272, were reduced to four orders—Dominicans, Franciscans, Carmelites, and Augustines. The Capuchins and others branched off; see Franciscans, &c.

MENDICITY SOCIETY (Red Lion-square, London), was established in 1818 for the suppression of public begging, and other impositions. Tickets received from the society are given by subscribers to beggars, who obtain relief at the society's house, if deserving. Up to 1872 the society had caused above 23,000 vagrants to be convicted as impostors. In 1857, 54,073 meals; in 1860, 42,912; in 1865, 52,137; in 1872, 26,330; in 1878, 55,180 were distributed. In 1857, 3785; in 1865, 3809; in 1872, 2192; and in 1878, 1700 beggars letters were investigated; in 1891, 1358; 1384 cases were relieved in 1887. See Poor. The society has been much aided by the action of the Charity Organization society; established in 1870.

MENNONITES, four sects of Dutch, Flemish and German baptists, derive their name from Menno Symonis (1505-61), formerly a catholic priest, who became a teacher and leader of the anabaptist, about 1537, and published his "True Christian Belief" in 1556; subsequently divisions and changes ensued. The Mennonites, objecting to war, emigrated from Prussia to Odessa, to escape military service, and went thence to America, 1878.

MENSURATION. The properties of conic sections were discovered by Archimedes, to whom the chief advancement in mensuration may be attributed. He also determined the ratio of spheres, spheroids, &c., about 218 B.C.; see Archimedes. The Mensurator, a new machine for the solution of triangles, was explained by Mr. W. Maramba Adams, at the British Association Meeting at Brighton, Aug. 1872.

MENTANA, (near Monte Rotondo, in the old papal states). Here Garibaldi and his volunteers, after having entrenched his positions at Monte Rotondo and Mentana on their march towards Tirol, on Sunday, 3 Nov. 1867, were totally defeated by the pontifical and French troops under generals Kanisior and Polhâs, after a severe conflict, in which general Fialli said "the Chassepot rifles did wonders." There were about 5000 men on each side, but the Garibaldians were very badly armed. The loss of the papal and French troops was about 200 killed and wounded, that of Garibaldi about 800. Garibaldi crossed the Italian frontier, and was arrested at Correes, and eventually sent to Caprea (about 25 Nov.). See Rome. A monument to the Garibaldians who fell here was inaugurated 25 Nov. 1877.

See Russia and Turkestan.

MESMERISM. Frederiek Anton Mesmer, a German physician, of Meserburg, published his doctrines in 1766, contending, in a theory on planetary influence, that the heavenly bodies diffused through the universe a subtle fluid which acts on the nervous system of animated beings. Quitting Vienna for Paris, in 1778, he gained numerous proselytes and much money by experiments with and without metal plates, producing effects termed then, "animal magnetism" now "hypnotism".

A committee of physicians and philosophers investigated his pretensions, and Bailly, in a paper drawn up in 1784, exposed the futility of animal magnetism. Mesmerism excited attention again about 1848, when Mrs Harriet Martineau and others announced their belief in it. In 1850, the Mesmeric Infirmary issued its tenth annual report, archbishop Whately being president, and the earl of Caillule and Mr Monckton Milnes (since lord Houghton) among the vice presidents. See Animal Magnetism and Hypnotism.

The first Messenian war was between 743 B.C. and occurred 13 years after the fall of the Spartan women in a long civil strife which caused the king of Sparta being killed in his efforts to defend the kingdom. He finally returned with the Messenians in nine slaves to the Spartans. The second war took place in 464 B.C. when the Messenians revolted against the Spartans. Bunsen and Kirchhoff's method of chemical analysis by means of the spectrum has added caesium, rubidium, thallium, indium, gallium, and others to the known metals. See Elements, Mines, Iron and the other metals. "Metallurgy," published by Dr John Percy, 1801-30, he died 19 June, 1889.

The term, literally denoting "after physics," originated from these words having been put at the head of certain essays of Aristotle, which follow his treatise on Physics. Macintosh. Modern metaphysics arose in the 15th century—the period when an extraordinary impulse was given to the study of the human mind in Europe, commonly called the "revival of learning." Hobbes, Gurdwarth, S. T. Coleridge, Dugald Stuart, and sir W. Hamilton, were eminent British metaphysicians; and Descartes, Pascal, Kant, Schelling, and Fichte, foreign ones. See Philosophy.

METABURUS, a river in central Italy, where Hannibal, the brother of Hannibal, was defeated and slain, 207 B.C., when marching with abundant reinforcements. The Romans were led by Livius and Claudius Nero, the consuls. The latter commanded the head of Hannibal to be thrown into his brother's camp. The victory saved Rome.

METEMPSYCHOSIS, a doctrine attributed to Pythagoras, about 528 B.C., asserts the transmigration of the soul from one body to another. It is also ascribed to the Egyptians, who would eat no animal food lest they should devour the body into which the soul of a deceased friend had passed. They had also an idea that so long as the body of the deceased was kept entire, the soul would not transmigrate, and therefore embalmed the dead. See Buddhism.

By the exertions of Mr. James Glaisher, long the secretary, the apparatus at Greenwich was erected, and meteorology has appeared in the "Greenwich Observations" since 1848. See Hutton—Scientific Ascents.

The royal meteorological society's annual exhibition began in 1880.

Meteorological observatories have been erected in all parts of the globe.

The Meteorological department of the Board of Trade, established in 1855, under Admiral Fitzroy, commenced the publication of reports in 1857. The admiral published his "Weather-Book" in 1865. His exertions are said to have overworked his brain, and on 30 April, 1865, he died by his own hand. The Meteorological office was soon after placed under the direction of Mr. Robert H. Scott. It has issued apparatus and instruction books to captains of ships, and established observatories in many places in the empire. It was handed over to the Royal Society in 1871, and endowed by Mr. J. P. Gassiot.

Kinder plant (fibres presented) exhibited by professor Novak at Vienna; changes in the weather said to be caused by alteration in the leaves attributed to electro-magnetism in 24 to 48 hours previously, Aug.-Sept. 1885. The plant is grown in the Botanical society's garden, 1 garden. Many other plants possess this property (cf. causivity), Sept. 1868. During the experiments made at the Jubell Laboratory, Kew, by Dr. Oliver and Herr Joseph Novak in October 1889, when many weather changes occurred, only one forecast was given by the weather plant which therefore cannot be relied upon for meteorological purposes.

See Daniell's Thermometer, &c.

METEORS, LUMINOUS, include shooting stars, fire-balls, and falling stones or aerolites. They were described by Halley, Waller, and others early in the 17th century. The periodicity of the star showers about the 10th of August (named in the middle ages St. Lawrence's tears) was discovered separately by Quetelet, 1830, and by Herschel in 1837. The following are remarkable epochs for their annual return:—2 Jan., 29 July; 3 and 4-12 Aug.; 8-14 Nov., 11 Dec. R. P. Grey. See August.

The magnificent continuous star-showers of 24 Nov. 1866, had been predicted by professor Newton some time previously. A fine display occurred on the night of 13 Nov. 1868, in the United States. A similar phenomenon had been witnessed by Humboldt at Cumana (S. A.), 12 Nov. 1790; and by Dr. D. Olmsted at New-haven (U.S.), 13 Nov. 1832. They were well observed in Britain and Europe, 27 Nov. 1879; and in Southern and Western Europe, 27 Nov. 1885.

Aerolites, falling-stones, accompanying meteors, are found in our museums. They contain iron, nickel, and other minerals.

Mr Sirman Lockyer announces his theory, based on spectrum experiments that all self-luminous bodies in the celestial spaces are composed of meteorites or masses of vapour produced by heat brought about by condensation of meteoric aëria due to gravity, royal society, 17 Nov 1837

METHOD (Greek, a way of transit), that which gives to knowledge its character. S T Coleridge's treatise on the science of method is prefixed to the first volume of the "Encyclopaedia Metropolitana" 1845

The most recent work on this subject is Professor Hanky Jevon's Principles of Science a Treatise on Logic and Scientific Method 1874 the principles of mind contained in creation of science are discrimination detection of identity and retention

METHUEN TREATY, a treaty for regulating the commerce between Great Britain and Portugal, made 27 Dec 1703, concluded by Philip Methuen our ambassador at Lisbon. It greatly favoured the importation of port wine into this country by lowering the duty, to the discouragement of French wines. It was abrogated in 1834

METHYL, a colourless odorous gas, a compound of hydrogen and carbon, obtained in the free state first by Frankland and Kolbe separately, in 1849

METHYLATED SPIRITS By an act passed in 1855 a mixture of spirits of wine with 10 per cent of its bulk of wood-naphtha, or methyl alcohol, is allowed to be made duty free for use in the arts and manufactures, not less than 450 gallons being made at one time. In 1861 an act was passed permitting the methylated spirits to be re-distilled by licence

METONIC CYCLE, a period of 19 years, or 6940 days, at the end of which the change of the moon fall on the same day, see Calippus Period, Golden Number

METRIC SYSTEM Before the revolution there was no uniformity in French weights and measures. On 8 Nov, 1790, the constituent assembly charged the Académie des Sciences with the organization of a better system. The committee named for the purpose by the academy included the names of Berthollet, Borda, Delambre, Lagrange, Laplace, Méchain, and Prony. Delambre and Méchain were charged with the measurement of an arc of the meridian between Dunkirk and Barcelona and from their calculations the metre, which is equal to a ten-millionth part of the distance between the poles and the equator (3280 English feet) was made the unit of length and the base of the system by law on 7 April, 1795. The system was completed in 1799, and made by law the only legal one on 2 Nov 1801. A decree on 12 Feb 1801 accommodated the old measures to the new system, but on 4 July, 1837, it was decreed that after 1 Jan 1840, the metric and decimal system in its prime true simplicity should be used in all business transactions. The example of France has been followed by the greater part of Europe, and will probably in time be adopted in the British empire

Unit of SURFACE measure—a square metre=1 1000 English yard (a square decimetre or are=100 square metres)

MICHAELMAS, 29 Sept., the feast of St Michael, the reputed guardian of the Roman Catholic church, under the title of "St Michael and All Angels." Instituted, according to Butler, 487.

The custom of eating goose at Michaelmas has been erroneously attributed to Queen Elizabeth's eating of the bird at dinner on 29 Sept. 1588 at the house of Sir Neville Umfreville at the time she heard of the destruction of the Spanish Armada. The custom is of much older date and is observed on the continent. Calendaria.

MICHAEL'S MOUNT, Str. (Cornwall), is considered by some to be the Iktis of Diodorus Siculus, and an ancient resort of the tin merchants. St Michael was said to have appeared on the mount, 495 or 710, and the place, thus reputed holy, became the seat of a body of monks, who received a charter from Edward the Confessor, 1044, and many privileges from pope Gregory VII, 1079.

MICHIGAN, a north-west state of N America, admitted to the union, 26 Jan. 1837. Capital, Lansing. Population, 1880, 1,636,937, 1890, 2,093,889.

About 500 persons perish and 1000 male horses are by destructive forest fires on Sept. 1891.

MICROBES, see Germs.

MICROMETER, an astronomical instrument used to measure any small distance and the minute objects in the heavens, such as the apparent diameters of the planets, &c. was invented by Wm Gascoigne, who was killed at the battle of Marston-moor, 2 July, 1644. It was improved by Huyghens about 1652. Sir Joseph Whitworth made a machine to measure the millionth of an inch, about 1858, the measurement of the  $\frac{1}{10,000,000}$  of an inch is now common.

MICROPHONE (Greek, mikros, little, phone, sound), a name given by W. Heatstone, in 1827, to an instrument for rendering weak sounds audible by means of solid rods. The name was also given to an arrangement invented (in Dec. 1877) by professor D. E. Hughes (an American, an inventor of the printing telegraph), and shown to the Royal Society, 9 May, 1878.

An electric current is established between two moderately conducting bodies (such as pieces of barboled metalised by being plunged when heated into mercury) resting slightly upon each other, mounted on a piece of thin wood. If the contact is so made that one of the bodies may be easily displaced minute sounds produced on the wood disturb the electric conductivity at the place of contact and may be heard by the help of the telephone. The sonorous and electric waves are thus rendered synchronous and become convertible. The tread of a foot sounds like that of a large quadruped. See Telephone.

MICROPHITE, a microscopic plant, especially parasitic, some physiologists consider bacteria and bacilli to be microphytes, 1890.

MICROSCOPES, said to have been invented by Janseus, in Holland, about 1590, by Galileo, about 1610, by Fontana, in Italy, and by Drebbel, in Holland, about 1621. Those with double glasses were made at the period when the law of refraction was discovered, about 1624. Solar microscopes were invented by Dr Hooke. In England great improvements were made in the microscope by Benjamin Martin (who invented and sold pocket microscope about 1740), by Henry Baker, F.R.S., about 1763, and still greater during the present century by Wollaston, Ross, Jackson, Varley, Hugh Powell, and others. Diamond microscopes were made by Andrew Pritchard in 1824, and the properties of "test objects" to prove the qualities of microscopes, discovered by him and Goring in 1824-40. A binocular microscope (i.e., for two eyes), was constructed by professor Raddell in 1851, and Wenham's important improvements were made known in 1861. Treatises on the microscope by J. Quekett (1848), by Dr W. B. Carpenter (1856 et seq.), by Dr Lionel Beale (1858 et seq.), and Griffith and Hentfrey's "Micrographic Dictionary" (1856, 1875, and 1883), are valuable. The Microscopical Society of London was established 20 Dec. 1839, and the Quekett Microscopical Club, 1865. In 1865 Mr H. Sorby exhibited his spectum microscope, by which the millionth of a grain of blood was detected.

MILITARY or MARTIAL LAW is built on no settled principle, but is entirely arbitrary, and, in truth, no law, but sometimes indulged, rather than allowed, as law. See Matthew Hale. It has been several times proclaimed in parts of these kingdoms, and in 1798 was almost general in Ireland, where it was also proclaimed in 1803.

MILITIA, the standing national force of these realms, is traced to king Alfred, who made all his subjects soldiers, 872-901. See Army Defence.

thousandth year from the creation, and that during a thousand years (millennium) Christ and the saints will reign upon the earth. See Revelation. The doctrine was very generally calculated in the 2nd century.

* This militia act was consequent upon the then pre-valuing opinion of the necessity of strengthening our military defence against the possibility of French

force not exceeding 80,000 men of which number 50,000 were to be raised in 1852 and 30,000 in 1855 the quotas

He was afterwards restored to favour, and became secretary of state, 1776.

MINERALOGY, the science of minerals, is a branch of geology, see Geology, Minerals, and Crystallography. It was not much studied by the ancients. George Agricola in the 16th century made the first attempt to treat it scientifically.

The study of mineralogy was advanced by Becker, Kober, and Wackward in the 17th century. A British mineralogical society established in 1800. Henry Truett of Birmingham appeared in 1802. Mineralogical society of Great Britain held first meeting in London, 3 Feb. 1876 and others since. Another society termed the Mineralogical Society of the United Kingdom was established in 1876. MINES Strabo and Tacitus enumerate gold and silver as among the products of Britain. The earliest instance of a claim to a mine royal being enforced occurs 47 Hen. III. 1262. It related to mines containing gold, together with copper, in Devonshire. In Edward I's reign, according to Mr Ruding, the mines in Ireland, which produced silver, were supposed to be so rich that the king directed a writ for working them to Robert de Ufford, lord justice, 1276. The lead mines of Cardiganshire, from which silver has ever more been extracted, were discovered by Sir Hugh Middleton in the reign of James I.; see Coal, and the various metals.

The Meistersingers, their successors, an incorporated fraternity in the 14th century, composed satirical ballads for the amusement of the citizens and lower classes. Hans Sachs, a shoemaker (1494-1576), a poet of the reformation, was for a time their dean. His works were published at Nuremberg, 1560. "Owleglass" and "Reynard the Fox," are attributed to the Meistersingers.

MINNESOTA, a western state of N. America, was organized as a territory, 3 March, 1849, and admitted into the union in 1857. On 17 Aug. 1862, the Sioux Indians commenced a series of outrages at Acton in Meser county, decimating the country and massacring above 500 persons, of both sexes, and of all ages. It was retaken by the Spanish and French in July, 1756, and admiral Byng fell a victim to public indignation for not relieving it; see Byng. It was restored to the British at the peace in 1763; taken 5 Feb. 1782, again captured by the British under general Stuart, without the loss of a man, 15 Nov. 1798; given up at the peace of Amiens, 25 March, 1802.

MINORITIES. In the new reform bill, passed 15 Aug. 1867, provision was made for the representation of minorities in constituencies with three members by limiting each elector to two votes. It was introduced as an amendment by lord Cairns in the lords, 30 July, and accepted by the commons, Aug. 1867. The principle was adopted in a new constitution by the state of Illinois, U.S., July, 1870. See Proportional Representation.

MINSTER, or MONASTERIUM, a place occupied by monks; see Westminster and York.

MINSTRELS, originally pipers appointed by lords of manors to divert their copyholders while at work, owed their origin to the glee men or harpers of the Saxons, and continued till about 1560. John of Gaunt erected a court of minstrels at Tutbury in 1380. So late as the reign of Henry VIII. they intruded without ceremony into all companies, even at the houses of the nobility; but in Elizabeth's reign they were adjudged rogues and vagabonds (1597).

MINT. Athenian enacted regulations for the government of the mint about 628. There were several provincial mints under the control of that of London. Henry I. is said to have instituted a mint at Winchester, 1125. Stow says the mint was kept by Italians, the English being ignorant of the art of coining, 7 Edw. I. 1278. The operators were formed into a corporation by the charter of king Edward III., in which condition it consisted of the warden, master, comptroller, assay-master, workers, coiners, and subordinates. The first entry of gold brought to the mint for coinage occurs in 18 Edw. III. 1343. Tin was coined by Charles II. 1684; and gun-metal and pewter by his successor James after his abdication. Sir Isaac Newton was warden, 1690-1727, during which time the debased coin was called in, and new issued at the loss of the government. Between 1806 and 1810, grants amounting to 262,000*l.* were made by parliament for the erection of the present mint, which was completed in 1810; it was injured by fire, 31 Oct. 1815. The new constitution of the mint, founded on the report of the hon. Wellesley Pole, took effect in 1817. Professor Thomas Graham, the master of the mint, died 16 Sept. 1869. By the Coinage Act, passed 4 April, 1870, the office was combined with that of the chancellor of the exchequer, the duties being transferred to the deputy-master (Sir C. W. Fremantle), K.C.B. 1 Jan. 1890. After reorganization, the work was resumed, 8 Dec. 1882. See Coin.

Mirrors or looking-glasses were made at Venice, A.D. 1300; and in England, at Lambeth, near London, in 1673. The improvements in manufacturing plate-glass, and that of very large size, have cheapened looking-glasses very much. Various methods of coating glass by a solution of silver, thus avoiding the use of mercury, so injurious to the health of the workmen, have been made known; by M. Politzen in 1851; by M. Cimog in 1861; and by Liebig and others.

The city of Namur was ceded to Austria, 1713; taken by the French in 1746, but was restored in 1749. In 1782, the emperor Joseph expelled the Dutch garrison. Nancy was embellished by Stanislas, ex-king of Poland, who resided and died here Feb. 1766. It was captured by Blücher, Jan. 1814, and on the retreat of MacMahon's army, and expecting the German army, surrendered to four Uhlans, 12 Aug. 1870. It was restored at the peace.

Naples, after resisting the power of the Lombards, Franks, and Germans, was subjugated by the Normans under Roger Guiscard, king of Sicily, A.D. 1131. Few countries have had so many political changes, and cruel and despotic rulers, or suffered so much by convulsions of nature, such as earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, &c. ## NATIONAL ASSEMBLY, FRANCE.

Upon the proposition of the abbé Sieyès, the states-general of France constituted themselves the National Assembly, 17 June, 1789. On the 20th the hall of this new assembly was shut by order of the king; upon which the deputies of the Tiers Etat repaired to the Jeu de Paume, or Tennis-court, and swore not to dissolve until they had digested a constitution for France. On the 22nd they met at the church at St. Louis. This assembly abolished the state religion, annulled monastic vows, divided France into departments, sold the national domains, established a national bank, issued assignats, and dissolved itself 21 Sept. 1792; see National Convention. In 1848 the legislature was again termed the National Assembly. It met 4 May, and a new constitution was proclaimed, 12 Nov. A new constitution was once more proclaimed by Louis Napoleon in Jan. 1852, after dissolving the National Assembly, 2 Dec. 1851. The present French National Assembly was elected 8 Feb., and met 12 Feb. 1871; new constitution adopted, 25 Feb. 1875; see France.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY, GERMAN, see Germany, 1848

NATIONAL ASSOCIATIONS. One was formed in 1564, headed by the earl of Leicester, to protect queen Elizabeth from assassination, in consequence of the discovery of various plots. Another was proposed in the house of commons, in Feb. 1696, by sir Rowland Gwyn, for the defence of the person and government of William III. soon after the discovery of the assassination plot (which see). The members of both houses of parliament, and the majority of the male population, joined it immediately; all persons holding office under government were required to be members, see Ad to Sick and Wounded, Artillery, Dris, Cavalry, Employers, Farmers, Social Service, and Volunteers for other national associations.

NATIONAL BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION, established 1812, incorporated 1850. Pensions are granted to decayed gentry, and to professional people, teachers, and others in reduced circumstances.

NATIONAL CONVENTION OF FRANCE. constituted in the hall of the Tuileries 17 Sept. and formally opened 21 Sept. 1792, when M. Grégoire, at the head of the National Assembly, announced that that assembly had ceased its functions. It was then decreed, "That the citizens named by the French people to form the National Convention, being met to the number of 371, after having verified their powers, declare that the National Convention is constituted." This convention continued until a new constitution was organized, and the Executive Directory was installed at the Little Luxembourg, 1 Nov. 1795; see Directory. The Chartists (which see) in England formed a National Convention in 1839.

NATIONAL DEBT. The first mention of parliamentary security for a debt of the nation occurs in the reign of Henry VI. The present national debt may be said to have commenced in the reign of William III., 1689. It amounted, in 1697, to about five millions sterling, and was then thought to be of alarming magnitude. The sole cause of the increase has been war. By an act passed 31 May, 1867, the conversion of 24,000,000*l.* of the debt into terminable annuities was provided for. The law is consolidated by the national debt act, passed 9 Aug. 1870; amended by acts passed 1875, 1882, 1884, 1886 and 1887. By the national debt act, passed Aug. 1883, 70,241,908*l.* were immediately converted, and 173,300,000*l.* would be cancelled in 20 years. See Sinking Fund, and Local Loans.

NATIONAL GUARD OF FRANCE was instituted by the Committee of Safety at Paris on 13 July, 1789 (the day before the destruction of the Bastille), to maintain order and defend the public liberty. Its first colours were blue and red, to which white was added, when its formation was approved by the king. Its action was soon paralysed by the revolution, and it ceased altogether under the consulate and empire. It was revived by Napoleon in 1814, and maintained by Louis XVIII., but was broken up by Charles X., after a tumultuous review in 1827. It was revived in 1830, and helped to place Louis Philippe on the throne. In 1848 its reconstitution and its enlargement from 80,000 to 100,000 men led to the frightful conflict of June, 1848. Its constitution was entirely changed in Jan. 1852, when it was subjected entirely to the control of the government. Formerly it had many privileges, such as choosing its own officers, &c. In consequence of the defection of part of the National Guard and the incompetency of the rest during the outbreak in Paris in 1871, its gradual abolition was decreed by the national assembly at Versailles (488-154), 24 Aug. 1871. The peaceful disarmament began in September. National Guards have been established in Spain, Naples, and other countries, during the present century.

(see Christmas); the Nativity of the Virgin Mary, not observed by the Protestants at all. Pope Sixtus I., about 690, established the latter, but it was not generally received in France and Germany till about 1000; nor by the eastern Christians till the 12th century. The festival of the nativity of St. John the Baptist, 24 June, Midsummer-day, is said to have been instituted in 488.

NATURAL HISTORY was studied by Solomon, 1014 B.C. (1 Kings iv. 33); Aristotle (384-322 B.C.); by Theophrastus (394-297 B.C.); and by Pliny (23-79 A.D.); see Botany, Zoology, &c.

NATURAL PHILOSOPHY, see Philosophy.

NATURAL SELECTION, see Species.

NATURALISATION is defined to be "the making a foreigner or alien a denizen or freeman of any kingdom or city, and so becoming, as it were, both a subject and a native of a king or country that by nature he did not belong to." The first act of naturalisation passed in 1437, and various similar enactments were made in most of the reigns from that time, several of them special acts relating to individuals. An act for the naturalisation of the Jews passed May, 1753, but was repealed in 1754, on the petition of all the cities in England, see Jews, for the privilege since granted them. The act for the naturalisation of prince Albert passed 3 Vict., 7 Feb. 1840. A committee to inquire into the naturalisation laws, appointed May, 1868, Sir J. Gifford chairman, met 25 Oct. 1868, reported about Feb. 1869, and new acts for this purpose were passed 12 May, 1870, and 2 July, 1872. In 1870 there were about 9500 immigrants in England, and about 2,000,000 British subjects in the United States of America. By the new act the latter were enabled to renounce their allegiance, and by the convention signed 3 Feb. 1871, the nationality of British subjects was made dependent on choice and not on birth.

NATURALISM, a realistic style in literature, mainly introduced by Balzac, 1829, cf. seq. Edmund and Jules K. G. (not published). Medical and Physiological Novels, 1846, cf. seq. Emile Zola in his Romain Rolland's series, 1871, cf. seq. portrayed the naturalist and the naturalist rather than the naturalist. A dramatic form of the naturalist is titled 'Dunk' which is published in London in 1872.

NATURE, a weekly illustrated journal of science first appeared 4 Nov. 1859, editor, Mr Joseph Norman Lockyer, F.R.S. The French publisher La Nature appeared in 1870.

NATURE PRINTING. This process consists in impressing objects, such as plants, minerals, &c., into plates of metal, causing these objects, as it were, to engrave themselves, and afterwards taking casts or copies fit for printing from. Knappert of Erfurt, between 1728 and 1757, produced his Herbarium pictum by pressing the plants themselves (previously inked) on paper, the impressions being afterwards coloured by hand. In 1833, Peter Kuhl of Copenhagen made use of steel rollers and lead plates. In 1842 Mr Taylor printed lucæ. In 1847 Mr Fanning printed ferns, grasses and plants, and in the same year Dr Branson suggested the application of electricity to the impressions. In 1849, Professor J. J. Dollé, of Vienna, by the able assistance of Mr Andrew Worrington obtained impressions of agates and fossils. The first practical application of this process was in Von Heuser's work on the Mosses of America, in Illustrations, the second (the first in this country) in "The Ferns of Great Britain and Ireland," edited by Dr Lindley, the illustrations to which were prepared under the superintendence of Mr Henry Bradbury in 1855-56 who also in 1859-60 printed "The British sea-weeds," edited by W. G. Johnston and Alex. Crall. The process was applied to butterflies by Joseph Merrin of Gloucester, in 1864.

NAVAREINO (S. W. Greece), settled by the Arabs 6th century, taken by the Turks, 1500; by Venetians, 1686; by Turks, 1718; by Greeks, 1821, by Turks, 1825. Near here, on 20 Oct. 1827, the combined fleets of England, France, and Russia, under command of admiral Codrington, nearly destroyed the Turkish and Egyptian fleet. More than thirty ships, many of them four-deckers, were blown up or burnt, shelled by the Turks themselves, to prevent their falling into the hands of their enemies. This destruction of the Turkish naval power was characterised by the duke of Wellington as an "untoward event." The port is also called Navarine.

NAVARRRE, now a province of Spain, formed a part of the Roman dominions, and was conquered from the Saracens by Charlemagne, 778. His descendants appointed governors, one of whom, Garcia Ramirez, took the title of king in 857. In 1076, king Sancho IV. was poisoned, and Sancho Ramirez of Aragon seized Navarre. In 1134, Navarre became again independent under Garcia Ramirez IV. In 1234, Thibault, count of Champagne, nephew of Sancho VII., became sovereign of Navarre; and in 1254, by the marriage of the heiress Jane with Philip IV. le Bel, Navarre was united to France.

NAVIGATION LAWS. A code of maritime laws is attributed to Richard I. of England, said to have been decreed at the sale of Oléron, 1194, and further enactments were made by Richard II. in 1381.—In Oct. 1657, the parliament passed an act entitled "Goods from foreign parts, by whom to be imported," the principles of which were affirmed by 12 Charles II. c. 18, "an act for the encouraging and increasing of shipping and navigation" (1660). The latter act restricts the importation and exportation of goods from or to Asia, Africa, or America, to English ships, of which the masters and three-fourths of the mariners are to be English. This was followed by many acts of similar tenor; which were consolidated by 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 54 (1833). These acts were in the whole or in part repealed by the act "to amend the laws in force for the encouragement of British shipping and navigation" (passed 12 & 13 Vict. c. 29, 26 June, 1849, after much opposition), and which came into operation 1 Jan. 1850. The steam navigation act passed 14 & 15 Vict. c. 79, 1851, came into operation 1 Jan. 1852. The act regulating the navigation of the river Thames was passed in 1786.—In Feb. 1865 the emperor recommended the modification of the French navigation laws; in Feb. 1872, new restrictions were laid upon foreign ships, chiefly affecting British.

NAVIGATORS (or Navvies). These helpers in the construction of railways probably derived their name (about 1830) from formerly making the inland navigation in Lancashire, &c., and are doubtfully said to be descendants of the original Dutch canal labourers. Navy Mission Society (new) met at Lambeth palace, 7 May, 1880. A "steam navy" suitable for working in sand, gravel, or heavy clay, made by Messrs. Ruston, Procter, & Co., of Lincoln, 1878.

NAVAL SALUTE. THE BRITISH FLAG began in Alfred's reign, and though sometimes disputed, may be said to have been continued ever since. The Dutch agreed to strike to the English colours in the British seas, in 1673. The honour of the flag salute at sea was also formally assented to by France in 1704, although it had been long previously exacted by England, see Flag and Salute at Sea.

NAVAL UNIFORMS. The first notice of the establishment of a uniform in the British naval service, which we have met with, occurs in the London Journal of 5 March, 1728, under the head of "Domestic News," in these terms:—"An order is said to be issued, requiring all his majesty's sea-officers, from the admiral down to the midshipman, to wear a uniform of clothing, for which purpose pattern coats for dress suits and frocks for each rank of officers are lodged at the Navy-office, and at the several dockyards for their inspection." This is corroborated by the Gazette of 23 July, 1757, when the first alteration in the uniform took place, and in which a reference is made to the order of 1728, alluded to in the journal above mentioned, and which in fact is the year when a naval uniform was first established. James I. had indeed granted, by warrant of 6 April, 1609, to six of his principal masters of the navy, "livery coats of fine red cloth." The warrant is stated to have been drawn verbatim from one signed by queen Elizabeth, but which had not been acted upon by reason of her death. This curious document is in the British Museum, but king James's limited red livery is supposed to have been soon discontinued.—Quarterly Review.

NAVY PAY OFFICER, organized in 1844, was abolished in 1856, when the army and navy pay departments were consolidated in the Paymaster General's office.

NAVY LAW was first officially compiled by John Finlaison, the celebrated actuary, and published monthly in 1814; now quarterly.

NAVAL REVIEW. The queen reviewed the fleet at Spithead, near Portsmouth, 11 Aug. 1855, again, March, 1856, before it sailed to the Baltic, at the commencement of the Russian war; and again, at Portsmouth, on the conclusion of peace, in the presence of the parliament, &c. The fleet consisted of an unbroken line of 5 miles, and consisted of upwards of 300 men-of-war, carrying 3800 guns, and manned by 40,000 seamen. There was about 2000 officers, and 10,000 marines. A grand naval review (13 great wooden ships, 15 iron-plated, 25 gun- vessels and boats) was held at Spithead this year, the autumn, and the victory of Egypt presented, 17 July, 1867; another at Spithead before the abdication of Persia, 23 June, 1873; another at Spithead by the queen, (10 broadside ships, 8 turret ships, &c.), 3 Aug. 1878; another at Portsmouth, the queen and colonial visitors present (at the expense of the officers), 23 July, 1886.

Grand unannounced naval review (Jubilee) by the queen at Spithead, 23 July, 1887; 135 vessels of all kinds, including 25 iron-plated, 20,000 officers and men; one man died through the bursting of a shelling gun.

NAVAL VOLUNTEERS (or Reserve). By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 73 (1853), the admiralty were empowered to raise a body of sea-faring men to be called the "Naval Coast Volunteers," no to exceed 10,000, for the defence of the coast, and for actual service if required. In 1859, 1874 were passed to enable the admiralty to raise a number of men, not exceeding 30,000, as a reserve force of seamen, to be called the "Royal Naval Volunteers." In November following, the admiralty issued a statement of the "qualifications, advantages, and obligations" of this reserve. The enrolment commenced on 1 Jan. 1860. The engagement is for five years, and the volunteers are entitled to a pension when incapacitated after the expiration of the term. At the prospect of war with the United States in Dec. 1861, a great number of seamen at Hartlepool, Dundee, London, Aberdeen, &c., offered their services. First enrolled body of Royal Naval Volunteers inspected, about 18 Jan. 1873.

NAVY OF FRANCE. It is first mentioned in history, 728, when, like that of England at an early period, it consisted of galleys; in this year the French defeated the Frisian fleet. The French fleet was almost annihilated by Edward III. at the battle of Sluys, 24 June, 1340. It was considerably improved under Louis XIV. at the instance of his minister Colbert, about 1657. The French navy was in its splendour about 1781; became greatly reduced in the wars with England; see Naval Battles. It was greatly increased by the emperor Napoleon III., and in 1859 consisted of 51 ships of the line (14 sailing vessels and 37 steamers), and 308 other vessels, in all 449; including vessels building, converting, or ordered to be built. The new French iron-clad frigate Gloire, constructed by M. Dupuy de Lôme, launched in 1860, was generally considered as successful. The Solferrino and Magenta were launched in June, 1861; other iron vessels since. The Magenta was destroyed by fire, 6 killed, 31 Aug. 1875. The Desolation, a great iron-clad, launched at Lorient, 19 Aug. 1879. France had 22 battleships, 11 armoured vessels for coast defence, besides gun boats, cruisers and torpedo boats; in all 256 vessels in 1888. The Supreme Navy Council was created by decree, 6 Dec. 1889. See under Flotte.

NAZARENENE, a name given to Jesus Christ, and his disciples; but afterwards to a sect who rejected the doctrine of Christ's divinity in the first century. A sect named Nazarenene, resembling the Society of Friends in Britain, became prominent in Hungary in the autumn of 1867.

NEAPOLIS, see Naples.

NEBRASKA, a N.W. territory of North America (part of Louisiana), was organized 30 May, 1854. Capital, Lincoln; Omaha city, very important. Bradshaw destroyed by a tornado, 3 June, 1860. Population, 1880, 452,400; 1890, 1,058,910.

NEBULAR HYPOTHESIS, put forth by Sir Wm. Herschel, 1811, supposes that the universe was formed out of shapeless masses of nebulae or clusters of small stars. It has not been generally received. In Oct. 1860, Mr. Lassell strictly scrutinized the dumb-bell nebula, and stated that the brightest parts did not appear to be stars. In 1865, Mr. Wm. Huggins reported that he had analysed certain nebulae by their spectra, and believed them to be entirely gaseous.

NECROMANCERS, see Magie.

NECTARINE, the Amygdalus Persica, originally came from Persia about 1562. Previously, presents of nectarines were frequently sent to the court of England from the Netherlands; and Catherine, queen of Henry VIII., distributed them among her friends.

NEEDLES. "The making of Spanish needles was first taught in England by Elias Crowne, a German, about the eighth year of queen Elizabeth, and in queen Mary's time there was a negro made one Spanish needles in Chesapeake, but would never teach his art to any."—Stowe. The manufacture was greatly improved at Whitechapel, London; Redditch, in Gloucestershire, and Hatherage, in Derbyshire. An exhibition of ancient needle-work was formed at South Kensington Museum in 1873.

NEEDLE-GUN (Zündnadelgewehr), a musket invented by J. N. Dreyse of Sommerda, about 1827, and made a breech-loader in 1836, which was adopted by the Prussian general Manteuffel about 1846. It was found to be a most effective weapon in the war with Denmark in 1864, and in that with Austria in 1866. The ignition of the charge is produced by a fine steel rod or needle being pressed through the cartridge. The principle is claimed for James Whitley, of Dublin, 1823; Abraham Moser, 1831; and John Hanson, of Huddersfield, 1843.

NEPTUNE, a primary planet, first observed on 23 Sept. 1846, by Dr. Galle at Berlin, in consequence of a letter from M. Le Verrier, who had conjectured from the anomalous movements of Uranus that a distant planet might exist nearly in the position where Neptune is situated. Calculations to the same effect had been previously made by Mr. J. Couch Adams, of Cambridge; but unfortunate delays occurred in their publication, and also of professor Challis's consequent discovery of the planet. The Royal Society of London awarded its gold medal to both astronomers as equals in the theoretical discovery a satellite of Neptune was discovered by Mr. Lassell on 10 Oct. following. Neptune is said to have been seen by Lalande, and thought to be a fixed star. The Greek god Poseidon became the Roman Neptune. Prof. J. C. Adams died 21 Jan. 1892.

1. He rejected the error of those who said Christ was a mere man, as Ebron, Paul of Samosata Photinus. 2. He maintained that the Word was united to the humanity in Christ Jesus, and that this union was most intimate and strict. 3. He held that these two natures made one Christ, one Son, one Person; only made up of two natures. 4. And that one Person may have either divine or human properties attributed to Him.

NEUCHÂTEL, a canton in Switzerland, formerly a lordship, afterwards a principality. The first known lord was Ulrich de Fenis, about 1032, whose descendants ruled till 1573, after which by marriages it frequently changed governors. On the death of the duchesse de Nemours, the last of the Longueville, in 1707, there were many claimants; among them our William III. He and the allies however gave it to Frederick I. of Prussia with the title of prince. In 1806 the principality was ceded to France, and Napoleon bestowed it on his general Berthier, who held it till 1814, when it fell to the disposal of the allies. They restored the king of Prussia with the title of prince with certain rights and privileges; but constituted it a part of the Swiss confederation. Population, 1888: canton, 106,153; city, 16,261.

After an unsuccessful attempt in 1825, the inhabitants repudiated their allegiance to Prussia, and proclaimed Neuchâtel a free and independent member of the Swiss confederation. 1848

The king of Prussia protested against this; and a protocol was signed between England, France, and Austria, recognizing his claims. 1850

Some of his adherents, headed by the count de Pourtales, broke out into insurrection against the republican authorities, who, however, quickly subdued and imprisoned them, with the intention of bringing them to trial. Sept. 1856

War threatened by the king of Prussia, and great anxiety and determination manifested by the Swiss. On the intervention of the English and French governments, a treaty was signed by which the king of Prussia virtually renounced his claims, on receiving a pecuniary compensation, which he eventually gave up. He retains the title of prince of Neuchâtel, without any political rights.

NEW ENGLAND (N. America). The first settlement made in 1607, was named New England by Captain Smith, in 1614. A band of 102 Puritans, now termed the "Pilgrim Fathers" (with 28 women) arrived here in the May Flower, and founded the settlement on Plymouth Rock, 25 Dec. 1620, which was named New Plymouth. This was the nucleus of Massachusetts, from whence were gradually developed New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut, and Rhode Island. In 1643 these settlements formed the first American confederation, a defensive union, with a constitution based on the Moenic law, governed by a religious aristocracy, which lasted till 1693. Maine was made an independent state in 1820.

NEW FOREST (Hampshire), was made ("afforested") by William the Conqueror, 1079-85. It is said that the whole country, for thirty miles in compass, was laid waste. NEWFOUNDLAND (N. America), discovered by John Cabot, who called it Prima Fides, 24 June, 1497. It was formally taken possession of by Sir Humphry Gilbert, 1583. In the reign of Elizabeth, other nations had the advantage of the English in the fishery. In 1577 there were 100 fishing vessels from Spain, 50 from Portugal, 150 from France, and only 15, but of larger size, from England.—Hakluyt. But the English fishery in some years afterwards (1625) had increased so much that the ports of Devonshire alone employed 150 ships, which sold their fish in Spain, Portugal, and Italy. The sovereignty of England was reconfirmed in 1713, by the treaty of Utrecht, certain rights on the "French shores" being reserved for France. Newfoundland obtained the privilege of a colonial legislature in 1832; and the bishopric was established in 1839. Population, 1884, 197,335. NEWGATE, LONDON. The prison derives its name from the gate, to which was attached a small prison, gradually enlarged. One was erected in 1086 by the bishop of London. It was used as a prison for persons of rank as early as 1218, but was rebuilt about two centuries afterwards by the executors of Sir Richard Whittington, whose statue with a cat stood in the niche till the time of its demolition by the great fire of London, in 1666. It was then reconstructed, but becoming an accumulation of misery and inconvenience, was pulled down and rebuilt between 1778 and 1780. During the riots in 1780, the interior was destroyed by fire, but shortly afterwards restored. In 1857 the interior was pulled down to be re-erected on a plan adapted to the reformatory system. It was frequently visited by the Dutch in the 17th century. They established a colony and erected a fortress, named Dabus, on the S.W. coast, in 1828, which was unsuccessful, and removed in 1835. A lofty range of mountains was named after Capt. Owen Stanley, who first saw them from his vessel on sea about 1849.

The strong feeling of the inhabitants in favour of the Confederates and against the Federals induced general B. Butler to rule them with military rigour, occasionally degenerating into brutal tyranny, especially towards females, May to October, 1862. He was replaced by general Banks, 16 Dec. 1862. CHARTIST RAGE.—About 10,000 chartists (which see), from the neighbouring mines, armed with guns, pikes, &c., arrived at Newport, 4 Nov. 1839. They divided themselves into two bodies—one, under the command of Mr. John Frost, an ex-magistrate, proceeded down the principal street, whilst the other, headed by his son, took the direction of Stow-hill. They met in front of the Westgate hotel, where the magistrates were assembled with about 30 soldiers of the 45th regiment, and several special constables. The rioters broke the windows and fired on the inmates, by which the mayor, Mr. (afterwards Sir Thomas) Phillips, and several other persons, were wounded. The soldiers returned the fire, and dispersed the mob, which fled, leaving about 20 dead, and others wounded. A detachment of the 10th royal hussars arrived from Bristol, and the town became tranquil.

Frost was apprehended on the following day, together with his printer, and other influential persons among the chartists. He and others were tried and sentenced to death (afterwards commuted to transportation) Jan. 1840.

An amnesty was granted them, 3 May, and they returned to England Sept. 1856.

NEW RIVER, for the supply of London with water, was begun 1609, and finished in 1613, when the projector, Hugh Myddelton, a London goldsmith, was knighted by James I.—Styffe. This artificial river, which rises in Hertfordshire, and which, with its windings, then forty-eight miles long, was brought to London, and opened 29 Sept. 1613. So little was the benefit of it understood, that for above thirty years the seventy-two shares (equally divided into King's and Adventurer's), netted only 51. apiece. Charles I. sold his shares to Myddelton's representatives for an annuity of 500l. Each of these shares was sold originally for 100l. A part of a share sold at the rate of 94,050l. the share, 1 Nov. 1876; part of a king's share at rate of 90,000l.; of an adventurer's share at rate of 93,000l., 15 May, 1878; king's share, rate 88,200l.; adventurer's, 91,000l., Oct. 1878; king's share, rate 91,010l.; adventurer's, 94,500l., Nov. 1880; king's share rate, 85,800l.; adventurer's, 85,200l., Nov. 1887.

At his recommendation a convict colony was first formed here. A new constitution was granted in 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 54). The Intercolonial Exhibition was opened at Sydney, by the governor-general lord Belmore, 30 Aug. 1870. NEWSPAPERS. The Roman Acta Diurna were issued, it is said, 601 B.C. In modern times, a Gazette, which derived its name from its price, a small coin, was published in Venice (about 1536). The Gazette de France, now existing, first appeared in April, 1631, edited by Remondot, a physician. It was patronized by the king, Louis XIII., who wrote some articles for it, and by Richelieu. The first real

In the reign of James I., 1622, appeared the London Weekly Current; and in the year 1643 (the period of this civil war) were printed a variety of publications, certainly in no respect entitled to the name of newspapers. NEW STYLE. Pope Gregory XIII., in order to rectify the errors of the current calendar, published a new one, in which ten days were omitted—5 Oct. 1582, becoming 15 Oct. The new style was adopted in France, Italy, Spain, Denmark, Holland, Flanders, Portugal, in 1582; in Germany in 1584; in Switzerland in 1583 and 1584; in Hungary in 1587; and in Great Britain in 1751. In 1752 eleven days were left out of the calendar—3 Sept. being reckoned as 14 Sept. The difference between the old and new style up to 1699 was 10 days; after 1700, 11 days; after 1800, 12 days. In Russia, Greece, and throughout the East, the old style is still retained. The czar, Alexander II., was born on the 17th April, 1818, old style, 29 April, new style; see Calendar.

NEWTONIAN PHILOSOPHY, the doctrines respecting gravitation, &c., taught by sir Isaac Newton in his "Principia," published in 1687; see Gravitation. He was born 25 Dec., 1642; became master of the mint, 1699; president of the Royal Society, 1703; and died 20 March, 1727. A statue of him in marble by Boubliac was set up at Trinity College, Cambridge, 14 July, 1755, and one in bronze by Thorpe, at Grantham, 21 Sept. 1858, when lord Brougham delivered a discourse on the life and works of Newton. The latter statue cost 1600*l.*, a sum obtained by public subscription.

NEW YEAR'S DAY, &c. The beginning of the Jewish year was changed and the possessor instituted, 1901 a.c. A feast is said to have been instituted by Numa, and dedicated to Janus (who presided over the new year), 1 Jan. 713 a.c.

On this day the Romans sacrificed to Janus a cake of new sifted meal, with salt, incense, and wine; and all the mechanics began something of their art of trade; the men of letters did the same, as to books, poems, &c.; and the commons, though chosen before, took the oath and entered upon their office this day. Nonius Marcellus refers the origin of NEW-YEAR'S DAY among the Romans to Titus Tatius, king of the Sabines, who having considered as a good omen a present of some branches cut in a wood consecrated to the goddess of strength, which he received on the first day of the new year, authorized the custom afterwards, and gave these gifts the name of

NEW YORK, the "empire state" of the United States of N. America, is said to have been discovered by Verrazano, a Florentine in the French service, about 1524, and rediscovered by Hudson, an Englishman in the Dutch service, in 1609, and settled by the Dutch in 1614, the city being named Manhattan and New Amsterdam; but the English under colonel Nichols dispossessed them and the Swedes, 27 Aug. 1664, and changed its name, the king, Charles II., having given the territory to his brother, the duke of York.  NEY'S EXECUTION. Ney, duke of Elchingen, prisoner of the Mookwa, and one of the most valiant of the marshals of France, was shot as a traitor, 7 Dec. 1875. On 7 Dec. 1853, his statue was erected on the spot where he fell.

After the abdication of Napoleon I, 5 April, 1814, Ney took the oath of allegiance to the king, Louis XVIII. On Napoleon's return to France from Elba, he marched against him, but his troops deserting, he regarded the cause of the Bourbons as lost, and opened the invader a way to Paris, March, 1815. Ney led the attack of the French at Waterloo, where he fought in the midst of the slain, his clothes pierced with bullet-holes, five horses having been under him night and day, and he obliged him to flee. Though included in the decree of 20 July, 1815, which guaranteed the safety of all Frenchmen, he was sought out, and on 5 Aug. taken at the castle of a friend at Uxelles, and brought to trial before the Chamber of Peers, 4 Dec. The 12th article of the capitulation of Paris, fixing a general amnesty, was quoted in his favour in vain.

NEZIB, Syria. Here Ibrahim and the Egyptians defeated the Turks, 24 June, 1839.

NIAGARA (N America). At the head of this river, on the western shore, is Fort Erie, which was taken by the English, 24 July, 1759. It was abandoned in the war with the United States, 27 May, 1813, but was retaken, 19 Dec. following. A suspension bridge of a single span of 820 feet over the Niagara, connecting the railways of Canada and New York, was opened in March, 1855. It is elevated 16 feet on the Canadian, and 28 feet on the American side.

About eighteen miles below Fort Erie are the remarkable falls. The river is here 750 yards wide, the half mile immediately above the cataract is a rapid, in which the water falls 51 feet. It is then thrown, with astonishing grandeur down a stupendous perpendicular of 150 feet perpendicular in three distinct and collateral sheets, and in a rapid that extends to the distance of nine miles below, falls nearly as much more. The river then flows in a deep channel till it enters Lake Ontario, at Fort Niagara.

The falls visited by the prince of Wales Sept. 1860. Blount crossed the falls on a tight rope, 27 Aug. 1860. Professor Tyndall visited the falls Aug. 1872 and lectured on them at the Royal Institution, 4 April, 1873. Company formed to utilize its water power mechanically, 1877.

An international commission, president, Sir Wm. Thomson, after analysis had held up is appointed to consider the best method for utilizing 125,000 horse power of the force of the Niagara falls, which is computed to be about 4,500,000 horse power. Prizes were given by the Cataract company to the authors of various projects 9 Feb. 1891.

In the Times of 8 June 1890, professor George Forbes, who was engaged in the undertaking, reported that the engineering works were nearly completed, and that the electrical arrangements by which the vast force was to be transmitted, were begun.

The force is to be used in factories, in lighting Niagara Falls city, and in working railways, probably in 1893.

NIBELUNGEN NOT or NIBELUNGEN-LIED, a popular German epic of the 12th century, composed of various ancient mythical poems, termed sagas, which according to the poet Wm. Morris, should be to our race what Homer was to the Greeks.

The first critical edition, by K. Lachmann, appeared 1860 and 1865. The best translation in modern German, by Strack, 1867, a useful edition, with translation and glossary by L. Braunfels, 1868 in English, by W. N. Lettson and ed. 1874.

Richard Wagner's musical dramas, "The Ring of the Nibelungen," are based on this poem. The persons include the great Northern gods and goddesses, the giants, the dwarfs, and the daughters of the Rhine (see under Muse).

NICARUA, see Nicar.

NICARAGUA, a state in Central America (which see). The present constitution was established 19 Aug. 1858. At the commencement of 1855 it was greatly disturbed by two political parties, that of the president, Chamorro, who held Granada, the capital, and that of the democratic chief, Castellan, who held Leon. The latter invited Walker, the filibuster, to his assistance, who in a short time became sole dictator of the state. By the united efforts of the confederated states the filibusters were all expelled in May, 1857. On 1 May, 1858, Nicaragua and Costa Rica appealed to the great European powers for protection. Nicaragua railway, a transit route between the Pacific and Atlantic, proposed, and company formed Nov. 1866. President T. Martinez elected, 1859 and 1863, Fernando Guzman, elected 1 March, 1867, Valente Quadra elected 1 Feb. 1871, Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, 1 Feb. 1875. Joaquin Zavala, 1 March, 1879, Dr. Adam Cardenas, Jan. 1883, Señor

* William Walker was born at Tennessee, in the United States, where he became successively doctor, lawyer and journalist and afterwards gold-seeker in California, whence he was invited to Nicaragua by Castellan, with the promise of 50,000 acres of land, on condition of bringing with him a band of adventurers to sustain the revolutionary cause. Walker accepted the terms, and on 28 June landed at Bluejo with 68 men. He increased his forces at Leon, and soon after attacked the town of Rivas, where he was rejoined with loss. He then joined Col. Caniney, who had occupied and governed Grey Town 6 May. On 13 Oct. Walker captured Granada by surprise when in a defensive state, shot Martinez, one of the ministers, and established a rule of terror. He subsequently, 4 Nov. Nicaragua, though he made peace with the British at the same time, but shot him on 7 Nov. on finding him corresponding with fugitives at Costa Rica. Walker at first was only general-in-chief, but on Rivas, whom he had made president deserting him, he became sole dictator. On 14 May 1866 his envoy Villal was recognized by the president of the United States, whence also he obtained reinforcements during his retention of power. Costa Rica declared war against him 28 Feb. 1866. The other states of central America soon followed the example, and a sanguinary struggle ensued lasting till May, 1867. On 25 Nov. 1866, Walker totally burnt Granada, being unable to defend it, and removed the seat of government to Rivas. This place he succeeded in getting down on 1 May, 1867, on the intervention of Capt. Davis of the St. Mary, a U.S. vessel, himself with 260 men, were conveyed in that vessel to New Orleans, where they were received with great enthusiasm. On 25 Nov. 1867, he again invaded Nicaragua, landing at Punta Arenas with 400 men, but on 8 Dec. was compelled to surrender to Capt. Franklin, U.S., and was conveyed to New York. He escaped punishment by sailing privately (2 June 1868) but Capt. Paulding was tried for exceeding orders and blamed - yet excused by President Buchanan. On 5 Aug. 1868, Walker landed near Tuxtila Honduras, and took the fort on the 6th. On the 7th he proclaimed that he made war on the government, not on the people of Honduras. On being summoned to surrender, he took up Capt. Saltonstall, N.Y., of the Lozano, he refused to feed. He was run down, caught, given up to the Honduras government, tried, and shot (2 Sept.). His followers were dismissed. Grey Town was surrendered to Nicaragua in 1860.

NICE or NICAEA, a town in Bithynia, Asia Minor, N W Antigonus gave it the name Antigonia, which Lymanachus changed to Nicæa, the name of his wife. It became the residence of the kings of Bithynia about 208 B.C. At the battle of Nice, A.D. 194, the emperor Severus defeated his rival, Pescennius Niger, who was again defeated at Issus, and soon after taken prisoner and put to death. The first general council was held here 19 June to 25 Aug. 325, which adopted the NICENE CREED and condemned the Arians. It was attended by 318 bishops from diverse parts, who settled both the doctrine of the Trinity and the time for observing Easter. An addition was made to the creed, 381, was rejected, 431. See Philopone. When the Crusaders took Constantinople, and established a Latin empire there in 1204, the Greek emperors removed to Nice and reigned there till 1261, when they returned to Constantinople, see Eastern Empire. Nice was taken by the Ottoman Turks in 1330.

NICE (S E France) was the seat of a colony from Marseilles, new Marseilles, and formed part of the Roman empire. In the middle ages it was subject to Genoa, and suffered from the frequent wars, being taken and re-taken by the imperialists and French. It was taken by the Austrians under Melas, 1800, seized and annexed to France 1792, restored to Sardinia in 1814. Nice was again annexed to France in virtue of the treaty of 24 March, 1860, the people having voted nearly unanimously for this change by universal suffrage. The French troops entered 1 April, and definite possession was taken 14 June following. Garibaldi, a native, vehemently protested against this annexation.

silver. Cronstedt in 1751 discovered nickel in the mineral copper-nickel. Nickel ordered to be substituted for bronze coinage in France, 1822.

The wireless heat engine of professor Stefan of Vienna in 1865 consisted of plates of nickel fixed on a wheel which rotated when the metal was heated in the presence of a magnet. Similar machines have been constructed by B. Berliner, 1883, Edison, 1887, and F. & Smith, 1895.

NICOBAR ISLES, Indian Ocean, S of Bay of Bengal, given up by Denmark and occupied by Great Britain to suppress piracy, announced June, 1869.

NICOMEDIA, the metropolis of Bithynia, Asia Minor, N W, founded by king Nicomedes I, 264 B.C., on the remains of Actæus, destroyed by an earthquake, A.D. 115, and restored by the emperor Adrian, 124. The Roman emperors frequently resided here during their eastern wars. Here Diocletian reigned the purple, 305, and Constantine died at his villa in its neighbourhood, 337. It surrendered to the Seljukian Turks, 1078, and to Urchan and the Ottoman Turks in 1338.

NICOPOLIS on the Danube, Bulgaria, founded by Trajan. Here was fought a battle between the allied Christian powers under Sigismund, king of Hungary, afterwards emperor, and the Turks under Bajazet, said to have been the first battle between the Turks and Christians, the latter were defeated, losing 20,000 slain, and as many wounded and prisoners, 28 Sept. 1396. Nicopolis was taken by the Russians after a severe conflict (2 pashas, about 6000 men, 2 monitors, and 40 guns were captured), 15, 16 July, 1877.

NIELLO-WORK believed to have been produced by rubbing a mixture of silver, lead, copper, sulphur, and borax into engravings on silver, &c., an art known to the ancients, was practised in the middle ages, and said to have given to Maso Finiguerra the idea of engraving upon copper, about 1460.

NIEMEN, or MEMEL, a river flowing into the Baltic, and separating Prussia from Russia. On a raft on this river the emperor Napoleon met Alexander of Russia 22 June 1807, and made peace with him and Prussia. He crossed the Niemen to invade Russia, 24 June, 1812, and re-crossed with the remains of his army, 28 Dec. Near it the Poles defeated the Russians 27 May, 1831.

staff of thirty-seven nurses, and arrived at Soutari, 5 Nov. She rendered invaluable services to the army; and returned to London, 8 Sept. 1856. In honour of this, a meeting was held at Willis's Rooms on 29 Nov. 1855, to raise funds to establish an institution for the training of nurses and other hospital attendants. Madame Jenny Lind-Goldschmidt sang at Exeter Hall on 11 March 1856, and gave the proceeds (1872*l.*) to the fund. The subscriptions closed, 24 April, 1857, amounting to 44,039*l.* The queen gave Miss Nightingale a valuable jewel.

NIHILISM, a popular name for the school of philosophy which believes nothing without physical evidence, renounces all forms of Divine revelation, and gives nothing in their place.

NIHILISTS, ultra-reformers in Russia, said to propose the destruction of all government, and to begin society afresh. They became known and spread in 1872; their alleged leader, Zhyhareff. The government began to suppress them, Sept. 1875. One of the leaders, Michael Bakounin, died at Lugano, 1 July, 1876. They evidently possess wealth. For recent events, see Russia, 1877-87. The term Nihilist was invented by the Russian novelist Tourguénief, who died 3 Sept. 1883.

NIL DARPAN, see India, June, 1861.

NILE (Egypt). The longest river in Africa, formerly considered to have its rise in what were termed "the Mountains of the Moon." The travels of Bruce were undertaken to discover the source of the Nile. He set out from England in June, 1768; on the 14th of November, 1770, discovered the source of the Blue Nile in lake Tana, and returned home in 1773. The Nile overflows regularly every year, from about the 15th of June to the 17th of September, when, having given fertility to the land, it begins to decrease. The first Nilometer (a pillar), is said to have been set up by Ousarsen III., a king of the XII. dynasty, 2,300 B.C. One was set up by Soymman the Caliph, 715 A.D. In 1829, the inundations of the Nile rose to 26 instead of 22, by which 30,000 people were drowned and immense property lost. Mr. Fetherick set out early in 1861 to explore the country at the source of the Nile. For recent discoveries, see Africa 1864. A bridge over the Nile (above 1300 feet) at Cairo, was completed by a French company, Aug. 1872. For the discoveries of Speke, Grant, and Baker, see Victoria Nyassa, &c.

Mr. H. M. Stanley, in his book, "Darkest Africa," published June, 1890, expressed his opinion that the newly discovered lake Albert Edward Nyman, at the head of the Semliki river which is fed by the snows of the mighty Ruwenzori range (possibly the Mountains of the Moon mentioned by Ptolemy the geographer in the 2nd century A.D.), is the real source of the Nile.

The barrage works of the Nile, consisting of two great dams or weirs for irrigation, and the conveyance of boats by means of locks, constructed under the direction of Mouget Bey, a Frenchman, 1843-61; were unsuccessful and eventually neglected.

In 1885 the great powers agreed to the expenditure of 2,000,000*l.* on irrigation works, and the renovation of the barrage was effected under the direction of sir Colin Scott Moncrieff, 1886-90.

Mouget Bey died at Paris, aged 82, Dec. 1890.

NILE, BATTLE OF THE (or Aboukir), 1 Aug. 1798, near Rosetta, between the French fleet under Brueys, and the British under sir Horatio Nelson. Nine of the French line-of-battle ships were taken, two were burnt, and two escaped. The French ship, L'Orient, with Brueys and 1000 men on board, blew up, and only 70 or 80 escaped. Nelson's exclamation upon commencing the battle was, "Victory or Westminster Abbey!"

NIMEGUEN (Holland). Here was signed the treaty of peace between France and the United Provinces, 1678. The French were successful against the British under the duke of York, before Nimeguen, 28 Oct. 1794; were defeated by them 3 Nov.; but gained the place 8 Nov. Population, 1890, 32,618.

NINETEENTH CENTURY, a magazine open to writers of totally different opinions; first appeared, March, 1877; editor, James Knowles.

NINEVEH, the capital of the Assyrian empire (see Assyria), founded by Ashur about 2245 B.C. The empire fell when Nebuchadnezzar captured Nineveh 606 B.C. The discoveries of Layard and others since 1839, in the neighbourhood of Mosul, at Koyunjik, the site of the ancient Nineveh, and other places, have in a manner disinterred and re-peopled a city which for centuries had ceased to figure on the page of history. Botta commenced his explorations at Khorsabad in 1843, and published his great work "Monuments de Ninive," 1849-50. In 1848 Mr. Layard published his "Nineveh and its Remains," and in 1853 his "Discoveries," in his second visit in 1849-50. Mr. Hormuzd Rassam, in 1854, discovered an ancient palace. Mr. George Smith described his excavations and their results in 1873-4, in "Assyrian Discoveries," 1875. He died at Aleppo, 19 Aug. 1876. See Assyria. Mr. Rassam, appointed his successor, among other valuable discoveries at Balawat, nine miles N.E. of Nimroud, and at Koyunjik, &c., found a bronze monument with inscriptions recording the names, title, genealogy, and exploits of king Assur-nazir-pal (B.C. 885-860), builder of the palaces and temples of Kalakh, the capital of the middle Assyrian empire. Mr. Rassam arrived in London with collections, Dec. 1882.

The forms, features, costume, religion, modes of warfare, and ceremonial customs of its inhabitants stand before us as distinct as those of a living people; and by help of the sculptures and their cuneiform inscriptions, the researches of the learned have increased the knowledge of Assyrian history. Among the sculptures that enrich the British Museum, may be mentioned, the winged bull and lion, and numerous hunting and battle pieces; and the bas-relief of the eagle-headed human figure, presumed to be a representation of the Assyrian god Nuroch (from Nir, an eagle or hawk), whom Sennacherib was in the act of worshipping when he was assassinated by his two sons, about 720 B.C. see Kings xix. 37.

NIOBIUM, a rare metal, discovered by Hatchett in columbite, a black earth, and named columbium, 1801. It was pronounced to be identical with tantalum (or tantalum) by Wollaston; but was rediscovered by H. Rose in 1846, and named niobium.

NIRVANA, see Buddhism.

NIGHT or NIGHT (Nacht), a battle was fought between the English and Scotch armies, the latter grossly disproportioned in strength to the former. Several thousands of the Scots were slain upon the field and in the pursuit, 7 May, 1402.

NINEBO, see Achem.

NINI PRIUS ("unless before"), words in a writ summoning a person to be tried at Westminster, unless the judges should come to hold their assizes in the place where he is. Judges sit in Middlesex by virtue of 18 Eliz. c. 12 (1576).

NISMES (Nîmes), S. France, was the flourishing Roman colony, Nemausus. Its noble amphitheatre was injured by the English in 1417. The inhabitants embraced Protestantism, and suffered much persecution in consequence, and Nîmes has frequently been the scene of religious and political contests. The treaty termed the Pacification of Nîmes (14 July, 1629) gave religious toleration for a time to the Huguenots.

NITRE, see Saltpetre.

NITRIC ACID, a compound of nitrogen and oxygen, formerly called aqua fortis, is said to have been first obtained in a separate state by Raymond Lully, an alchemist, about 1287; but we are indebted to Cavendish, Priestley, and Lavoisier for our present knowledge of its properties. H. Cavendish demonstrated the nature of this acid in 1785. Nitrous acid was discovered by Scheele about 1774. Nitrous gas was accidentally discovered by Dr. Hales. Nitrous oxide gas (laughing gas) was discovered by Dr. Priestley in 1776. The use of this gas as an anæsthetic, recommended by H. Davy in 1800, was begun in America (by Mr. Wells, a dentist), 1844, in Paris, 1866, in London, 31 March, 1868, ingenious apparatus having been invented for its application.

NITROGEN or AZOTE (from the Greek a, no, and zoe or zē, I live), an irrespirable elementary gas, and an important element in food, discovered by Rutherford about 1772. Before 1777, Scheele separated the oxygen of the air from the nitrogen, and almost simultaneously with Lavoisier discovered that the atmosphere is a mixture of these two gases. Nitrogen combined with hydrogen forms the volatile alkali ammonia, so freely given off by decomposing animal and vegetable bodies.

NITRO-GLYCERINE (also called NITRO-GLYCEROL), an intensely explosive amber-like fluid, discovered by Sobrero in 1847, is produced by adding glycerine (in successive small quantities) to a mixture of one part of nitric acid, and two parts of sulphuric acid. Alfred Nobel, a Swede, first attempted its application as an explosive agent, in 1864. It has caused several most disastrous accidents, with great loss of life. In attempting to bury some nitro-glycerine in the town moor at Newcastle-on-Tyne, 17 Dec. 1867, an explosion took place, and seven persons lost their lives, including Mr. Mawson, the sheriff, and Mr. Bryson, town surveyor; see Dynamite. Mr. Alfred Nobel's nitro-glycerine manufactory, near Stockholm, blown up; 15 persons killed, many injured, 10 June, 1868. An act prohibiting its importation for a time, and regulating its transmission, was passed in 1866, and repealed by the Explosives Act of 1875. Secret manufacture discovered, see Birmingham, 1883.

NIZAM, see Hydrabad.

NOBILITY. The Goths, after they had seized a part of Europe, rewarded their hitherto with titles of honour, to distinguish them from the common people. The right of peerage seems to have been at first territorial. Patents to persons having no estate were first granted by Philip the Fair of France, 1095. George Neville, duke of Bedford (son of John, marquis of Montague), ennobled in 1470, was degraded from the peerage by parliament, on account of his utter want of property, 19 Edw. IV., 1478. Noblemen's privileges were restrained in June, 1773; see Lords, and the various orders of the nobility.

In 1845 a statistical writer said that there were 500,000 nobles in Russia, 150,000 in Austria; in Spain (in 1780), 470,000; in France (before 1790) 360,000 (of whom 4,100 were of the aristocratie noble); in the United Kingdom, 1,631 with transmissible titles (dukes to baronets).

NOBILITY OF FRANCE preceded that of England. On 18 June, 1793, the National Assembly decreed that hereditary nobility could not exist in a free state; that the titles of dukes, counts, marquises, knights, barons, excellencies, abbots, and others, be abolished, that all citizens take their family names, livrées and armorial bearings also to be abolished. The records of the nobility, 600 volumes, were burnt at the foot of the statue of Louis XIV., 25 June, 1792. A new nobility was created by the emperor Napoleon I., 1808. The hereditary peerage was abolished 27 Dec. 1831; re-instituted by Napoleon III., 1852.

NOBLE, an English gold coin (value 6s. 8d.), first struck in the reign of Edward III., 1343 or 1344, said to have derived its name from the excellency of the metal of which it was composed.

NOCTURNE, a name given by John Field (who died 1837) to a new and very pleasing musical composition. He was followed very successfully by Chopin, who died, 1850. The term was adopted by Mr. Whistler, the artist, for his night pieces, in which he began with line, form, and colour, 1877-8.

"NOLUMUS LEGES ANGLIÆ MUTARI" see Bastards, and Merton.

NOMINALISTS (or CONCEPTUALISTS), a scholastic sect, opposed to the Realists, maintain that general ideas have no existence outside our minds, and only exist by the names we give them. The founder of the sect, Jean Roscelin, a canon of Compiègne, was condemned by a council at Soissons, 1092, but the controversy was revived in the 12th century. Among the Nominalists are reckoned Abelard, St. Thomas Aquinas (partially), Occam, Hobbes, Locke, Berkeley, and Dugald Stewart. The Realists assert that general ideas are real things with positive existence.

NON-CONFORMISTS. The Protestants in England are divided into conformists and non-conformists, or, churchmen and dissenters. The first place of meeting of the latter, in England, was established at Wandsworth, near London, 20 Nov. 1572. The name of non-conformists was taken by the Puritans when the Act of Uniformity came into operation on 24 Aug. 1662 (termed "Black Bartholomew's day"), when 2000 ministers of the established religion resigned, not choosing to conform to the statute passed "for the uniformity of public prayers and administration of the sacraments;" see Puritans, and Dissenters. The laws against them were relaxed by the Toleration act, 24 May, 1689. — The Nonconformist newspaper (edited by Mr. Edward Miall, aft. M.P.) first appeared 14 April, 1841. He died 29 April, 1881.

The non-conformists presented to Mr. Miall 10,000 guineas for his exertions on behalf of religious equality.

Meeting of bishops and dissenting ministers at Lambeth palace, to consider the alleged progress of irreligious thought.

Manfred college, Oxford, for Nonconformists, opened.

NOTES, in the Roman calendar, were the fifth day of each month, excepting March, May, July, and October, when the notes fell on the seventh day.

NON-JURORS considered James II to have been unjustly deposed, and refused to swear allegiance to William III. in 1689. Among them were Sancroft, archbishop of Canterbury; Ken, bishop of Bath and Wells, and the bishops of Ely, Gloucester, Norwich, and Peterborough, and many of the clergy, who were deprived 1 Feb. 1691. Non-jurors were subjected to double taxation, and obliged to register their estates, May, 1723. They formed a separate communion, which existed till the beginning of the present century.

NON NOBIS, DOMINE! ("Not unto us, O Lord;" &c., Psalms cv. 1), a musical canon, sung as a grace at public feasts, was composed by W. Birde in 1618.

NON-RESISTANCE OATH (containing a declaration that it is unlawful to take arms against the king upon any pretence whatever), enforced by the Corporation act, 1661, was repealed in 1719.

NOOTKA SOUND (Vancouver's Island), discovered by captain Cook in 1778, and settled by the British in 1786, when a few British merchants in the East Indies formed a settlement to supply the Chinese market with furs; but the Spaniards in 1789 captured two English vessels and took possession of the settlement. The British ministry demanded reparation, and the affair was amicably terminated by a convention, and a free commerce was confirmed to England in 1790.

"NO-POPERY RIOTS," see Gordon. The cry was revived against the Catholic emancipation bill, 1829.

NORDLINGEN (Bavaria). Here the Swedes under count Horn were defeated by the Austrians, 27 Aug. 1634; and the Austrians and allies by Turenne in 1645.

NORE MUTINY, see Mutinies.

NORFOLK ISLAND (Pacific Ocean), discovered in 1774, by captain Cook, who found it uninhabited, except by birds. The settlement was made by a detachment from Port Jackson under governor Phillip, in 1788, in Sydney bay, on the south side of the island. This was at one time the severest penal colony of Great Britain. The island was abandoned in 1809, but re-occupied as a penal settlement in 1825. The descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty were removed to it in June, 1856, from Pitcairn's Island (which see).

NORICUM, see Austria.

NORMAL SCHOOLS (from norma, a rule). One for the instruction of teachers, established at Paris by a law, 30 Oct. 1794, opened 20 Jan. 1795, under the direction of La Placé, La Harpe, Haulé, and other eminent men, was soon closed. Another, established by Napoleon in 1808, was closed in 1822. The plan was revived in 1826, and has been developed in England and other countries. See Science and Art.

NORMANDY (N. France), part of Neustria, a kingdom founded by Clovis in 511 for his son Clotaire, which, after various changes, was united to France by Charles the Bald in 837. From the beginning of the 9th century it was continually devastated by the Scandinavians, termed Northmen or Normans, to purchase repose from whose irruptions Charles the Simple of France ceded the duchy to their leader Rollo, 905. Rollo, the first duke, held it as a fief of the crown of France, and several of his successors after him, until William the seventh duke, acquired England, in 1066. It remained a province of England till the reign of king John, 1204, when it was conquered by Philip Augustus and reunited to France. It was re-conquered by Henry V., 1418, and held by England partially till 1450. The English still possess the islands on the coast, of which Jersey and Guernsey are the principal.

On 10 July, 1460, a conflict took place between the duke of York and Henry VI. of England, in which the king was defeated, and made prisoner (the second time) after a sanguinary fight which took place in the meadows below the town. #### NORTH-EAST AND -WEST PASSAGES.

The attempt to discover a north-west passage was made by a Portuguese named Corte Real, about 1500. In 1586, a company was formed in London called the "Fellowship for the discovery of the North-West Passage." From 1743 to 1818 parliament offered 20,000l. for this discovery. In 1818 the reward was modified by proposing that 5000l. should be paid when either 110°, 120°, or 130° W. long. should be passed; one of which payments was made to sir E. Parry. For their labours in the voyages enumerated in the list below, Parry, Franklin, Ross, Back, Richardson, McClure, Narce, and McClintock were knighted.

* Sir John Franklin died 11 June, 1847 (see Franklin); Sir E. Parry died 8 July, 1855, aged 65; and Sir John Ross died 30 Aug. 1856, aged 63.

† In 1830 he discovered Boothia Felix: on 1 June, 1837, his nephew, com. James Clark Ross, discovered the north magnetic pole, in 70° 5' 17" N. lat., and 96° 46' 45" W. long.

‡ Capt. McClure sailed in the Investigator in company with com. Collinson in the Enterprise in search of Sir John Franklin, 30 Jan. 1850. On 6 Sept. he discovered high land, which he named Barrow's land; on the other hand, which he named after prince Albert; on the 20th the ship was frozen in. Expecting a strong conviction that the waters in which the Investigator then lay communicated with Barrow's straits, he set out on 21 Oct., with a few men in his sledge, to test his views. On 26 Oct. he reached Point Russell (73° 31' N. lat., 114° 14' W. long.), where from an elevation of 600 feet he saw Parry or Melville Sound beneath them. The strait connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans he named after the prince of Wales. The Investigator was the first ship which traversed the Polar sea from Behring's straits to Barrow's island. Intelligence of this discovery was brought to England by com. Inglefield, and the Admiralty chart was published 14 Oct. 1855.

Capt. McClure returned to England, Sept. 1855. In 1855, 5000l. were paid to capt. (afterwards sir Robert) McClure, and 5000l. were distributed among the officers and crew. On 30 Jan. 1855, the Admiralty notified that the Arctic medal would be given to all persons engaged in the expeditions from 1818 to 1855.

NORWICH, BISHOPRIC OF, originally East Anglia, the first bishop was Felix, a Burgundian, sent to convert the East Anglians about 630. The see was divided into two distinct bishoprics—Elmham, in Norfolk, and Dunwich, in Suffolk, about 670. Both sees suffered extremely from the Danish invasions, inasmuch that after the death of St. Humbert they lay vacant for a hundred years. At the sec. of Elmham was revived, and Dunwich was united to it, but Anastasius removed the seat to Thetford, where it continued till Herbert Losinga removed it to Norwich 1094. This see has given to the church of Rome two saints, and to the nation six lord chancellors. It was valued in the king's books at 800l 18s 7d per annum. Present income, 4500l, see Bishopric.

NOTABLES, French assemblies of nobles, bishops, knights and laymen. An assembly of the nobles was convened by the duke of Guise 20 Aug 1560, and by other statesmen. Calonne, the minister of Louis XVI., summoned one which met on 22 Feb 1787, on account of the deranged state of the king's finances, and again in 1788, when he opened his plan but as any reform initiated too much against private interest to be adopted, Calonne was dismissed, and soon after retired to England. Louis having lost his confidential minister, De Vignerot, by death, called De Brienne, an ecclesiastic, to his councils. The notables were re-assembled on 6 Nov 1788. In the end, the states-general were convoked 5 Dec., and from this assembly sprang the national assembly (which see). The notables were dismissed by the king, 12 Dec 1788.—The Spanish notables assembled and met Napoleon (conformably with a decree issued by him commanding their attendance), at Bayonne, 25 May, 1808.

NOTABIES PUBLIC, said to have been appointed by the primitive fathers of the Christian church, to collect the acts or memoirs of the lives of the martyrs in the 1st century.—Du Fresnoy. This office was afterwards changed to a legal employment to attest deeds and writings, so as to establish their authenticity in any other country. A statute to regulate public notaries was passed in 1801, and statutes on the subject have been enacted since.

NOTTINGHAM (Saxon, Snotingaham). The castle here was defended by the Danes against King Alfred and his brother Ethelred, who retook it, 868. It was rebuilt by William I. 1068, and ultimately became a strong fortress. See Population.

ODOMETER (from the Greek odos, way, and metron, measure), see Pedometer.

ODONTOLOGY (from the Greek odontos, tooth), the science of the teeth, may be said to have really begun with the researches of professor Richard Owen, who in 1839 made the first definite announcement of the organic connection between the vascular and vital soft parts of the frame and the hard substance of a tooth. His comprehensive work, "Odontology" (illustrated with beautiful plates), was published 1840-45. The Odontological Society was established 1856.

ODRYSEÆ, a people of Thrace. Their king Teres retained his independence of the Persians, 508 B.C. Sitalees, his son, enlarged his dominions, and in 429, aided Amyntas against Perdiccas II. of Macedonia, with an army of 150,000 men. Sitalees, killed in battle with the Triballi, 424, was succeeded by Seuthos, who reigned prosperously; Cotys, another king (382-353), disputed the possession of the Thracian Chersonesus with Athens. After 9 or 10 years' warfare, Philip II. of Macedonia reduced the Odryseæ to tributaries, and founded Philippopolis and other colonies, 343. The Romans, after their conquest of Macedonia, favoured the Odryseæ, and in 42 their king Sadaleas bequeathed his territories to the Romans. The Odryseæ, turbulent subjects, and often chastised, were finally incorporated into the empire by Vespasian, about A.D. 70.

ODYL, the name given in 1845 by Baron von Reichenbach to a so-called new "imponderable, or influence," said to be developed by magnets, crystals, the human body, heat, electricity, chemical action, and the whole material universe. The odyle force is said to give rise to luminous phenomena, visible to certain sensitive persons only. The Baron's "Researches on Magnetism, &c., in relation to the Vital Force," translated by Dr. Gregory, were published in 1850. Emanuel Swedenborg (died 1772) described similar phenomena.

It was the custom of the Jews to anoint with oil persons appointed to high offices, as the priests and kings, Psalm cxxlii. 2; 1 Sam. x. 1; xvi. 13. The fact that oil, if passed through red-hot iron pipes, will be resolved into a combustible gas, was long known to chemists; and after the process of lighting by coal-gas was made apparent, Messrs. Taylor and Martineau contrived apparatus for producing oil-gas on a large scale, 1815.—OIL STRAINING; see Petroleum. OIL PASSES; see under Painting.

The prize contended for was a crown made of a kind of wild olive, appropriated to this use. The festival was abolished by Theodosius, A.D. 394. In 1858 M. The foundation of the new theatre was laid 3 April, 1790, and the house was opened 22 Sept 1791, on an improved plan, a new exterior was erected in 1820, from designs by Mr Nash, revised by Mr Budd, 1821. This theatre was totally destroyed by fire on the night of 6-7 Dec 1867. The loss of the lease, Mr Mapleson, was abt 12,000*l*, and that of Mlle Titina was valued at 2000*l*, rebuilt, but internal arrangements not completed. Moody and Sankey's revival meetings were held here, 18 April, 31 May, 1875. The new house was opened for Italian opera by Mr Mapleson, 28 April, 1877, see Theatre. Ophthalmic hospitals were founded in London, 1804 and 1843. The Ophthalmological Society of Great Britain was founded in 1880 mainly by Mr W. Bowman, the first president. He died 30 March, 1892, having greatly advanced ophthalmic surgery.

OPHTHALMOSCOPE, an apparatus for inspecting the interior of the eye, invented by professor H. Helmholtz, and described by him in 1851.

OPIUM, the juice of the white poppy, was known to the ancients, its cultivation being mentioned by Homer, and its medicinal use by Hippocrates. It is largely cultivated in British India, and was introduced into China by our merchants, which led eventually to the war of 1839, the importation being forbidden by the Chinese government. The revenue derived from opium by the Indian government in 1862 was about 7,850,000*l*, in 1874, 8,000,000*l*, in 1880, about 10,000,000*l*, but it has since declined. Laudanum, a preparation of opium was employed early in the 17th century. A number of alkaloids have been discovered in opium: narcotine by Dorne and morphia by Serturner, in 1803. A society for suppressing the opium trade held meeting in London, 17 Jan 1881, and since.

The Chinese government derives a large revenue from the duty on imported opium which was fixed by the treaty of 1838. The plant is now largely grown in China.

Sir Joseph Pease's resolution condemning the cultivation of opium in India, the traffic in the drug and the revenue was adopted by the house of commons (160-130) 10 April 1891, this caused much excitement in India.

OPORTO (W. Portugal), the ancient Ole, one of the most imprugnable cities in Europe. After being held at various times by the Goths and Moors, Oporto was finally acquired by the Christians 1092. Oporto is the mart of Portuguese wine known as "Port." A chartered company for the regulation of the port-wine trade was established in 1756. The French, under marshal Soult, were surprised here by lord Wellington, and defeated in an action fought 12 May, 1809. The Miguelites besieged Oporto and were repulsed by the Pedroteas, with considerable loss, 19 Sept 1832. The Oporto wine company was abolished in 1834, but re-established by a royal decree, 7 April, 1838. An international exhibition was opened here by the king, 18 Sept. 1865. Population, 1878, 105,838, see Portugal. The Baguet theatre burnt, panic, about 200 lives lost; so March 1888.

Business paralysed by the strike of masters and men concerned with the wine trade, through the government favouring speculators for a monopolising company, riots quelled by the military about 30 May, at end 1889.

OPTIC NERVES are said to have been discovered by N. Varoli, a surgeon and physician of Bologna, about 1538.—News. Diet.

OPTIMISM (from optimus, the best), the doctrine that everything which happens is for the best, in opposition to Pessimism (from pejus, the worst). The germ of optimism is to be found in Plato, and in St. Augustin, and other fathers; and has been especially propounded by Malebranche and Leibnitz, and adopted by Pöpe, Bolingbroke, Rousseau, and others. Optimism as expressed in the term, "the best of all possible worlds," is ridiculed by Voltaire (1694-1778) in his "Candide." The term meliorism (from melior, better) has been lately introduced. See Pessimism.

"OPTION," a term given at the time to the permission given to the inhabitants of Alsace and Lorraine by the German government to choose, before 30 Sept. 1872, whether they would quit their country or become German subjects. Great numbers emigrated into the French territories. The "option" of archbishops respecting their claims on a benefice becoming void on the creation or translation of a bishop, was abolished in 1845.

ORACLES, a term applied to revelations made by God to man. They were given to the Jews at the Mercy-seat in the tabernacle; see Exod. xxv. 18-22. The Holy Scriptures are the Christian "oracles," Rom. iii. 2; 1 Pet. iv. 11. King Ahaziah sent to consult the oracle of Baalzebub at Ekron about 856 B.C. The Greeks consulted especially the oracles of Jupiter and Apollo (see Dodona and Delphi); and the Italians those of Faunus, Fortune, and Mars.

ORAN, Algeria (N. Africa), a Moorish city several times captured by the Spaniards; definitively occupied by the French in 1831, who have since added docks, &c.

ORANGE, a principality in S.E. France, formerly a lordship in the 9th or 10th century. It has been ruled by four houses successively: that of Giraud Adhemar (to 1174); of Baux (1182 to 1393); of Chalon (to 1530); and of Nassau (1530 to 1713); see Nassau. Philibert the Great, prince of Orange, the last of the house of Chalon, having been wronged by Francis I. of France, entered the service of the emperor Charles V., to whom he rendered great services by his military talents. He was killed at the siege of Florence, 3 Aug. 1530. He was succeeded by his nephew-in-law, René of Nassau; see princes of Orange under Holland. The eldest son of the king of Holland is styled the prince of Orange, although the principality was ceded to France in 1713. See Araucan.

ORANGE FREE STATE, a republic in South Africa, founded by Boers from Cape Colony in 1836. The British government proclaimed its authority over this territory, on 3 Feb. 1848, but declared it independent, 23 Feb. 1854. A constitution proclaimed, 10 April, 1854; revised, 1866, and 1870. The able president, sir John Henry Brand, first elected, 1863, died, 14 July, 1888. President Reitz elected, 11 Jan. 1889. Defensive treaty with the Transvaal, about 13 March, ratified 25 May, 1890. Concession granted to the Cape Government to construct a railway to Bloemfontein, the capital, May, 1889; railway opened at Bloemfontein, 17 Dec. 1890. Population, 1885, 133,378.

ORANGEMEN. The "Battle of the Diamond," 21 Sept 1795 (see Diamond), and the treachery experienced by the Protestants on that occasion, convinced them they would become an easy prey to the Roman Catholics, from their small numbers, unless they associated for their defence, and consequently the Orange Society was formed in 1795. The first Orange lodge was formed in Armagh, but the name of Orangemen already existed. An Orange lodge was formed in Dublin, the members published a declaration of their principles (the maintenance of church and state under the house of Brunswick) in Jan 1798. After 1813 Orangemen declined, but revived again in 1827, when the duke of Cumberland became grand-master, and it is stated that in 1836 there were 145,000 Orangemen in England, and 125,000 in Ireland. After a parliamentary inquiry Orange clubs were broken up in conformity with resolutions of the house of commons, but were revived in 1845—1849. In Oct 1857, the lord chancellor of Ireland ordered that justices of the peace should not belong to Orange clubs. The Orangemen in Canada were greatly excited during the visit of the prince of Wales in Sept 1860. Mr Wm Johnston, a grand master, convicted of violating the Party Processions Act, was elected M P for Belfast, Nov 1869. See Belfast

ORANGE. The sweet, or China orange, was first brought into Europe from China by the Portuguese, in 1547, and it is asserted that the identical tree, whence all the European orange-trees of this sort were produced, is still preserved at Lisbon, in the gardens of one of its nobility. Orange-trees were first brought to England, and planted, with little success, in 1595; they are said to have been planted at Riddington park, near Croxdon, Surrey. The duty on imported oranges was repealed in 1860.

ORATOR HENLEY. An eccentric English gentleman of some talents, in 1726 opened his "oratory," a kind of chapel in Newport-market, where he gave lectures on theological topics on Sundays, and on other subjects on Wednesdays, every week. Novelty procured him many hearers, but he was too imprudent to gain any permanent advantage. He removed his oratory to Clie-market, and sank into obscurity previously to his death, in 1756.

ORATORIANs (from the Latin orare, to pray), a regular order of priests established by St Philip Neri, about 1564, and so called from the oratory of St Jerome, at Rome, where they prayed. They had a foundation in France, commenced by Guillaume Gibeau and Pierre de Berville (afterwards cardinal), 1612, approved by pope Paul V 1613. The rev Frederick Faber and others, as "Lithers of the Oratory," established themselves first in King William-street, Strand, in 1838, and afterwards at Brompton.

ORATORIO, a kind of musical sacred drama, the subject of it being generally taken from the Scriptures. The origin of our oratorios (so named from having been first performed in an oratory), is ascribed to St Philip Neri, about 1550. The first true oratorio, Emilio del Cavallere's "Rappresentazione," was performed at Rome in 1600. He was followed by Giovanni Carissimi, Alessandro Scarlatti, &c. The first oratorio in London was performed in Lincoln's-inn theatre in Portugal-street, in 1712. Handel's oratorio of "Israel in Egypt" was produced in 1738, and the "Messiah" in 1741. Haydn's "Creation" in 1798, Beethoven's "Mount of Olives," 1803, Spohr's "Last Judgment" (pro-

ORCHIDS a natural order of plants of a very peculiar organization, recently much cultivated. In 1880, a great establishment for their cultivation was set up at St Albans by Mr Bander, "the orchid king," patronised by the Rothschilds who introduced him to the queen at Waddesdon Manor, 14 May, 1890.

ORCHOMENUS, a small Greek state in Boeotia, was destroyed by the Thebans, 367 B.C., restored by Philip II of Macedon, 354, and given up by him to Thebes, 346.

ORDEAL was known among the Greeks and Jews (Num v 2). It was introduced into England by the Saxons. A prisoner who pleaded not guilty might choose whether he would put himself for trial upon God and his country, by twelve men, as at this day, or upon God only. The trial by ordeal was abolished in 1218.

ORDER OF THE CORPORATE RE-UNION, virtually a new episcopal church, said to arise out of the Christian Unity Association (which see). It proposed to form four stations, (Lancaster, York, Caneleon, and St Andrews,) with rectors and provincials, announced 11 Sept 1877.

ORDERS, see Knighthood

ORDERS IN COUNCIL were issued by the British government 7 Jan and 11 Nov 1807, prohibiting trade with the ports occupied by the French, being reprisals for Napoleon's Berlin decrees (which see). They greatly checked the progress of manufactures in this country, and caused much distress till their removal in 1814.

ORDINANCES, see Ordinances, Self-Denying Ordinances

ORDINATION of ministers in the Christian church began with Christ and his apostles, see Mat 28 in 14, and Acts vi and xiv 23. In England in 1549 a new form of ordination of ministers was ordered to be prepared by a committee of six prelates and six divines.

ORDNANCE OFFICE. Before the invention of guns, this office was supplied by officers under the following names: the bowyer, the cross-bowyer, the pike-maker, or purveyor of helmets, the armourer, and the keeper of the tents. Henry VIII placed it under the management of a master general, a lieutenant, surveyor, &c. The master-general was chosen from among the first generals in the service of the sovereign. The appointment was for merit, for life, but since the restoration, was held durante bene placito, and not unfrequently by a cabinet minister—Beaton. The letters patent for this office were revoked 25 May, 1855, and its duties vested in the minister of war, lord Panmure. The last master-general was lord Fitzroy-Somers, afterwards lord Raglan. The revival of the office recommended by the Ordinance Commission (see under Army, 1886).

ORDNANCE SURVEY. The trigonometrical survey of England was commenced by gen Roy, in 1784, continued by col Colby, and completed by col (aft. sir Henry) James in 1856. The publication of the maps (scale 7 inches to a mile), commenced in 1819, under the direction of col. Mudge, and was completed in 1862; a large part of these maps have been coloured geologically. The survey of Ireland (6 inches to a mile) has been completed and published; that of Scotland, completed Nov. 1832. By the survey act, passed 12 May, 1870, the ordnance survey was transferred to the Board of Works, and by an act passed in 1880, to the Board of Agriculture, beginning 1 April, 1880. Directors, Lieut.-gen. John Cameron, succeeded Sir Henry James in 1875, died 30 June, 1878; col. A. C. Cooke; col. R. H. Stothard, 1885. In 1802, several sets of maps were in course of publication or preparation.

ORDONNANCES, the laws enacted by the Capetian kings of France previous to 1789. They began with "in the name of the king," and ended with "such is our good pleasure." The first in French is dated 1287 (Philip IV.) The publication of these "ordonnances," ordered by Louis XIV., 1706, is still in progress. The "ordonnances" of Charles X., promulgated 26 July, 1830, led to the revolution.

OREGON TERRITORY (N. America), is said to have been visited by Drake in 1579. Lieut. Broughton took possession of part of it for Great Britain in 1792. In 1810 a settlement named Astoria, was founded by a New York Company. Oregon was occupied by the English in 1814, but was claimed by the United States government, to whom the greater part was ceded, after much negotiation, by the treaty of 12 June, 1846. Oregon was made a territory in 1848, and admitted as a state, Feb. 1859. Capital, Salem. Population, 1880, 174,768; 1890, 313,767.

ORGAN, a development of the pandean pipes; the "organ" in Gen. iv. 21 should be translated pipe. The invention is attributed to Ctesibius, a barber of Alexandria, about 250 B.C.; and to Archimedes, about 220 B.C. The organ was brought to Europe from the Greek empire, and was applied to religious devotions in churches, about A.D. 657.—Bellarmino. Organs were used in the western churches by pope Vitalianus, in 658.—Ammonius. It is affirmed that the organ was known in France in the time of Louis I., 815, when one was constructed by an Italian priest. The organ at Haarlem is one of the largest in Europe; it has 60 stops and 8000 pipes. At Seville is one with 110 stops and 5300 pipes. The organ at Amsterdam has a set of pipes that imitate a chorus of human voices. Of the organs in England that at St. George's Hall, Liverpool, by Mr. Willis, was the largest; next in order that at York minster, and that in the music-hall, Birmingham. In London, the largest was, perhaps that of Spitalfields church; and that in Christ Church was nearly as extensive. The erection of the famous Temple organ was completed for by Schmidt and Harris; after long disputes, the question was referred to vote, and Mr. Jefferies, afterwards chief justice, gave the casting vote in favour of Schmidt (called Father Smith), about 1664. A monster organ was erected in the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, in June, 1857. The organ, by Willis, at the Royal Albert Hall, is now said to be the largest in the world; 1871. A larger proposed for a cathedral in Long Island, North America, 1880. A noble organ (by Bryceson), with many appliances, opened in the hall, Friar-chill-road, LONDON, N. Jan. 1876.

Barrel organs are said to have been first made early in the 18th century. The finest was the Apollonicon (which see).

ORGANIC SYNTHESIS, see Chemistry.

The second Congress met at the Royal Institution, in London, 14-19 Sept. 1874. Dr S. Birch, president. The third Congress met at St. Petersburg, 1 Sept. 1876; the fourth at Florence, Sept. 1878. ORIFLAMME, see Auriflamme.

ORIGENISTS pretended to draw their opinions from the writings of Origen, who lived 185-253. They maintained that Christ was the son of God in no other way than by adoption and grace; that souls were created before the bodies; that the sun, moon, stars, and the waters that are under the firmament, have souls; that the torments of the damned shall have an end, and that the fallen angels shall, after a time, be restored to their first condition. They were condemned by councils, and the reading of Origen's work was forbidden.—Burke. These doctrines were condemned by the council of Constantinople in 553.

ORLEANS (a city in central France), formerly Aurelianensis; gave title to a kingdom, 491, and afterwards to a duchy, usually held by one of the royal family. Attila the Hun, besieging it, was defeated by Aetius and his allies, 451. It was besieged by the English under earl of Salisbury and Suffolk, 12 Oct. 1428, bravely defended by Gaucour (as its fall would have ruined the cause of Charles VI. king of France), and relieved by the heroism of Joan of Arc, afterwards surnamed the Maid of Orleans, 29 April, 1429, and the siege was raised 8 May; see Joan of Arc. (The 430th anniversary was celebrated 10 May, 1888; the emperor and empress being present.) During the siege of Orleans, Feb. 1563, the duke of Guise was assassinated.

At the court of Byzantium the office of inspector of orphans, orphanothropos, was so honourable that it was held by the brother of the emperor Michael IV. in the 11th century; see Foundling Hospitals.

The planetarium, now termed the Orrery, it is said, was constructed by Rowley, after a pattern devised by the clock-maker, George Graham, at the expense of Charles Boyle, earl of Orrery, about 1715. A large "planetarium" was constructed by the rev. Wm. Pearson, for the Royal Institution, London, about 1803. An excellent planetarium, constructed in London by signor N. Perini, was exhibited in Dec. 1873.

On the death of Charles II. of Spain, the French seized Ostend; but in 1706, after the battle of Ramillies, it was retaken by the allies. It was again taken by the French in 1792, but restored in 1798. In 1795, the French purchased this town for the empress-queen Maria Theresa. Upon a scrutiny, he whose name was oftener written was sentenced by the council to be banished from his altar and hearth. 6000 votes were required. Aristides, noted for his justice, and Miltiades, for his victories, were thus ostracized. The custom was abolished by ironically proscribing Hyperbolus, a mean person, about 338 B.C.

Omai, a native of this island, was brought to England by Cook, and carried back in his last voyage. In 1799, king Pomare ceded the district of Matavai to some English missionaries. Queen Pomare was compelled to put herself under the protection of France, 9 Sept. 1843. She retracted, and Otaheite and the neighbouring islands were taken possession of by admiral Dupetit-Thouars in the name of the French king, Nov. 1843. OWHYHEE or HAWAII, an island in the N. Pacific Ocean, discovered Dec. 1778, by capt. Cook. On 14 Feb. 1779, he here fell a victim to a sudden resentment of the natives. The people would not submit to this insult, and their resistance brought on hostilities, and captain Cook and some of his companions were killed. Great progress has been recently made in civilisation here; and an order of nobility and a representative assembly were instituted in 1860. The population then was about 120,000; about 60,000 in 1878; a railway opened in 1878. See Sandwich Isles and Leprosy.

Edward Oxford, a youth who had been a servant in a public-house, discharged two pistols at queen Victoria and prince Albert, as they were proceeding up Constitution hill in an open phaeton from Donnington palace, 20 June, 1842. He stood within a few yards of the carriage, but neither her majesty nor the prince was injured. Oxford was tried at the Old Bailey (10 July), and was adjudged to be insane, and sent first to Bethlehem hospital, next to Broadmoor, and set at liberty in 1863, on condition of going abroad

OXUS (the Persian and Turkish Dikhoun, local name, Amou Darya), a river of Central Asia, supposed to have changed its course before 1000 A.D., and to have resumed its ancient bed in 1878

OXYGEN, a gas (named from the Greek oxys, sharp, is being generally found in acids), is the most abundant of all substances, constituting about one-third of the solid earth, and forming about nine-tenths of water and one-fifth of the atmosphere. It was first separated from red oxide of mercury by Priestley, 1 Aug 1774, and by Scheele, who was ignorant of Priestley's discovery, in 1775. It is a supporter of animal life (in respiration), and of combustion. An oxygen gas company was announced in Dec 1864, its object being the cheap manufacture of oxygen for its application to the production of perfect combustion in lamps, stoves, furnaces, &c. Oxygen was liquefied by Emile Piaget at Geneva, (pressure, 320 atmospheres, temp 140 below zero cent) 22 Dec. 1877. See O one.

Priestley or Dewar obtained 3 cubic centimetres (1/4 of a fluid oz) of liquid oxygen by means of liquid ethylene (the illuminating part of coal gas) temp 140 below zero Cent (by Wroblewski and Olszewski a method) at the Royal Institution, London, in the presence of the prince and princess of Wales 26 June, 1884. The exhibit for the first time some solid oxygen in the form of snow (temperature -200 Cent -400 Fahr) produced by placing liquid oxygen in a partial vacuum at the Royal Institution 27 May 1886

Professor Dewar exhibited between 300 to 400 cubic centimetres liquid oxygen at the Faraday Centenary, 26 June 1887. The feeble magnetism of oxygen demonstrated by Faraday, was shown by Professor Dewar to be greatly increased when reduced to the liquid state by a temperature of 280° below zero centigrade announced 20 Dec 1887. Some liquid oxygen placed in the magnet field 1/2 inch to the poles and adhered to them till evaporated, this was publicly exhibited by the professor at the Royal Institution 20 June, 1887. Several parts of liquid oxygen and liquid air were then produced in the presence of the audience

A statue of Priestley by F J Williamson, at Birmingham, was unveiled by professor T. H. Huxley, 2 Aug 1874, the centenary of the discovery of oxygen. This was also celebrated at Northumberland Pennsylvania where he was buried Feb 1864. The following tale, run was sent 31 July. The brethren at the grave to the brethren at the home of Priestley send greetings on this centennial anniversary of the birth of chemistry

A method of obtaining oxygen from air, devised and patented by M. Margus of Paris. The principle is that of dialysis, or diffusion under pressure, Sept 1885. See Chemical

OYER and TERMINER, a commission directed to the judges of the courts, by virtue whereof they have power to hear and determine treasons, felonies, &c., 1285

O YES! A corruption of the French Oyez, oyez! The ancient cry still used by a public orator and by the usher of courts of justice to attract silence and attention OYSTER (the Latin Ostrea edulis) British oysters are celebrated by the Roman satirist Juvenal (Sat iv 140) about 100. The robbery of oyster-lads is prohibited by 7 & 8 Geo IV c 29 (1827). About 15,000 bushels of oysters were said to be produced from the Essex beds alone. In 1858 M. Coate commenced rearing oysters in great numbers on the coast of Brittany, and his plan has been found successful.

An act for promoting the cultivation of oysters in the United Kingdom passed Aug 1876
Oie for the preservation of oyster fisheries 9 May 1867
Certain restrictions of the Oyster Fisheries act, 1865, removed by the Fisheries act, 1868

The fisheries (oyster, crab and lobster) act forbids the sale of dead oysters between 15 June and 4 August, and the sale of others between 14 May and 4 August, passed 10 Aug 1877
Professor Huxley at the Royal Institution asserts the uselessness of restrictions and a close time for oysters and the present uncertainty of culture 22 May 1883

Artificial breeding greatly promoted by professor Brooks of Belinair (who discovered non-hereditary white) lieutenant W. S., and M. Botcher Brandy announced 1884
Act for the cultivation of oysters in Ireland passed 1884
Oysters, about 130 the commonest of food, are now becoming scarcer and scarcer, although their reproduction is about a million fold. A committee recommended a "close time for dredging, viz., 1 May to 1 Sept, deep was found to be valuable, as at present, from 15 June to 15 Aug., as a guide to be sold under 25 Spohns in diameter. The Whitehall beer in 1873 was sold to have produced about 33,324,000 cysters; value about 54,000.

American and Portuguese cysters are now largely imported.

Cysters successfully cultivated at Arrachon, near Bordeaux, 1869.

OZOKERTI, a mineral hydro-carbon found in Moldavia and Wallachia. From it is distilled a substance suitable for making candles, introduced in the autumn of 1871.

OZONE (from the Greek oza, to yield an odour), was discovered by Schonbein, of Basel, in 1840, when experimenting with the then newly-invented battery of Sir Wm Grove, and was recognised by him successively as a minute constituent of the oxygen gas resulting from the electrolysis of water effected by a current of high tension; of air or oxygen through which electric discharges have taken place; and of air in which moist phosphorus has been undergoing slow oxidation.

Schönbein demonstrated the action of ozone on various substances to be due to their oxidation . . . 1840

Quantities constructed . . . 1840

M. Robinet announced his discovery of another modification of oxygen, which he termed ozone, hitherto found only in the compound state (in peroxide of sodium, potassium, &c.) . . . 1849

The French Academy of Sciences appointed a committee of eminent philosophers to inquire into the nature and relations of ozone . . . 4 Dec. 1865

Andrews and Tait demonstrated ozone to be a condensed form of oxygen . . . 1860, "

This further established by Soret and Brodie, by quantitative reactions. (Odling suggested and Brodie proved ozone to be 3 parts of oxygen compressed into the space of 2) . . . 1872

Ozone, generated by a current produced by Wilde's magneto-electric machine, employed to bleach sugar, by Edward Beane's patent . . . Aug. 1868

Launched by Hantemilk and Chappuis . . . Oct. 1880

Other properties since discovered . . . 1881-4

The inhalation of ozone recommended as a remedy for phthisis; the institution at St. Raphael on the Mediterranean opened for the purpose; reported Dec. 1891

PACIFICATION.

PACIFICATION, EDICTS OF, the name usually given to the edicts of toleration granted by the French kings to the protestants; see Ghent.

First edict, by Charles IX., permitting the exercise of the reformed religion near all the cities and towns in the realm. Jan 1562

The reformed worship permitted in the houses of lords justices, and certain other persons, March, 1563

These edicts revoked, and all Protestant ministers ordered to quit France in fifteen days. 1568

[In Aug. 1572, the same monarch authorised the massacre of St Bartholomew (see Bartholomew)]

Edict of Pacification by Henry III., April, 1577. revoked Dec. 1578, renewed for six years Oct 1577

[Several edicts were published against the protestants after the six years expired.]

PACIFIC RAILWAY, North America, from Omaha city, Missouri, to Sacramento, California, 1700 miles, opened 12 May, 1869. By a collision near San Francisco, about 15 persons were killed, 14 Nov. 1869. For new Pacific railway see Canada, 1881, et seq. By means of this railway, the China and Japan mails were conveyed from Yokohama to London in 25 days; received 13 May, 1891.

PADLOCKS are said to have been invented by Beecher at Nuremberg, 1540, but are mentioned much earlier.

PADUA, the Roman Patavium, in Venetia, N. Italy, said to have been founded by Antenor, soon after the fall of Troy. It flourished under the Romans. Patavian Latin was considered very corrupt, and is troced in Livy, a native of Padua. After being an independent republic, and a member of the Lombard league, Padua was ruled by the Carrara family from 1318 with a short interruption till 1405, when it was seized by the Venetians. The university was founded about 1220. It was closed through disturbances, 1848-50.

PAGANS, the heathen, worshippers of idols, not agreeing in any set form or points of belief. See Idols. Constantine's nephew, Julian, attempted their restoration, 361; but Paganism was renounced by the Roman senate in 383, and finally overthrown in the reign of Theodosius the younger, about 391.

PAISLEY, a borough, W. Scotland, the Roman Vanduara, and grew out of the priory of Paisley, founded 1160-4 by Walter Steuart, made an abbey about 1220; burnt by the English 1307, rebuilt 15th century. Made a burgh of barony 1488 and a Parliamentary borough 1832. Since 1805 Paisley silk and cotton shawls have been celebrated. Visited by the Queen, 23 Aug. 1888. See Population.

PALACE COURT, see Marshalsea, and Green Cloth.

PALÆOGRAPHY, ancient writing; see Diplomatic, Writing.

PALÆOLOG, a family which reigned as emperors of the east from 1260 to 1453. George Palæologus raised Alexius Comnenus to the throne in 1081, and thereby founded his own family. Andrew, the last Palæologus, son of Thomas, ruler of the Morea, after the overthrow of his father, became a Mahometan at Constantinople about 1533. A person who called himself John Anthony Palaeologus Lascaris died at Turin, Sept. 1874. His claims were doubted.

PALEONTOLOGY (from the Greek palaio, ancient, and onta, beings), treats of the evidences of organic beings in the earth's strata. It combines biology and geology (which see). Cuvier, Mantell, Agassiz, Owen, Edward Forbes, and Blaisville, all of the present century, may be reckoned as fathers of this science. The Palaeontographical society, which publishes elaborate monographs of British organic remains, was founded in 1847. The journal "Palaeontographica" (German) began 1851. Professor Owen's "Palaeontology" was published in 1860. "Nearly 40,000 species of animals and plants have been added to the Systema Naturae by palaeontological research." Huxley. See Man.

PALÆOPOLIS, see Naples.

PALAIS ROYAL, Paris, originally Palais Cardinal, built for cardinal Richelieu by Lemercier, 1620-35, received its present name when occupied by Louis XIII., to whom the cardinal gave it shortly before his death in 1642. Louis XIV., in 1692, gave it to his nephew Philippe, duke of Orleans, and it became the residence of his successors. It was confiscated by the republic in 1793, after the execution of Philippe Egalité. Louis Philippe resided in it, 1814-31. It suffered much injury at the revolution in 1848. Under the second empire it became the residence of prince Jerome and his son Napoleon. The buildings were much injured by fire by the communists, 24 May, 1871.

PALATINATE OF THE RHINE, one of the seven ancient electorates of Germany. It was long united to Bavaria, but was separated in 1294.—Frederic V., the elector palatine in 1610, married in 1613 Elizabeth, the daughter of James I. of England, and thus was an ancestor of queen Victoria; see Hanover. In 1619 he was elected king of Bohemia, but lost all by his defeat by the Austrians at Prague in 1620. The Palatinate was horribly ravaged by Tilly in 1622, and by the French in 1688. Several thousands of the ruined peasantry were sent to America by the British government and people. The elector palatine, Charles Theodore, inherited Bavaria in 1778; since when the two electorates have been united; see Bavaria.

PALATINE. William the conqueror made his nephew, Hugh De Abrincis, count palatine of Chester with the title of earl, about 1070. Edward III. created the palatine of Lancaster, 1539; see Lancaster, duchy of. The bishopric of Durham also made county palatine. There is also mention made of the county palatine of Hexham, in 33 Henry VIII. c. 10, which then belonged to the archbishop of York, but by the 14th of Elizabeth it was dissolved, and made part of the county of Northumberland. The palatine jurisdiction of Durham was separated from the diocese, and vested in the crown, 6 Will. IV. c. 19, 21 June, 1836.

PALE, the name given to the part of Ireland colonised by the English—viz., parts of the counties of Louth, Dublin, Meath, and Kildare. Anglo-Irish rulers were termed lords of the pale. Their arbitrary exactions led to a royal commission of inquiry in 1537. The defection of the lords of the pale in 1641 was followed by a general insurrection, and the royal cause was ruined in 1647. In 1652 Ireland was committed to the rule of four commissioners.

PALERMO (N. W. Sicily), the ancient Panormus. It has been held by the Carthaginians, 415 B.C.; taken by the Romans, 254 B.C.; by the Saracens, A.D. 832; and by the Normans, 1072. Here Roger II. was crowned king of Sicily, 1130. Palermo was the scene of the Sicilian Vespers (which see), 30 March, 1282. It suffered from earthquake in 1726 and 1740. The king Ferdinand resided at Palermo from 1806 to 1815, while Naples was ruled by Joseph Bonaparte and Joachim Murat. It revolted against the tyranny of Ferdinand II. 12 Jan. 1848. It was attacked by general Filangieri, 29 March, 1849, and surrendered on 14 May. It was taken by Garibaldi, 6 June, 1860. An insurrection against the abolition of the monastic establishments broke out in Palermo on 13 Sept. 1866, and was suppressed by the royal troops with much bloodshed; order was restored by 22 Sept. Population, 1890, 267,416.

PALESTINE, the name given by Moses (Exodus xv. 14) and other ancient writers, to a broad strip of land on the east-coast of the Mediterranean Sea, which originally included Philistia, but was afterwards limited to the part termed the land of Canaan or Israel, Judea, and the Holy Land; see Jews. After being several times conquered by the Saracens, and retaken from the 7th to the 10th century, and after being the scene of the wars of the Crusades (which see), and other conflicts, Palestine was united to the Ottoman empire by Selim I. in 1516. See Bible (note), Holy Places, and Syria.

It had been covered by a treatise of Lactantius.

PALL, PALLIUM, in the Roman Church an ensign of dignity conferred by the pope upon archbishops. By a decretal of pope Gregory XI. (about 1370), no archbishop could call a council, bless the chrism, consecrate churches, ordain a clerk, or consecrate a bishop, till he had received his pall from the see of Rome. The pall was first worn by an Irish archbishop in 1152, when Galatius was recognized as primate of all Ireland.

PALLADIUM, the statue of Pallas, said to have fallen from heaven near the tent of Ulysses, as he was building Ithaca, which the oracle of Apollo declared should never be taken so long as the Palladium was found within its walls. The Greeks are said to have obtained it by craft during the Trojan war, 1184 B.C.; but some writers assert, another statue was taken, and that the real Palladium was conveyed from Troy to Italy by Æneas, 1183 B.C., and preserved by the Romans with the greatest secrecy in the temple of Vesta.—PALLADIUM is a rare metal, discovered in platinum ore by Dr. Wollaston, in 1803.

PALLAS, the planet, was discovered by Olbers, at Bremen, 28 March, 1802.

PALL MALL, a street near St James's palace, London, is named from a French game at ball (palle-mall, being a wooden mallet), resembling the modern croquet, having been played there about 1600, and introduced into England about 1660. Among eminent inhabitants were Lord Gwyn and Dr. Thomas Sydenham. The PALL MALL GAZETTE, a daily independent political and literary journal, first appeared 7 Feb. 1865, and was edited by Mr. Frederick Greenwood till 1 May, 1880, when it became a liberal paper, edited by Mr. John Morley, who retired 25 Aug. 1885. PALM-SUNDAY. When Christ made his entry into Jerusalem, multitudes of the people who were come to the feast of the Passover, took branches of the palm-tree, and went forth to meet him, 33. It is usual, in some countries, to carry palms on the Sunday before Easter, hence called Palm-Sunday.

PALMYRA (Syria) was supposed to have been the Tadmor in the wilderness built by Solomon, but was manifestly Grecian. The brilliant part of the history of Palmyra was under Odenatus and his queen Zenobia. At the death of Odenatus, Zenobia assumed the title of queen of the East, in 267 Aurelian defeated her at Emesa, in 272, and made her captive, 273, and killed Longinus, the philosopher, her friend. Palmyra is now inhabited by a few Arab families. The ruins were visited in 1751, by Mr. Wood, who published an account of them in 1753.

PAMPHLETS. Their first appearance amongst us is generally thought to have been in opposition to the church of Rome. Those who were first convinced of the reasonableness of the "new learning," as it was then called, propagated their opinions in small pieces, cheaply printed, and (what was then of great importance) orally concealed. Political pamphlets began in Edward VI.'s time, and were very numerous in the 17th and 18th centuries (by De Foe, Swift, Steele, and others).

Paul Louis Courier wrote simple discourses and other pamphlets against the priests and nobles after the restoration of the Bourbons, 1815. His "Pamphlet des Pamphlets," defending the pamphlets (first published, 1824), probably led to his murder, 20 April, 1825. Large collections are in the libraries of the British Museum and the Royal and London Institutions. Certain enactments respecting pamphlets removed by an act passed July, 1869.

PANAMA, the isthmus which joins the two Americas, see Darien. Amongst this a ship canal was proposed by the Bulwer-Clayton treaty, 19 April, 1850. A treaty for the construction of a ship canal through the isthmus by the United States was signed by representatives of that government and that of Colombia 26 Jan. 1870. A railway was opened in 1855. In that year a new state, New Granada, was divided into eight federal states, one of which is named PANAMA. A revolution took place in Panama, on 9 March, 1865, the government was deposed, and don Jil Colón became president, succeeded by Vincent Ularte, 1 Oct. 1866. The earliest known specimens of papyrus were found in the tombs attributed to the third dynasty, 2686 B.C. Many papyri were discovered at Hierakonpolis in 1754; and many were collected by the French in Egypt, 1798. A manuscript of the Antiquities of Josephus on papyrus, among the treasures seized by Bonaparte in Italy, and sent to the National Library at Paris, was restored in 1815. One of the largest known papyrus, found in 1835, behind Medinet Habu on the Nile, and now in the British Museum, were published with translations by the trustees in 1876.

It was procured from mineral oil by Mr. James Young about 1845 at Alfreton in Derbyshire. Soon after it was largely obtained from Boghead coal. It is also obtained from Irish peat. It makes excellent candles. Much litigation ensued through interference with Mr. Young's patent-right.

Paraguay rose against the Spanish yoke in 1811. In 1814, Dr. José G. R. Francia was elected dictator, he ruled vigorously but tyrannically; he was succeeded on his death in 1840 by Vidal. From 1844 to 1844 the country was rigidly closed against foreigners. The president, C. A. Lopez, elected in 1844, was succeeded by his son, Francis S. Lopez, Sept. 1862 (see Indies). PARC AUX CERFS, a deer-park at Versailles, near Paris, made by Louis XII., and kept as such till 1694, when Louis XIV. took the land for building. The name was given to a house erected on it by madame Pompadour, popularly said to form a seraglio for Louis XV in 1755. It was closed by madame Du Barry in 1771.

PARCEL POST (advised by Rowland Hill in 1842). Proposed in Parliament by Mr. H. Fawcett, 27 March; act passed, 18 Aug. 1863; came into operation 1 Aug. 1863. Rates, from 1lb. 3s. to 7lb. 1s.

PARCHMENT. Invented for writing books by Eumenes (some say by Attalus), of Pergamus, the founder of the celebrated library at Pergamus, formed on the model of the Alexandrian, about 190 B.C. Parchment-books from this time became those most used, and the most valuable as well as oldest in the world are written on the skins of goats. It should be mentioned that the Persians and others are said to have written all their records on skins long before Eumenes' time.

Parchment paper (for vegetable parchment) was invented and patented in 1837, by Mr W. E. Gaisie, C.E., who discovered, that when paper is exposed to a mixture of two parts of concentrated sulphuric acid and one part of water for no longer time than is required to draw it through the fluid, it is immediately converted into a strong tough skin-like material. It must be instantly washed with water. Its great strength points out many applications of this material, e.g., maps, school and account-books, and drawing-paper. In 1849 it appeared that a similar invention had been made in Paris by Figulier and Fommande in 1846.

PARDONS. General pardons were proclaimed at coronations: first by Edward III. in 1327. The king's power of pardoning is said to be derived a lege sua dignitate; and no other person has power to remit treason or felony, stat. 27 Hen. VIII. 1535. Discretions. A pardon cannot follow an impeachment of the house of commons: stat. Will. III. 1700.

PARIS, a city in European Turkey, retained its state independence under the protection of Venice till 1797, when that state was conquered by the French. It resisted various attempts to capture it; and in 1806 was garrisoned by Russians. It was given up to the French in 1807, taken by the English, 22 March, 1814, surrendered to the Turks, 1817, and abandoned by above 3000 of its inhabitants, who retired to the Ionian Isles, May, 1819.

PARIS (formerly Lutetia Parisiorum), the capital of France, situated on the river Seine, which cuts it into two unequal parts, the strongest being towards the north, and in which are three isles, la cille (the city), la St Louis, and the Louviers. In the time of Julius Caesar, Lutetia comprised the city only. It was greatly improved by the emperor Julian, who made it his residence while he governed Gaul, 355 to 361. It became successively the capital of the kingdoms of Paris, Soissons, and Neustria, and eventually of all the kingdom. Many ecclesiastical councils were held at Paris, 360, 1528. The representative of the house of Orleans is styled count of Paris. Population of Paris in 1856, 1,278,362, in 1872, estimated population, 1,851,792, in 1876, 1,938,806, in 1881, 2,269,023, in 1891, 2,423,946, see France.

are said to have been fixed by Honorius, archbishop of Canterbury, 636, or by Alfred about 890. They were enlarged, and the number of parishes was consequently reduced in the 15th century, when there were 10,000 Parial registers were commenced in 1538. Acts were passed in 1844 and 1856 by which new parishes may be formed out of too extensive ones; acts amended in 1869. The appointment of parish constables was made unnecessary by an act passed Aug. 1872. See Regis- ters, and Benefices.

PARISIENNE. I.A. popular song by Casimir Delavigne, celebrating the defeat of the troops of Charles X by the Parisians, 1 Aug. 1830; the music (an old air) was arranged by Auber.

PARKES MUSEUM, see Sanitation.

PARKESINE. A new substance, composed of gun-cotton, obtained from various vegetable bodies, and oil. It can be formed with the properties of ivory, tortoise-shell, wood, india-rubber, gutta-percha, &c. It is the invention of Mr. Alexander Parkes, of Birmingham, and was shown by him at the Exhibition in 1862. In Dec. 1865, at the Society of Arts, parkesine was proved to be an excellent electric insulator, and therefore likely to be suitable for telegraphic purposes.

PARK LANE MURDER, see Tricks, 1872.

PARKS. The Romans attached parks to their villas. Fulvia Lupinus, Pompey, and Hortensius, among others, had large parks. In England, the first great park of which particular mention is made was that of Woodstock, formed by Henry I., 1185.

Queen Caroline, consort of George II, inquired, it is said, of the first Mr Pitt (afterwards earl of Chatham), how much it would cost to shut up the parks as private grounds. He replied, "Three crowns, your majesty." The design was never afterwards entertained. See Finbury, Southwark, Green, Hyde, James's, St. James's, Victoria, Alexandra, Battersea, West Ham, and People's Parks, Chisold, Watlington, and Yellowston Park, U.S. and London Parks Act.

Chisold park, Store Newington, purchased for the public (price 95,000) 10 Jan 1889

PARK'S TRAVELS. Mungo Park set sail on his first voyage to Africa, under the patronage of the African society, to trace the source of the river Niger, 22 May, 1795, and returned 22 Dec 1797, after having triumphantly encountered great danger. He again sailed from Portsmouth on his second voyage, 30 Jan 1805, appointed to a new expedition by government. It is stated that his party fired on the natives when resisted, and that he was killed at Broussa on the Niger, Nov 1805. His "Travels in Africa" was published in 1799.

PARLIAMENT (from the French parlement, discourse) denotes its origin from the baron general assemblies, called Plenipotent. The name was applied to the assemblies of the state under Louis VII of France, about the middle of the 12th century, but it is said not to have appeared in our law till its mention in the statute of Westminster I, 3 Edw I, 1272 and yet Coke declared in his Institutes, and spoke to the same effect, when speaking (1502), that this name was used even in the time of Edward the Confessor 1041. The first clear account we have of the representatives of the people forming a house of commons, was in the 43rd Hen III 1258, when it was settled by the statutes of Oxford, that twelve persons should be chosen to represent the commons in the three parliaments, which, by the sixth statute, were to be held yearly. Burton's Annals. The general representation by knights, citizens, and burgesses, took place 49 Hen III 1265. Dugdale's Summons to Parliament, edit 1685, 400 Commons and Lords. The power and jurisdiction of parliament are so transcendent and absolute, that it cannot be confined, either for causes or persons, within any bounds. It hath sovereign and uncontrollable authority in making and repealing laws. It can regulate or now-model the succession to the crown (as was done in the reigns of Henry VIII and William III). It can alter and establish the religion of the country, as was done in the reigns of Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary, and Elizabeth. Sir Edward Coke. The ninth edition of May's "Practical Treatise on Parliament" was published in 1883; see Thursell and Septennial Return of the names of members of parliament from the earliest period to the present time, ordered by the house of commons, 4 May, 1876, and 9 March, 1877. Part I (1213-1702), published 1879. See Reform and Local Parliaments.

* Termed the "Palace of Westminster." The first contract for the embankment of the river was taken in 1837, by Messrs. Lee. This embankment, faced with granite, is 286 feet in length, and projected into the river in a line with the inner side of the third pier of old Westminster-bridge. Mr Charles Barry (born 1795, died 1866) was the architect of the sumptuous pile of buildings raised since 1840. The whole stands on a bed of concrete twelve feet thick; to the east it has a front of about 2000 feet, and covers an area of nine statute acres. It contains 2100 apartments, 100 stairways, and two miles of passages or corridors. The great Victoria tower at the south-west extremity is 246 feet in height, and towers of less magnitude crown other portions of the building.

12th sitting, 24 Oct. speech by Mr. Biggar.
Mr. M. Davitt began an address which was finished 32 Oct. 1890.

17th to 18th sitting: Sir Henry James' address for the Times 31 Oct. 1890.

The report of the commission was laid before parliament, 23 Feb. 1890. The following is an abridgement of their conclusions:—I. That the respondent members of parliament collectively were not guilty of conspiring for the absolute independence of Ireland as a separate nation, but that some of them (Messrs. M. Harris, Dillon, W. O'Brien, W. Reindemid, O'Connor, J. Coudon, and J. J. O'Kelly), together with Mr. Davitt, established the Land League mainly for that purpose. II. That the respondents (4) did conspire to promote agrarian agitation, the non-payment of rents, and the expulsion of the landlords (styled the English garrison). III. That they acquainted Mr. Parnell and others of the charge of immorality in their denunciations of the Phoenix Park murders, and affirmed the fac-simile letter to be a forgery. IV. They found that the respondents did disseminate the Irish World and other newspapers, but failing to incite to violence and other crimes. V. That the charges of immorality to crime, except by intimidation and of payments for that purpose, were not proved. VI. They found that the respondent did not denounce the system of intimidation, though they knew its effects; and VII. That they defended persons charged with agrarian crime, and supported their families, but it was not proved that they subscribed for £500,000 for, or were intimately associated with, notorious criminals, or aided their escape by payments. VIII. That they found that the respondents made payments to compensate persons injured in the commission of crime. IX. That the respondents did invite and obtain the assurance and co-operation of the Physical Force Party in America, including the Clan-na-Gael, and did not repudiate the action of that party.

(Certain allegations against Mr. Parnell were declared not proved.)

The report adopted with thanks, by the commons, after 7 days' debate, 3-11 March; by the Lords (without a division), 21 March, 1890. Mr. Gladstone's amendment rejected by 330 to 268.

Parnell v. Walter and another, for libel, Queen's bench division, justices Denman and Will; 1 damages claimed, 100,000; 40s. paid into court, 11 Jan. Verdict for the plaintiff, by consent,
5,000; damages 3 Feb.

(The publication was not a breach of privilege by the commons (260-212), 11 Feb. 1890.)

Capt. O'Shea, Mrs. O'Shea and Mr. C. S. Parnell, 25-27 Nov. 1890, Mr. Parnell was requested by Mr. W. E. Gladstone and other English liberals, to retire from the chairmanship of the Irish party.
He declined, and issued a manifesto to the people of Ireland, giving an account of private conferences with Mr. Gladstone and Mr. John Morley, 29 Nov. The Irish B.C. bishops denounced Mr.
Parnell's retirement, 3 Dec. After a week's angry discussion in the commons, committee-room No. 12, the Irish party divided: Mr. Justin McCarthy, the vice-chairman, was elected chairman by 44 members; Mr. Parnell continuing chairman with 26 followers, 6 Dec. Manifestoes of the two parties issued 9, 20 Dec.

Collapse of intrigues (chiefly at Boulogne) of Mr. Parnell, with Messrs. Wm. O'Brien, Dillon,

PAROCHIAL CHARITIES COMMISSION, see London, 1878, and under Charities, 1883.

PARRICIDE. There was no law against it in Athens or Rome, such a crime not being supposed possible. About 172 B.C., L. Octavius having killed his father, the Romans scourged the parricide; sowed him up in a leathern sack made air-tight, with a live dog, a cock, a viper, and an ape, and thus cast him into the sea. Albus Blandy was executed at Oxford for the murder of her father, April, 1752; see Trials, March, 1890.

PARSEES or GUERRES, the followers of Zerdusht, dwelt in Persia till 638, when, at the battle of Kadeeah, their army was decimated by the Arabs, and the monarchy annihilated at the battle of Nahâvend in 641. Many submitted to the conquerors, but others fled to India, and their descendants still reside at Bombay (where they are termed Parsees). Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, the 3rd baronet, was elected president of the community there, July, 1877. Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, a Par-see merchant, was for several years professor of Gujerati at University college, London. He was nominated as M.P. for the Holborn district, but not elected, 1886; elected 6 July, 1892, for Central Finsbury. "History of the Parsees" by Donabhai Framji Karaka, published, 1884. See Bombay. A Parsee fire temple at Bombay was consecrated, Nov.
1891.

"PARTANT POUR LA SYRIE," popular
French song; words by comte Alexandre de Laborde; music by Hortense Beaubrunnois, wife of Louis Bonaparte, king of Holland, about 1800. The music became very popular after her son became emperor, in 1852, as Napoleon III.

PARTHENON (from Greek parthenos, virgin), a temple at Athens dedicated to Minerva, erected about 442 B.C. In it Phidias placed his renowned statue of that goddess, 438 B.C. The roof was destroyed by the Venetians in 1687. "The Parthenon" published by Mr. James Fergusson in 1883. See Elgin Marbles.

PARTHENOPEAN REPUBLIC was established by the French at Naples (anciently called Partheneope), 23 Jan. 1799, and overthrown in June same year.

PARTHIA (Asia). The Parthians were originally a tribe of Scythians, who, being exiled, as their name implies, from their own country, settled near Hyrcania. Arsaces laid the foundation of an empire which ultimately extended over a large part of Asia, 250 B.C.; the Parthians were never wholly subdued by the Romans. The last king, Artabanus V., was killed, A.D. 226; and his territories were annexed to the new kingdom of Persia founded by Artaxerxes, who had revolted against Parthia.

PARTICULARISTS. The name given to those Germans who desire the maintenance of the independence of the German states, and oppose their absorption into the empire. M. Gieser, one of them, failed in an attempt to form a ministry in Bavaria, Sept. 1872.

PARTITION ACT, relative to the division of property sold by direction of the court of chancery, passed 25 June, 1688.

PARTITION TREATIES. The first treaty between England and Holland for regulating the Spanish succession (declaring the elector of Bavaria next heir, and ceding provinces to France) was signed 19 Aug. 1698; and the second (between France, England, and Holland, declaring the archduke Charles presumptive heir of the Spanish monarchy, Joseph Ferdinand having died in 1699), 13 March, 1700. Treaty for the partition of Poland; the first was a secret convention between Russia and Prussia, 17 Feb. 1772, the second between the same powers and Austria, 5 Aug. same year; the third was between Russia, Austria, and Prussia, 24 Oct. 1795.

PARTNERSHIP. The laws respecting it were amended in 1863 and 1890, see Limited Liability.

PARTY, see Processions.

PASIGRAPHY (from Greek, passi, for all): a system which professes to teach people to communicate with each other by means of numbers which convey the same ideas in all languages. A society for this purpose was established at Munich; and the president, Anton Baelmaier, published a dictionary and grammar for German, French, and English, 1868—71: 4334 mental conceptions may be thus communicated.

PASQUINADES. Small satirical poems obtained this name about 1533.

At the stall of a robber named Pasquin, at Rome, idle persons used to assemble to listen to his sallies, to relate anecdotes, and rail at the power. After the robber's death, his name was given to a statue to which lampoons were affixed.

PASSAROWITZ TREATY, concluded 21 July, 1718, between Germany and Venice, and the Turks, by which the house of Austria ceded certain commercial rights, and obtained from Turkey the Temeswar, Belgrade, and part of Bosnia, Servia, and Wallachia. The Turks gained the Morea.

PASSAU (Germany), TREATY OF, whereby religious freedom was established, was ratified between the emperor Charles V. and the protestant princes of Germany, 31 July, 1552. In 1662 the cathedral and great part of Passau were consumed by fire.

PASSION PLAY, see Drama.

PASSION-WEEK, the name given since the Reformation to the week preceding Easter, was formerly applied to the fortnight. Archbishop Laud says the two weeks were so called "for a thousand years together," and refers to an epistle, by Ignatius, in the 1st century, in which the practice is said to have been "observed by all." The week preceding Easter is now by some termed "Holy Week," the previous week "Passion Week."

PASTOR-MUSIC: Gregory Nazianzen (A.D. 330-390) is said to have first set forth the history of this festival in a dramatic form.

Guidetti, in 1886, published stanzas for this subject, which have been treated since by many composers. J. S. Bach's great "Passion Music," first performed on Good Friday, 1720, has been revived with great success in this country, beginning with that "according to St. Matthew," 6 April, 1854.

PASSOVER, the most solemn festival of the Jews, instituted 1491 B.C. (Exodus xii.), in commemoration of their coming out of Egypt; because the night before their departure, the destroying angel, who put to death the first-born of the Egyptians, passed over the houses of the Hebrews without entering them; the door posts being marked with the blood of the Paschal Lamb killed the evening before. The passover was celebrated in the new temple, 18 April, 515 A.C. Usher.

PASSPORT SYSTEM forbids subjects to quit one country or enter another without the consent of the sovereign thereof. In 1858 the system was somewhat changed in this country, and the stamp duty on passports was reduced from 5*s.* to 6*d.* Passports were abolished in Norway in 1859; in Sweden in 1860; and (with regard to British subjects) in France, 16 Dec. 1860; in Italy, 26 June, 1862; in Portugal, 23 Jan. 1863; and are falling into disuse in other countries. The passport system was established in the United States on 19 Aug. 1861. The passport system, revived in France on account of the war, 1 Aug. 1870, was abolished by M. Thiers, 10 April, 1872, in compliance with the wish of the British government.

PASTEUR INSTITUTE, Paris, see under Hydrophobia.

PASTEL, a roll of paste made of different colours ground with gum water, used as a crayon. Pastel painting has been recently much practised on the continent. PASTON LETTERS, the correspondence of a Norfolk family, 1422-83, giving a picture of social life in England, were edited by Sir John Penn, and published in five volumes, quarto, 1787-1823. Part of the MS. was soon after purchased by the trustees of the British Museum. The publication of a new edition, by James Gairdner, with additional letters, 1872-5. The MS. of the second series with other letters was found in 1875, by Mr. Frere, of Boydon Hall, near Diss, Norfolk. Talbot was taken prisoner, and the valiant Fastolf was forced to flee. In consequence, Charles VII. of France entered Rheims in triumph, and was crowned 17 July, following year, Joan of Arc assisting in the ceremony in full armour, and holding the sword of state, see Joan of Arc.

PATENTS (from pater, I lie open), licences and authorities granted by the king. Patents are said to have been granted for titles of nobility in 1344, by Edward III. They were first granted for the exclusive privilege of printing books, in 1391. The property and right of inventors in arts and manufactures were secured by letters patent by an act passed in 1623. The later laws regulating patents are very numerous; among them are 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 83 (1835), and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 83 (1852). By the latter COMMISSIONERS OF PATENTS were appointed, viz., the lord chancellor, the master of the rolls, the attorney-general for England and Ireland, the lord advocate, and the solicitor-general for England, Scotland, and Ireland. In 1853, a journal was published under their authority, and indexes of patents, from March, 1617, to the present time. Specifications of patents may be consulted by the public at the Free Library and Reading-Room, in Southampton buildings, opened 5 March, 1854. A museum containing models, portraits, &c., was established in 1859 at South Kensington, mainly by the exertions of Mr. Bennet Woodcroft.

The "Illustrated Official Journal" combining six others published Jan. 1860.

An international congress for the protection of patents met at Vienna, Aug. 1873; at Paris, 6 March, 1883.

New patent bills introduced into parliament withdrawn, 1875, 1876, 1879; Mr. Anderson's bill read, 15 June, 1881.

Patent Design and Trade Marks Act, 45 & 46 Vict. c. 57, passed 25 Aug. 1883, began 1 Jan. 1884; amended 24 Dec. 1888. It greatly relieved patentees by lessening fees, &c.

In 1864, the alleged defalcations of Mr. Edmunds, a clerk in the patent office and an official of the house of lords, led to his retirement. He obtained a pension of 800*l.*, which was taken from him by a vote of the house of lords on 9 May, 1865. Much litigation ensued. In an action against Mr. Gladstone, the prime minister, and others, for a libel, Mr. Edmunds was non-suited, 21-22 June, 1874; and he failed in actions against several newspapers for printing a treasury calumny. His appeal to the house of lords failed 15 July, 1873.

17,100 applications for patents in 1883; 16,100 in 1885; 17,100 in 1886; 18,000 in 1887; 19,700 in 1888; 21,000 in 1889; 22,888 in 1891.

Royal commission to enquire into the law relating to letters patent appointed 1862; Mr. Hindmarch's report issued 1864. In pursuance of recommendations for the formation of a roll of patent agents, the Institute of Patent Agents was registered 1882, chartered 1891. It has given much attention to legislation respecting patents.

PATRIARCHS (a name given to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and his sons). The ecclesiastical historian Socrates gives this title to the chiefs of Christian dioceses, about 440. It was first conferred on the five grand sees of Rome, Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, and Jerusalem. The Latin church had no patriarchs till the 6th century. The first founders or heads of religious orders are called patriarchs.

Mectarius, bishop of Constantinople, as ex-officio chief of the Eastern bishops, was nominated patriarch of Constantinople at the second general council of Constantinople, 9 July, 381. This led the way to the schism between the Eastern and Western churches.

PATRICIANS, the highest citizens or aristocracy of Rome; their authority began with the city itself; see Rome.

PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL, ST. (Dublin), was founded in 1190 by archbishop Comyn, on the site of an old church. The cathedral was demolished in 1546, and used as a law court; restored 1553. After renovation by the munificence of the late sir Benjamin Lee Guinness, it was re-opened 24 Feb. 1865. Several persons killed by the falling of a flying buttress, 14 Sept. 1882. See Dublin.

PATRONAGE OF LIVINGES by Laymen in England is very ancient; in Scotland was opposed by the books of discipline 1560 and 1578, abolished 1649, restored 1660. The system led to the disruption of the established church, and the foundation of the free church, 18 May, 1843. The abolition of lay patronage was earnestly advocated by the authorities of the established church in March, 1870, and the duke of Argyll volunteered to resign his patronage in May. Of 1109 livings 319 belonged to the crown, and about 600 to private persons. PAULICIANS, a sect of Christian reformers, arose about 652. Although they were severely persecuted, they spread over Asia Minor, in the 9th century, and finally settled at Montferrat, in Italy, where they were attacked by the bishop of Milan in 1028. Severe decrees against them were made in 1163, and they gradually dispersed; very probably sowing the seeds of the great reformation of the 16th century.

PAUL JONES, a Scotchman, born 1742; died at Paris, 1792. He commanded an American privateer during the American war, and made daring depredations on British commerce. He pillaged the house of lord Selkirk, near Kirkcudbright, and at Whitehaven burnt shipping in the harbour, April 1778. The Dutch permitted Paul Jones to enter their ports with two British ships of war which he had taken, and which the stadtholder peremptorily refused to deliver up, 1779.

PAUL'S CROSS, ST. (London), which stood at the north side of the cathedral, was a pulpit formed of wood, mounted upon steps of stone, and covered with lead, from which the most eminent divines were appointed to preach every Sunday in the forenoon. To this place the court, the mayor, the aldermen, and principal citizens used to resort. It was in use as early as 1259, and was appropriated not only to preaching, but to political and ecclesiastical discourses, &c. The cross was demolished in 1643, by order of the parliament.

PAUL'S SCHOOL, ST. (London), was endowed in 1512 by John Colet, dean of St. Paul's, for 153 boys "of every nation, country, and class," in memory of the number of fishes taken by Peter. (John xxi. 11). The first schoolhouse was burnt in 1666; the second, by Wren, was taken down in 1824, and another building erected by George Smith. William Lilly was the first master, and his grammar is still used by the school. Timbs. The claim of the Mercers' company to be owners instead of trustees of Colet's estate was set aside by the vice chancellor, 11 Feb. 1870. The school ordered to be removed to West Kensington; site bought, June, 1878. New building designed by Mr. Waterhouse opened by lord Selborne, 23 April, 1884. The number of scholars has been increased.

PAUPERS, see Poor.

PAVAN, PAVANE, or PAVIN, was a slow dance of the 16th and 17th centuries, sometimes accompanied by singing.

PAVEMENT. The Carthaginians are said to have been the first who paved their towns with stones. The Romans, in the time of Augustus, had pavement in many of their streets; the Appian way, a paved road, was constructed 312 B.C. In England there were few paved streets before Henry VII.'s reign. London was first paved about 1533. It was paved with flagstones between 1815 and 1825. Wood and asphaltic paving were tried in 1839, and have been disused since 1847; see Wood Pavement. Asphaltic has been much used since 1869. Wood reported to be the best for London, May, 1876.

Grano-metallic stone laid down in a plastic state in part of the Strand, London, and in other places, 1885.

PAVIA (N. Italy), the ancient Ticinum or Avia. Its university, founded by Charlemagne, is said to be the oldest in Europe. Pavia was built by the Gauls, who were driven out by the Romans, and these in their turn were expelled by the Goths; in 568 it was taken by the Lombards, and became the capital of their kingdom. In the 12th century it was erected into a republic, but soon after was subjected to Milan and followed its fortunes. On 24 Feb. 1525, a battle was fought near here between the French and the Imperialists, when the former were defeated, and their king, Francis I., after fighting with heroic valour, and killing seven men with his own hand, was at last obliged to surrender himself a prisoner. It was long asserted that Francis wrote to his mother, Louisa of Savoy, regent of the kingdom during his absence, saying, Tout est perdu, madame, hors l'honneur (All is lost, madam, except honour). The words are now said to have been, L'honneur et la vie qui est sauvée.

PAWNBROKING. The Roman emperors lent money upon land. The origin of borrowing money by means of pledges deposited with lenders is referred to Perugia, in Italy, about 1462. The institutions were termed monti di pietà (which see). Soon afterwards, it is said that the bishop of Winchester established a system of lending on pledges, but without interest. The business of pawnbrokers was regulated in 1756, and licences issued in 1783. The rate of interest on pledges was fixed in 1800. In London there were, in 1851, 334 pawnbrokers; and in England, exclusively of London, 1127; the number is increasing more than in proportion to the population. In 1860 an act was passed enabling pawnbrokers to charge a half-penny for every ticket describing things pledged for a sum under 5s. The acts relating to pawnbrokers were amended in 1856, 1859, 1860. Pawnbrokers in Great Britain: 1851, 1873; in 1861, 2578; in 1871, 3540. The law was consolidated in the pawnbrokers' act passed 10 Aug. 1872.

PAX, a small tablet, generally silver, termed, tabula pax or occulatoria, kissed by the Roman Catholic priests and laity; substituted for the primal kiss of peace in the early church. The Pax is said to have been introduced about the 12th century.

PAYMASTER GENERAL. In 1836 the army and navy pay departments were consolidated into the paymaster-general's office, sometimes held by a cabinet minister.

PEABODY FUND. Mr. George Peabody, an American merchant (born 18 Feb. 1795, died 4 Nov. 1869), who had made his fortune in London, gave on 12 March, 1862, 150,000l., on 21 Jan. 1866, 100,000l., on 5 Dec. 1868, 100,000l., and by his will directed his trustees to pay 150,000l.—in all 500,000l.—to ameliorate the condition of the London poor.

A PEACE SOCIETY, founded 1816, for the promotion of universal peace; holds annual meetings; proposed amalgamation with the International Arbitration and Peace Association (founded by Mr. Lewis Appleton in 1860), Dec. 1864. The association divided in May, 1866, when the British arbitration association was founded by Mr. Appleton. A congress of the friends of peace, from all parts of the world, commenced its sittings at Paris, 22 Aug. 1849. It met in London at Exeter hall, 30 Oct. following; and at Frankfurt, in St. Paul's church, 22 Aug. 1850; at Birmingham, 28 Nov. 1850; and at Exeter hall, 23 July, 1851. A meeting was held at Manchester, 27 Jan. 1853; and at Edinburgh, 12 Oct. 1853.

Mr. Bright and Mr. Colclough were among the most conspicuous members of the society. A deputation from the Peace Society, consisting of Messrs J. Sturge, A. Peace, and another Quaker friend, stated their views to the emperor of Russia at St. Petersburg, at an interview granted them in Feb. 1854. At the stormy international arbitration and peace congress at Geneva, Garibaldi was present, PEACHES are said to have been introduced into this country from Persia about 1562.

PEARLS, mentioned Job xxviii. 18. M. Réaumur, in 1717, alleged that pearls are formed like other stones in animals. An ancient pearl was valued by Pliny at 80,000*l.* sterling. One which was brought in 1574, to Philip II., of the size of a pigeon's egg, was valued at 14,400 ducats. A pearl named the Incomparable, spoken of by De Moete, weighed thirty carats, equal to five pennyweights, and was about the size of a muscadine pear. The pearl mentioned by Tavernier, as being in possession of the emperor of Persia, was purchased of an Arab in 1633, and is valued at a sum equal to 110,400*l.* Value of pearls imported into Great Britain, 1850, 56,162*l.* Artificial mother of pearl is said to have been made at Berné by Mr. K. Gehnada.

"PECULIAR PEOPLE," a small sect founded in London by Wm. Briggs and Jos. Banyard in 1838; chief of it Esor. Two members, Thomas and Mary Anne Wagstaffe, were tried and acquitted of manslaughter, 29 Jan. 1868. They had neglected getting medical assistance for their sick child, and depended on the efficacy of their elders' prayers and anointing it with oil (James v. 14). Many cases of healing by these means are asserted. On 6 May, 1872, a father was convicted for neglecting to get medical advice for his child who died of small pox; and the sect agreed to modify their practice. Establishments for healing diseases by prayer exist in Germany.

At another trial, Thomas Hines was acquitted, in accordance with the opinion of the court. James Hines held that the case did not amount to criminal neglect because the prisoner had not called in a doctor to his sick child, 10 Aug. 1874. Similar case since: 1875-6. John Robert Downes (for neglect respecting an sick child) sentenced to 3 months imprisonment 21 Sept. 1876.

PEDESTRIANISM. Enchidas, a citizen of Plataea, went from thence to Delphi to bring the sacred fire. This he obtained, and returned with it the same day before sunset, having travelled 125 English miles. No sooner had he saluted his fellow-citizens, and delivered the fire, than he fell dead at their feet. After the battle of Marathon, a soldier was sent from the field to announce the victory at Athens. Exhausted with fatigue, and bleeding from his wounds, he cried out, "Rejoice, we are conquerors!" and immediately expired.

Foster Powell, the English pedestrian, performed many astonishing journeys on foot. His expedition from London to York and back again, in 1788, is said to have been completed in 140 hours.

Captain Barclay, for a wager (on which many thousands of pounds depended), walked 1000 miles in 1000 successive hours, each mile in each hour, in forty-two days and nights (less 8 hours). His task was accomplished on 10 July, 1839.

It was again occupied by the Burmese and strongly fortified, with a garrison of 4000 men. It was recaptured by general Godwin with 1200 men and two guns, in two hours, with the loss of six killed and thirty-two wounded. The province was annexed to our Indian possessions, by proclamation, 20 Dec. 1852, and has since prospered. In Feb. 1862, it was united with Arracan and Tenasserim as British Burmah.

In 1369, Hung-wu, of the Ming dynasty, removed to Nankin, which was the capital till Yung-lo removed his court to Peking in 1410; and by him and his successors the city was enlarged, fortified, and beautified. It was visited by Lord Macartney, Sept. 1793; surrendered to the allied English and French armies, 12 Oct. 1860; and evacuated by them 5 Nov., after peace had been signed 24 Oct. It was described as being in a very desolate state, and the inhabitants scattered and indigent. English and French representatives were settled at Peking, March, 1861. That new born infants are in the same condition with Adam before the fall. 4. That the law qualified men for the kingdom of heaven, and was founded upon equal promises with the Gospel. 5. That the general resurrection of the dead does not follow in virtue of Christ's resurrection.

PELUSIUM (now Tinck), formerly Sin, the key of Egypt. Here, in 525 B.C., Psammetichus III. was defeated by Cambyses, the Persian, who thereby obtained possession of the kingdom. PENDULUMS. The isochronous property of the pendulum is said to have been applied to clocks by Galileo about 1639, and by Richard Harris about 1641. Christian Huyghens claimed this discovery, 1658. See Clocks. George Graham invented the compensating pendulum, 1715. Experiments were made to determine the density of the earth by pendulums by Mr. (aft. sir) G. B. Airy (aft. astronomer royal), and others, in a mine in Coinwall, in 1826 and 1828; and at Horton Colliery 1854. In 1851, M. Foucault demonstrated the rotation of the earth by the motion of a pendulum.

PENNSYLVANIA (N. America), the first state in the Union in regard to mineral wealth. The settlement by the Swedes here in 1633, was taken by the Dutch in 1655, and acquired by the British in 1664. Pennsylvania was granted by Charles II. to the duke of York, 1664; and it was sold to the Penn family, 1681. Pennsylvania was afterwards purchased from the Indians by the celebrated William Penn (son of admiral Penn), who went out from England with a number of colonists; from which period the settlement gradually increased. Mr. Penn granted a charter in May, 1701, but the emigrants from the Low Countries refused it, and separated themselves from the province of Pennsylvania. They afterwards had their own assembly, in which the governor of Pennsylvania presided. This state adopted an independent constitution in 1787, and established the present in 1790. Great destruction of property and life by a tornado, especially at Pittsburgh and Reading, 9 Jan. 1889. Several days' violent storm and heavy rain in the Alleghenies, swelled the rivers and caused the overflow of the lakes, May, 1889. At 5 P.M. 31 May, the South Fork reservoir, a lake about 1 miles square burst the huge dam, and a mass of water rushed down the South Fork, four miles, by the deep circuitous Conemaugh valley to its junction with the Conemaugh river, driving all before it. For a distance of about 12 miles round Johnstown the flood swept out towns and villages, destroying all the bridges, railways, and factories. South Fork, Johnstown, Cambria city, McConnville, Sheridan, and other flourishing towns were completely blotted out. A great mass of floating wreckage, which was stopped by a stone railway bridge at Johnstown, took fire, above five hundred persons, who were buried in the burning mass, perished. The most successful measures were taken by the government, by several states and by the railway companies for the relief of the sufferers, and for averting imminent famine and pestilence. Robbers of the dead and living were punished by a vigilance committee. Troops were sent to maintain order, liberal subscriptions were begun in London, Paris, and other places, June.

It is stated that the dam had previously given visible signs of its being in a very insecure condition, and had not been properly constructed. Several towns and villages surrounded June, many bridges swept away above 150 deaths reported.

Latest statistics state the result of the Johnstown disaster to be about 6,000 deaths 26 July 1889

After heavy rains when the river had become turbulent, early on 5 June a cloud burst over the Pittsburgh region causing great inundations at Titusville the tanks of oil and kerosene were upset and set alight by lightning and the city was saved. A steamship with 100 passengers and crew arrived before it, destroying the bridges. Explosions followed, causing a panic and the people fled to the hills, women and children being trampled on during the rush. The ferry reached Oil city 78 miles distant and a large part of it was reduced to ashes or submerged 1890

It was reported that 150 persons were either drowned or burnt at Titusville, and about 500 men.

The loss of property at the two cities was estimated at 3,000,000 dollars. Large sums were immediately subscribed for the relief of the sufferers 6 June 1891

PENNY. The ancient silver penny was the first silver coin struck in England, and the only one current among the Anglo-Saxons. The penny until the reign of Edward I was struck with a cross, so deeply indented that it might be easily parted into two for halfpence, and into four for farthings, and hence these names. Copper penny and two-penny pieces were coined by Boulton and Watt at Soho, Birmingham, in 1797, and were accounted the finest of our copper currency, see Coin, &c.

PERUGIA, a city of central Italy; as Perousia, anciently one of the Etruscan confederation. It allied itself with the Samnites, but was ruined by two defeats by the Romans, 309 and 295 B.C. It was taken by Octavius Caesar from the adherents of Antony; many of whom were immolated on altars by their victor, 41. Leo X. took Perugia from the rival families Oddi and Baglioni, in A.D. 1520. An insurrection here against the pope was put down by the Swiss with great cruelty, 20 June, 1859. Perugia was taken by the Sardinian general Fanti, in Sept. 1860, when the cruel papal general Schmidt and 1600 men were made prisoners.

PERUKE or WIG. The ancients used false hair, but the present peruke was first worn in France and Italy about 1620; and introduced into England about 1660, and prevailed more or less till about 1810.

It is said that bishop Blomfield (of London), in 1830, obtained permission for the bishops to discontinue wearing their wigs in parliament, of which they gradually availed themselves. On account of the heat, sir J. F. Wilde, and other judges and several counsel, appeared in court without wigs, 23, 23 July, 1868.

The Sardinians were preparing to besiege it in July, 1859, when peace was made. It was given up to the Italians, 9 Oct. 1866; see Quadrilateral.

PESSIMISM (from possimus, the worst), the opposite doctrine to optimism (which see). Mr. James Sully's "Pessimism, a History and a Criticism" was published in 1877. In 1775 he turned his farm into a school for educating poor children in reading, writing, and working; but he did not succeed. In 1798 he established an orphan school where he began with the mutual instruction, or monitorial system, since adopted by Lancaster; but his school was soon after turned into a hospital for the Austrian army. In 1802, in conjunction with Fellenberg, he established his school at Hofwyl, which at first was successful, but eventually declined through mismanagement.

If guilt were established the sentence was usually banishment.

Paul III. committed the work to Michael Angelo, who devised the dome, in the construction of which 30,000 lb. of iron were used. The church was consecrated 18 Nov. 1626. The front is 400 feet broad, rising to a height of 180 feet, and the majestic dome ascends from the centre of the church to a height of 324 feet, the length of the interior is 600 feet, forming one of the most spacious halls ever constructed. See Abolition, and Signatures.

Numerous artesian wells were sunk, manufactories erected, and an almost unlimited supply obtained; between 1859-77, 2,802,500,000 gallons; in 1863, 8,907,365 gallons. In consequence of the importation of this oil into this country, and many accidents having taken place through its inflammability at low temperature, acts for "the safe keeping of petroleum" were passed, 29 July, 1862; July, 1868, Aug. 1871, and 1879. Petroleum became an awful weapon in the hands of the insurgents in Paris, 23-27 May, 1871. About fifty killed by explosion at a petroleum manufactory near Rheims, 16 July, 1871. Boyle about the same time. Nov. Diet. Phosphoric acid is first mentioned in 1743, but is said to have been known earlier. Gahn pointed out its existence in bones in 1769, and Scheele derived a process for extracting it. Canton's phosphorus is so called from its discoverer, 1768. Phosphorated hydrogen was discovered by Gengembre in 1812. The consumption of phosphorus has immensely increased since the manufacture of lucifer matches. In 1815, Schröter, of Vienna, discovered allotropic or amorphous phosphorus, which ignites more slowly and is less unwholesome in working than ordinary phosphorus.

PHOTOGRAPHY. The action of light on chloride of silver was known as early as the 16th century. The phenomenon was studied by Scheele (1777), Senneker (1790), Ritter and Wollaston (1801). From the results of these investigations, experiments were made by Thos. Wedgwood and Humphry Davy, in the Royal Institution, London, which were published in its Journal, 1802. Wedgwood may be regarded as the first photographer. His paper was entitled "an account of a method of copying paintings upon glass, and of making profiles by the agency of light upon vitrate of silver."

Further discoveries were made by Niepce in 1814, and Sir J. Herschel in 1839.

Louis J. M. Daguerre commenced his experiments in 1824; and in 1826 joined Joseph Nicéphore Niepce, and worked with him till the death of the latter in 1833. The production of Daguerotype plates was announced in Jan. 1839; and the French chamber of deputies granted a pension to Daguerre and to Niepce's son Isidore.

In 1839 Mr. Henry Fox Talbot first published his mode of multiplying photographic impressions by producing a negative photograph (i. e., with the light and shades reversed) from which any number of positive copies may be obtained. It was used by Mr. Warren de la Rue to photograph the disc of the sun during the eclipse of 18 July, 1860.

PHOTOGRAPHY. The art of producing engravings by the action of light and electricity. The earliest specimens were produced by Nicéphore Niepce, and presented by him in 1827 to the great botanist, Robert Brown. Great advances have since been made in this art by MM. Niepce de St. Victor (who published a treatise on it in 1855), Vivry, W. R. Grove, H. Fox Talbot, &c. In 1832, Paul Prentz patented a process which he called "Photoglyphography."

PHOTOGRAPHIC EXPOSURE (a process by which the light actually etches a picture on a plate that may be and has been printed from) was patented by Mr. Fox Talbot in 1838, and is described and exemplified in the Photographic News, 9 and 16 Sept. 1859, a specimen being given in the latter number.

PHOTOGRAPHY (a process by which photographs are transferred to zinc plates which may be printed from) was devised by Sir Henry James, chief of the Ordnance Survey, and was known in 1860. By it maps, charts, and engravings may be printed at a small cost.

Stellar Photometry. The measurement of the light of the stars, has been much studied by astronomers, especially by Sir John Herschel, prof. Angellier, prof. C. Pritchard and others. Mr. W. J. Dubuisson, in his "Guide to the measurement of light," published in 1883, describes his application of terrestrial photometry to stellar light.

PHOTOPHONE. In this apparatus, constructed by professor Graham Bell and Mr. Sumner Tainter of Washington, in 1880, a thin plane mirror is thrown into vibration by the voice; a beam of light is reflected from this mirror and received at a distance by a cell of the metal selenium; when, by arrangement, this is connected with a telephone, the sounds are reproduced.

537 B.C., and partook of its changes. After their defeat of Antiochus the Great, king of Syria, 190 B.C., the Romans added Phrygia to the kingdom of Pergamum, which was bequeathed to them by Attalus III., the last king, 133 B.C.

PHYLLXERA, see Vine.

PHYSIC appears to have been first practised by the Egyptian priests. Pythagoras endeavoured to explain the philosophy of disease and the action of medicine, about 520 B.C. Hippocrates, the father of medicine, flourished about 422 B.C., and Galen, born A.D. 131, was the oracle of medical science. About 980 Avicenna, an Arab, wrote a system of medicine. Dr. R. Quain's Dictionary of Medicine, published 1882. See Medical.

The dogmatic age of medicine lasted till the Reformation, when it was attacked by Paracelsus (1493-1541), and Vesalius (1514-64). Since 1800 medicine has been completely transformed by physiological and chemical research.

The discovery of the circulation of the blood, by Dr. Harvey, furnished an entirely new system of physiological and pathological speculation, 1628. See Medical and Scientific.

PHYSICIAN TO THE KING—John, the king's chaplain and physician (afterwards bishop of Bath and Wells), mentioned 1500.

The earliest mandate or warrant for the attendance of a physician at court is dated 1454, and 37 Henry VI., a royal writ in the patronage which was afforded to practitioners in medicine, but no appointment existed which can justly be called physician to the royal person. By this warrant the king, with the consent of his privy council, deputed to three physicians and two surgeons the regulation of his diet, and the administration of such medicines and remedies as might be sufficient for his cure, without any allusion to the previous existence or continuance of the office which they were authorised for a time to fill, or to a remuneration for their services—14th of Edward.

Linacre was elected the first president of the college. Dr. W. Harvey was a great benefactor to this institution, 1653. He built a library and public hall, which he granted for ever to the college, with his books and instruments. The college was afterwards held in a building in Warwick-lane, erected by Sir C. Wren, where it continued till 1825, when the present elegant stone edifice in Trafalgar-square was erected from designs by Sir R. Smirke.—The College of Physicians, Dublin, was founded by charter of Charles II. 1667, and was re-incorporated in 1692. The Royal College of Physicians, Edinburgh, 29 Nov. 1681.

PHYSICS, see under Philosophy.

PHYSIOGNOMY, a science which affirms that the dispositions of mankind may be discovered from the features of the face. The origin of the term is referred to Aristotle, and Cleveo was attached to the science. It became a fashionable study from the beginning of the 16th century; and in the 18th century, the essays of Le Cat and Peronny led to the modern system.

J. K. Latmer, who endeavoured to raise physiognomy to the rank of a science, published his celebrated work "Physiognomy, or the Fragmenta," 1773-78, of which an English translation by Holcroft was published in 1793. The subject was considered by C. R. Darwin in his work "Expression of the emotions in Man and Animals," 1872, and by Monteggia in his "Physiognomy and Expression," 1890.

PHYSIOLOGY is that part of physics which treats of the inner constitution of animals and plants, and the several functions and operations of all their organs and tissues. The works of Mäiler, Milne-Edwards, Huxley, and Carpenter are much celebrated, and Todd's "Cyclopedia of Physiology" (1836-59) is a library in itself. Physiological Society, in London, founded by Dr. Burdon-Sanderson and others, early in 1877, see Anatomy, Biology, and Physiology, Royal Institution. International congresses of physiology: Besle, 1888; 1890, Aug. 1892.

PIACENZA, see Piacenza.

PIANETTE, a small upright piano introduced by Bord of Paris in 1837.

PIANOFORTE. The invention is attributed to Cristofaldi (or Cristofori), an Italian, J. C. Schröter, a German, and Marini, a Frenchman, early in the 18th century. The strings are struck by small hammers, and not by quills, as in harpsichords. Schröter is said to have presented a model of his invention to the court of Saxony, in 1717; and G. Silbermann manufactured pianofortes with considerable success in 1772. Pianofortes were made in London by M. Zumpe, a German, 1766, and have been since greatly improved by Clementi, Broadwood, Collard, Kirkman, Erard, Pleyel, and others.

Upright pianos, first made in this country, were suggested by Isaac Hawkins in 1800, and Thomas Lord, in 1802. Wm. Southwell patented "cylinder pianos," in 1807; superseded, from about 1840, by the cottage, piccolo, and other pianos. A keyed instrument at Modena was named "piano e forte," 1598.

A "strong pianoforte," formed of a series of flutes and other stones of various sizes, collected in France and arranged by M. Hauke, was played on by him at the Royal Institution, on 16 March, 1866.

The new transposing piano, invented by Mr Henry Schallheim, was exhibited at the navy hotel, Westminster, in June, 1890.

The Janko pianoforte, with a new arrangement of keyboard, exhibited in the Portland rooms, London, W., 24 Nov. 1890, said to possess many advantages. See Grove's "Dictionary of Music," article "Pianoforte."

PICARDY (N. France), was conquered by the English in 1346, and by the duke of Burgundy in 1417, to whom it was ceded by the treaty of Arras, 21 Sept. 1435, and annexed to France by Louis XI., 1463.

PICCADILLY, a fine street, W. London; the name of uncertain origin, was Pickadillo and Pigadello, about 1660, when a house of entertainment existed near the Haymarket, termed Piccadilly hall, after which buildings were gradually extended westwards.

PICCOLO, a small piano introduced by Robert Norman in 1835.

PICENTINES, a Sabine tribe, subdued by the Romans, and their capital, Asculum, taken, 268 B.C. They began the Social war in 90, and were conquered in 89 B.C.

Robert II. of France made several pilgrimages; among others one to Rome about the year 1010, perhaps in 1020, when he refused the imperial dignity and the kingdom of Italy. The pilgrimage to Canterbury is described by Chaucer in his Canterbury Tales about 1383. The pilgrimages of Mahometans to Mecca, the birth-place of the prophet, is commanded in the Koran. It still continues, and is frequently accompanied by great outbreaks of cholera, which see. Pilgrimages to shrines of the Virgin Mary in France revived in 1873, and since, in consequence of miracles alleged to have taken place at La Salette in 1836 and at Lourdes, 11 Feb. 1858; those of La Salette discredited by Pope Leo X., 1879. 1886. By this plan the tenant of a farm was to pay his rent to the National League instead of to the landlord, and was to be supported if evicted. It was condemned by the Pope, 20 April, 1888; given up by many tenants throughout the country, and disavowed by Mr. Parnell and others, 1890-1. PLANETS. Jupiter was known as a planet to the Chinese and the Chaldeans, and inserted in a chart of the heavens, made about 600 B.C., and in which 1400 stars are accurately described; this chart is said to be in the national library at Paris. The four satellites of Jupiter discovered by Galileo, 7 Jan. 1610, see Mars, Saturn. We now know nine primary planets, termed major; Mercury, Venus, the Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, and Vulcan (doubtful); and, secondary or minor, situated between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. The numerical order differs in the lists of English, German, and French astronomers. In the French and German lists, Aglais to Pandora are numbered 47 to 55; Meloid is 56.

Uranus, formerly called Georgium Sidus and Harvard; discovered by W. Herschel (see Georgium Sidus).

[The later numbers are uncertain.]

PLANIMETER, a machine for measuring the area of any figure by the passage of a tracer round about its perimeter. Amalor's planimeter (in use for several years) was described at the British Association meeting at Brighton, Aug. 1872.

PLANING-MACHINE. One for wood was constructed by Bramah, about 1802; and one for iron by Joseph Clement in 1825.

PLANTAGENET. * HOUSE OF, to which belonged fourteen English kings, from Henry II. 1154, to Richard III., 1485; see England, Kings.

PLANTATIONS, see Trade.

PLASSEY, in Bengal, India, the site of a battle fought between the Briti-h under Clive, and the Hindoos under Surajah Dowlah, 23 June, 1757; 68,000 men were vanquished by 1000 British and about 2000 sepoye. The victory laid the foundation of our empire in India.

PLASTER OF PARIS. Gypsum, sulphate of lime, used for moulds, statuary, &c., first found at Montmartre, near Paris, whence its name. The method of taking likenesses by its use was first discovered by Andrea del Verrochio, about 1466.

PLATA, LA, see Argentine Republic.

PLATÆA (Bootia, N. Greece), site of the battle between Mardonius, commander of the army of Xerxes of Persia, and Pausanias, commander of the Lacedæmonians and Athenians, 22 Sept. 479 B.C.; the same day as the battle of Mycale. Of 300,000 Persians scarce 3000 escaped with their lives. The Grecian army, about 110,000, lost but few men. The Greeks obtained immense plunder, and were henceforth delivered from the fear of Persian invasions. Platæa, as an ally of Athens, was destroyed by the Thebans, 372; and rebuilt by Philip II. after his victory at Cheronea, 338.

PLATE. In England, plate, with the exception of spoons, was prohibited in public-houses by statute 8 Will. III. (1690). The celebrated Plate act passed in May, 1756. This act was repealed in 1780. The act laying a stamp-duty upon plate passed in 1784; see Goldsmiths' Company. By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 96 (1854), gold wares were allowed to be manufactured at a low or standard; but a later act excepted marriage rings.—The art of covering baser metals with a thin plate of silver, either for use or for ornament (PLATING), said to have been invented by a Birmingham spur-maker, who began with making the branches of a pair of spurs hollow, and filling the hollow with a slender rod of steel. He continued to make the hollow larger and the iron thicker, till at last he merely coated the iron spur with silver; see Electrotype.

Mr. Wilfred Joseph Chipp's "Old English Plate," a valuable work, containing the remains of Mr. O. Morgan, published, 1878. His "Old French Plate," 1880.

* Fulke Martel, earl of Anjou, having contrived the death of his nephew, the earl of Brittany, in order to succeed to the earldom, his confessor sent him, in token of the murder, to Jerusalem, attended by only two servants, one of whom was to lead him by a ladder to the Holy Sepulchre, the other to strip and whip him there, like a common malefactor. Broom, in French peau, in Latin genista, being the only tough, plant shrub in Palestine, the noble criminal was smartly scourged with it, and from this instrument of his chastisement he was called Martha-genista, or Plantagenet; other accounts are given. Silvester and Michay.

The Disogyne Lotus, the late plum, was brought from Barbary, before 1596; the Pishamin plum, Disogyne virginiana, from America, before 1629. Exceedingly delicious, apricots, and peaches went by this name, as sailors do to this day.

PLUMBAGO, see Graphite.

PLURALITIES. Clergymen have been restrained from holding more than one benefice by several statutes; the first being 21 Henry VIII. 1530. In 1838 an act was passed prohibiting the holding of more than two benefices except they were at a distance less than ten miles; and the law on this subject was still further amended in 1850, 1855, and 1865, provisions being made for the amalgamation of neighbouring benefices. See Electors.

PLURAL NUMBER, see We.

PLUS (+) AND MINUS (-). Professor De Morgan attributes these signs to either Christopher Rudolf, who published a book on algebra about 1522, or Michael Stifelius, about 1544.

PLYMOUTH, a fortified seaport in Devonshire, originally Sutton, was incorporated as Plymouth in 1439. It was in 1588 the rendezvous of the English fleet of 120 sail under Howard, Drake, &c., which pursued the Spanish armada. The fine hotel and assembly-rooms were burnt 6 Jan. 1867; loss about 50,000l. The National Association for Social Science met here, Sept. 1872. See Armada, 1888, 1890, Breakwater, and Population.

PLYMOUTH BRETHREN, a body of Christians calling themselves "the Brethren," first appeared at Plymouth about 1830. In 1847 they had 132 places of worship in England and Wales. They object to national churches as too latitudinarian, and to other dissenters as too sectarian. They receive into communion all who confess Christ, and own the Holy Ghost as his vicar. Their doctrines agree with those of most evangelical protestant churches, but they recognise no order of ministers. Mr. Darby, regarded as their founder, afterwards separated from them with some adherents.

PNEUMATIC DESPATCH COMPANY, to convey letters and parcels through tubes by means of atmospheric pressure and a vacuum. The company's act was passed 13 Aug. 1859, and tubes were laid down in Threadneedle-street on 12 Sept. 1860; and on 20 Aug. 1861, successful experiments were performed at Reims. In 1862 tubes were laid down from the Euston railway station to the N. W. post-office in Camden-town, and on 21 Feb. 1863, the conveyance of the mail-bags began. In Oct. 1865, tubes had been laid down between Euston railway and Holborn; and on 7 Nov. several persons journeyed by them. Engineer, Mr. Rammell. The company stopped through insufficient support, 1876. A pneumatic tube by Siemens, employed to transmit telegraphic messages, began about Jan. 1871.

POET-LAUREAT. Selden could not trace the precise origin of this office.

Warton, in his History of English Poetry, states that in the reign of Henry III. there was a Versefactor Regis, to whom an annual stipend was first paid of one hundred shillings.

Chaucer, on his return from abroad, assumed the title of poet-laureat; and in the twelfth year of Richard II., 1389, he obtained a grant of an annual allowance of wine. In the reign of Edward IV. John Kay was laureat; Andrew Bernard was laureat, temp. Henry VII.; and John Skelton, temp. Henry VIII.

James I. in 1615, granted to his laureat a yearly pension of 100 marks; and in 1630, this stipend was augmented by letters patent of Charles I. to 100l. per annum, with an additional grant of one tierce of Canary Spanish wine to be taken out of the king's store of wine yearly. We believe that on Scott's appointment the tierce of Canary wine was commuted for 25l.

Laureate Eusden commenced a series of Birth-Day and New Year's Odes, which continued till the death of Pyc, in 1823.

On the death of Warton his abolition was recommended by Gibbon, whose elegant compliment on the occasion still more forcibly applied on Wordsworth's death, in 1850—"This is the best time for not filling up the office, when the prince is a man of virtue, and the poet just departed was a man of genius."

POISONING. A number of Roman ladies formed a conspiracy and poisoned their husbands. A female slave denounced 170 of them to Fabius Maximus, who ordered them to be publicly executed, 331 B.C. It was said that this was the first public knowledge they had of poisoning at Rome. Poisoning was made petty treason in England, and was punished by boiling to death (of which there are some remarkable instances), 23 Henry VIII. 1531, see Boiling to death. The frequency of cases of poisoning by means of arsenic, in England, caused the British legislature to pass a law rendering the sale of arsenic difficult (14 Vict. c. 13, 6 June, 1851). The sale of poison is now regulated by the Pharmacy act of 1868. Additional restrictions enacted by act passed in 1885. The Poisoned Grain Prohibition Act was passed 28 July, 1863.

A deadly poison freely administered by Italians in the seventeenth century was called acqua tofana from the name of the woman Tofana who made and sold it in small flat vials. She earned on this traffic for half a century, and eluded the police but on being taken, confessed that she had been a party in poisoning 600 people. Numerous persons were implicated by her and many of them were publicly executed. All Italy was thrown into a ferment, and many fled and some persons of distinction on conviction, were strangled in prison. It appeared to have been chiefly used by married women who were tired of their husbands. Four or six drops were a fatal dose but the effect was not sudden and therefore not suspected. It was as clear as water but the chemists have not yet detected its real composition. A proclamation of the pope described it as a mortar distilled into arsenic and others considered it as a solution of crystallised arsenic.

* On 22 Feb. 1846 an Austrian force under General Collin, which had entered Cracow in the approach of armed bands of peasants was attacked and driven out of the town. A provisional government was then proclaimed by the insurgents, and two days afterwards they crossed the Vistula, expecting to be joined by the peasantry of Galicia, who were solicited by the nobles and clergy to strike a blow in the cause of liberty. The Austrian government, in order to prevent this junction, excited in the peasantry a suspicion of the motives of the nobles, and offered a reward for every noble discovered alive or dead. A general massacre of the nobility and clergy in the circle of Tarnow followed the insurgents from Cracow were defeated at Gdow, whence they retreated to Podgorze, a suburb of Cracow, here they were attacked by general Collin, and driven into Cracow on the 17th of February. The forces of the three powers then began to concentrate on Cracow, the people in the town opened negotiations with the Austrians about a surrender, and while these were going on a Russian army entered the town without resistance, and soon afterwards the revolution was at an end.

POMEGRANATE TREE (Punica Granatum) was brought to England from Spain before 1584.

POMERANIA, a Prussian province, N. Germany, was held by the Poles, 980, and by Denmark, 1210; made an independent duchy, 1479; and divided between Sweden and Brandenburg, 1648. The Swedish part, awarded to Denmark in 1814, was given up to Prussia for Lauenburg, 1815; see Denmark; W. rock, 1878.

POMFRET or PONTEFRAC (S. York). At the castle (built 1080), Richard II. was confined and murdered, 10 Feb. 1400. Some writers assert that Richard escaped and died in Scotland. In this castle also, the earl Rivers, lord Grey, sir Thomas Vaughan, and sir Richard Haut or Hauze, were put to death by order of the duke of Gloucester, then protector of England (afterwards Richard III.) about 26 June, 1483. The castle, which had stood four sieges, was dismantled in 1449. The first parliamentary election by ballot took place here, 15 Aug. 1872, very quietly. It lost one of its two members in 1875. Population, 1881, 8,798; 1891, 9,702.

POMPEII (S. Italy), an ancient city of Campania, was partly demolished by an earthquake in A.D. 63. It was afterwards rebuilt, but was overwhelmed by an eruption of Vesuvius, accompanied by an earthquake, on the night of 24 Aug. 79. The principal citizens were then assembled at a theatre where public spectacles were exhibited. The ashes buried the whole city and covered the surrounding country. After a lapse of fifteen centuries, a countryman, as he was turning up the ground, found a bronze figure; and this discovery led to further search, which brought numerous other objects to light, and at length the city was uncovered. The part first cleared was supposed to be the main street, 1750. The kings of Naples greatly aided in exploring Pompeii, and the present Italian government resumed the work in 1863.

Further discoveries made, autumn 1882 et seq.
The remains of a handsome five-storied house were uncovered . . . July, 1890.

POMPEY'S PILLAR stands about three-quarters of a mile from Alexandria, between the city and the lake Mareotis. The shaft is fluted, and the capital ornamented with palm-leaves; the whole, which is highly polished, composed of three pieces, and of the Corinthian order. The column measures, according to some, 94 feet; to others 141, and even 160 feet; but of its origin, name, use, and age, nothing is certain.

It is generally believed that the column has no reference to Pompey, to whom a mark of honour was, nevertheless, set up somewhere about this part. One supposes the edifice was dedicated to Venusian, another to Serapis; and Mr. Clarke, from a half-erased inscription on the base, considered that Adrian is the person honoured; while many assert, from the same inscription, that it is dedicated "to Diocletian Augustus, most adorable emperor, tutelary deity of Alexandria."

PONDICHERY (S.E. India), the capital of French India, and first settled by the French in 1674. It was taken from them by the Dutch in 1693, restored 1697; besieged by the English, 1748; taken by them, Jan. 1761; restored, 1763; again taken, Oct. 1778; restored in 1783; taken 23 Aug. 1793, and in 1803; restored, 1815. Visited by the Viceroy of India (Earl Dufferin), Dec. 1886. Prosperous state of the colony reported Jan. 1889. Population in 1890, 283,053.

PONDOLAND, the coast between Cape Colony and Natal, S. Africa, the British protectorate was proclaimed and notified, 6 Jan. 1885.

PONT-À-CHIN, see Espierres.

PONT-À-NOYELLIES. At this place, near Amiens, took place a fierce indecisive conflict, lasting from 11 A.M. to 6 P.M., between the Germans under Marteau and the French army of the north under Faidherbe, 23 Dec. 1870. Both sides claimed a victory; the French general asserted that he remained master of the field.

PONTEFRAC, see Pumfret.

PONTIFFS (Latin Pontifex), the highest Roman sacerdotal order, established by Numa. The college first consisted of 4 pontifices, with a chief (Pontifex Maximus); to these 4 plebeians were added, by the Ogulian law, 300 B.C. Sylla increased the number to 15 (8 augures, 7 minoris), (81), and Julius Cæsar to 16. T. Coruncanus, a plebeian, obtained this office, 254 B.C.

PONTUS, in Asia Minor, seems to have been a portion of Cappadocia, and received its name from its vicinity to the Pontus Euxinus. Artabanus was made king of Pontus by Darius Hyastapes in the 4th century B.C. His successors were mere satraps of the kings of Persia.

POPE (from the Greek Pappas and Papa, a father or grandfather), considered by Romanists to be the visible chief of the church, the vicar of Jesus Christ, and the successor of St. Peter. He styles himself "servant of the servants of God." The title pope was formerly given to all bishops. It was first adopted by Hyginus, 139; and pope Boniface III. induced Phocas, emperor of the east, to confer it on the prelates of Rome, 606. By the confinement of Phocas as the pope's supremacy over the Christian church was established; see Italy, Reformation, and Rome, Modern.

PORCELAIN, see Pittry.

PORPHYROGENITUS, "born in the purple," a term applied to emperors of the east, born while their fathers were reigning.

PORT BRETON, an isle near New Caledonia, South Pacific.

In 1877 the marquis Du Breil de Rays purchased of the king Maragan a quantity of land on which to found a colony. Growing prospects were issued in France, a company was formed, and the scheme being favoured by the legitimists, a large number of shares were purchased and much money received. Other speculating companies were formed, and colonial government officers nominated. In spite of warning and prohibition several vessels sailed in 1879 with emigrants to meet with misery, disease, and, to a large extent, with death. A few who had been landed in New Caledonia got back to France and published an account of their sufferings. The marquis and some of his associates were brought to trial 27 Nov. 1883; he was sentenced to four years' imprisonment and a fine of 2000 francs. His associates to shorter imprisonment, 2 Jan. 1884; on appeal, sentence confirmed, 14 March, 1884.

PORTE, or SUBLIME PORTE, official name of the court of the sultan of Turkey. Moustassim, the last of the Abbasside caliphs (1243-58), fixed in the threshold of the principal entrance to his palace at Bagdad a piece of the black stone adored at Mecca, and thus this entrance became the "porte" by eminence, and the title of his court. The sultans, successors of the caliphs, assumed the title. — Bonillat.

PORTEOUS MOB. Capt. Porteous, at Edinburgh, on 15 April, 1736, commanded the guard at the execution of Wilson, a smuggler, who had saved the life of a fellow criminal, by springing upon the soldiers around them, and by main force keeping them back, while his companion fled. This excited great commotion, and the spectators pelted the guard with stones. Fearing a rescue, Porteous ordered his men to fire upon the mob, and seventeen persons were killed or wounded. He was found guilty of murder, 22 June, 1736; but the queen granted him a reprieve (the king being then in H-nover). The people, at night, broke open the prison, took out Porteous, and hanged him on a dyer's sign-post, in the Grass-market, 7 Sept. 1736. None of the rioters were ever detected.

PORTER. Dr. Ashe says that this beverage obtained its appellation on account of its having been drunk by porters in the city of London, about 1730.* The number of licensed brewers in 1850, in England, was 2257; in Scotland, 154; and in Ireland, 96—total, 2507. On 17 Oct. 1814, at Meux's brewhouse two large vats of porter burst, destroying neighbouring houses. Several lives were lost; and the loss was between 8000 and 9000 barrels.

* The malt liquor previously in use was ale, beer, and twopenny, and it was customary to call for a pint or tankard of half-ale-half, i.e., half of ale, and half of beer. In the course of time it also became the practice to ask for a pint of three-thirds, meaning a third of ale, beer, and twopenny. To avoid trouble, Harwood, a brewer, made a liquor which partook of the united flavours of ale, beer, and twopenny, calling it entire, or entire butt beer, meaning that it was drawn entirely from one cask or butt. Being disliked by porters and other working people, it obtained its name of porter, and was first retailed at the "Blue Land," Curtain-road. — Lough.

the English and Dutch, 18 Feb 1653, which continued for three days. The English destroyed eleven Dutch men-of-war and thirty merchantmen. Van Tromp was admiral of the Dutch, and Blake of the English.—Here is found the noted freestone used for building our finest edifices. The Portland lights were erected 1716 and in 1789. The pier, with nearly half a mile square of land, was washed into the sea in Feb 1792. Prince Albert laid the first stone of the Portland breakwater, 25 July, 1849, and the last stone was laid by the prince of Wales, 10 Aug 1872. Mr James Rendel, the first chief engineer, was succeeded on his death in 1856 by Mr (aft sir) John Coode. The breakwater and other harbour works cost £1,033,600 exclusive of convict labour. The Portland prison was established in 1848. A mutiny among the convicts here in Sept 1858, was promptly suppressed.

PORTLAND (or BARBERIN) VASE. This beautiful specimen of Greek art (composed of a glass-like substance, with figures and devices raised on it in white enamel, hgt. 10 inches, diameter in the broadest part, 7, with a handle on each side) was discovered about the middle of the 16th century, in a marble sarcophagus in a sepulchre at a place called Monte del Grano, about 2½ miles from Rome. The sarcophagus was supposed to have been that of the Roman Emperor, Alexander Severus (222-235), and his mother Mamaea, and the vase is supposed to have been the emerald urn of one of these 101 personages. It was placed in the palace of the Barberini family, at Rome, where it remained till 1770, when it was purchased by sir William Hamilton, from whose possession it passed to that of the dukes of Portland 1787, at the sale of her effects, it is said to have been bought by the then duke of Portland, who, in 1810, deposited it (on loan) in the British Museum. On 27 Feb 1845, this vase was smashed to pieces with a stone by a man named William Lloyd, it has been skillfully repaired, and is now shown to the public in a special room. Joseph Wedgwood made a mould of it and took a number of casts.

The Port Royal des Champs, in 1676, became the retreat of the Arnaulds, Tilletmont, Pascal, Lancelot, and other eminent Jansenists, who devoted themselves to education, and produced the Port Royal grammars, logic, and other works. This institution was condemned by the pope in 1709, and the buildings were pulled down and tombs desecrated, by the order of Louis XIV in 1719. The Port Royal at Paris was suppressed, with other monasteries, in 1790.

PORTUGAL, the ancient Lusitania. The present name is derived from Porto Callo, the original appellation of Oporto. After a nine years' struggle, under Viriathus a brave able leader, the Lusitanians submitted to the Roman arms about 139 B.C. Portugal underwent the same changes as Spain on the fall of the Roman empire. There are in Portugal two universities, that of Coimbra, founded in 1308, and the smaller one of Evora, founded in 1534. Lisbon has also its royal academy, and the small town of Thomas has an academy of sciences, but, in general, literature is at a low ebb in Portugal. The poet Camoens, called the Virgil of his country, and author of the Lusiad (1566), translated into English by Knapton, was a native of Lisbon. Population of the kingdom and colonies, 31 Dec 1865 8,037,191. PREBENDARY a clergyman attached to a cathedral or collegiate church, who receives an income termed prebends for officiating at stated times. The office slightly differs from that of a canon.

PRECEDENCE was established in very early ages, and was amongst the laws of Justinian. In England the order of precedence was regulated solely by two statutes, 31 Hen. VIII. 1539, and 1 Geo. I. 1714.

PRECEPTORS, COLLEGE OF, Bloomsbury, London, established in 1826, and incorporated by royal charter 26 March, 1829, for promoting sound learning, especially among the middle classes, by the instruction of teachers, and by the examination of pupils at stated times.

New building in Bloomsbury Square opened by the prince of Wales, 30 March, 1827.

PREDESTINATION (Ephes. i.). The doctrine concerning this is defined in the seventeenth article of the Church of England (Ephes. i. and Romans ix.). It was maintained by St. Augustin, and opposed by Pelagius, in the early part of the 5th century. In later times it has been maintained by the Augustinians, Jansenists, the church of Scotland, and many dissenters (termed Calvinistic), and opposed by the Dominicans, Jesuits, and dissenters (termed Arminian), especially by the Wesleyan methodists.

PREHISTORIC ARCHÆOLOGY began in Sweden, and first systematised by Mr. Nilsson. Daniel Wilson's "Archæology and Pre-historic Annals of Scotland," published 1851. An international congress for treating prehistorical subjects met at Neuchâtel in 1866, and at Paris in 1867. At the third meeting at Norwich, Aug. 1868, it assumed the name of "International Congress for Prehistoric Archæology," and published its transactions in 1869. A meeting was held at Stockholm 7-14 Aug. 1874. See Barraeus, Men, and Ancient Monuments.

Sir John Lubbock divides prehistoric archæology into four great epochs: 1. The Drift or Palæolithic or old stone age; 2. The Neolithic or polished stone age; 3. The Bronze age; 4. The Iron age, when bronze was superseded. (1860.)

PRE-RAPHAELITE SCHOOL, a name given about 1850, to J. E. Millais, Wm. Holman Hunt, D. G. Rossetti, and other artists, who opposed the routine conventionality of academic teaching, and resolved to study nature as it appeared to them, and not as it appeared in the antique. For a short time they published "The Germ, or Art and Poetry," beginning in 1850. Their works have been much criticised, but their influence has been beneficial. Their principles are much advocated by the great art-critic, John Ruskin.

PREROGATIVE COURT, in which formerly all wills were proved, and all administrations taken, which belonged to the archbishop of Canterbury by his prerogative, a judge being appointed by him to decide disputes.* Appeals from this court, previously to the pope, were commanded to be made to the king in chancery, 1533; to the privy council in 1830-2. This court was abolished, and the Probate Court established in 1857. Sir John Dodson, the last judge, died in 1858.

PREROGATIVE, ROYAL. In England the sovereign is the supreme magistrate, and it is a maxim that he can do no wrong. He is the head of the established church, of the army and navy, and the fountain of office, honour, and privilege, but is subject to the laws, unless exempted by name. The royal prerogatives were greatly exceeded by several despotic sovereigns, such as Elizabeth, James I., and Charles I. Elizabeth used the phrase "We, of our Royal prerogative, which we will not have argued or brought in question" (1591). James I. told his parliament "that as it was blasphemous to question what the Almighty could do of His power, so it was sedition to inquire what a

* The records date from 1382; but the testamentary jurisdiction from that year to 1297 was exercised by the court of arches. Then abp. Stafford transferred it to a new court; president, the commissary of the prerogative court of Canterbury. There was also a prerogative court of the archbishop of York.

king could do by virtue of his prerogative." These extreme doctrines were nullified by the revolution of 1688, and the exercise of the prerogative is now virtually subject to parliament, see Lords.

PRESBURG, the ancient capital of Hungary, where the diets were held and the kings crowned (on 26 Dec. 1805, a treaty was signed between France and Austria, by which the ancient states of Venice were ceded to Italy, the principality of Montserrat, part of the bishopric of Passau, the city of Augsburg, the Tyrol, all the possessions of Austria in Suabia, in Brisgau, and Ortenau, were transferred to the elector of Bavaria, and the duke of Württemberg, who, as well as the duke of Baden, were then created kings by Napoleon. The independence of the Helvetic republic was also stipulated. A new iron and stone railway and passenger bridge over the Danube was inaugurated by the emperor, 30 Dec. 1890. Population, 1890, 52,444.

PRESBYTERIANS are so called from their maintaining that the government of the church appointed in the New Testament was by presbyters, or association of ministers and ruling elders, equal in power, office, and in order. "The elders (Greek, presbyteros) I exhort, who am also an elder (synpresbyteros)" 1 Peter 5. Presbyterism was accepted by parliament in place of episcopacy in England in 1648, but set aside at the restoration in 1660. It became the established form of church government in Scotland in 1666. Its tenets were embodied in the Formulas of Faith said to have been composed by John Knox, in 1580, which was approved by the parliament, and published, 1597, and finally settled by an act of the Scottish assembly, 1696, afterwards secured by the treaty of union with England in 1707. The first Presbyterian meeting-house in England was established at Wandsworth, Surrey, 20 Nov. 1572.

On 17 Nov. 1838, the Canadian rebels were attacked by the British under major Young, and (on the 18th) by lieutenant Dundas, who dispersed the insurgents, several of whom were killed, and many taken prisoners, and the remainder surrendered. The troops also suffered considerably.

PRESS ASSOCIATION (a company "limited") was established by the newspaper proprietors of London and the provinces, at a meeting at Manchester, 29 June, 1868, to make arrangements to enable them to avail themselves of the increased facilities for the speedy transmission of news afforded by the post office, in consequence of the purchase of the rights of all the telegraph companies, authorized by the Telegraph Act of 1868. The organization of the association was completed at a meeting in London, 3 March, 1869. The Provincial Newspaper Society, out of which it sprang, was founded in 1836, and became the Newspaper Society in 1889. Since 1868 the number of good daily provincial newspapers, containing the latest news of the world, has very greatly increased.

PRESS, LIBERTY OF THE. The expression "let it be printed" was much used on the title-pages of books printed in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. The liberty of the press was severely restrained, and the number of master-printers in London and Westminster limited by the Star Chamber, 13 Charles I., July 1, 1637. John Milton published his noble work, "Areopagitica, or, a speech for the Liberty of Unlicensed Printing," 1644. See Fourth Estate.

Disorders in printing were repressed by the parliament in 1543 and 1569 and by Charles II. 1666. The morning of the 11th (by a house established in 1633 and 1693) also in 1695.
The best. The liberty of the press is like the sun we breathe—if we have it not we die. was first given at the Crown and Anchor tavern at St. White, 1799.
It was intended and the printer's name required to be placed on both the first and last of a book, July 1793.
The severity of the restrictions on the French press relaxed by M. Peigney, minister of the interior, but soon restored, Dec. 1860.
The liberty of the press in the United States greatly limited during the civil war, 1861-1865.

PRESS-GANG for the royal navy was regulated by statute, 13th & by 5 & 6 Will IV 1835; the compulsory service is limited to five years, see Imprisonment.

PRESSING TO DEATH, see Mutiny.

PRESTON (Lancashire). Near here Cromwell totally defeated the royalists under sir Marmaduke Langdale, 17 Aug. 1648. Preston was taken in 1715 by the Scotch insurgents, under Fenton, who proclaimed king James VII. They were defeated in a battle on 12, 13 Nov. by generals Wiles and Carpenter, who with the royal army invested Preston on all sides. The Scots laid down their arms, and their nobles and leaders were secured, some were shot as deserters, and others sent to London prisoned and bound together, to intimidate their party.—The stoppage of the cotton manufacture in 1861 and 1862, through the civil war in America, occasioned great suffering in Preston. See Peppercorn.

The Preston Guild Merchant Festival said to have been instituted in Saxony (as recorded as being given, 1298 and to have been kept once in 20 years regularly since 1562, was duly celebrated in Sept. 1866 and Sept. 1882.

 took place among the workmen in the north of England. Those at Preston struck for an increase of 10 per cent. on their wages. On 15 Oct the masters, in consequence, closed forty-nine mills and 20,000 persons were thrown out of employment, who were mostly maintained for a long time by subscriptions from their friends. In the week ending 17 Dec 1852 there were 14,141 at the cost of about 81. The committee of workmen addressed Lord Palmerston, 12 Nov., who gave them his advice. 14 Dec. 1853

He continued wandering among the wilds of Scotoffered for taking him, he was constantly pursued by the British troops, often captured and sent to his enemies, but still rescued by some in his accident, and at length escaped from the island of Uist to Mull on Sept 11. 1748

 Ireland, May, 1882, 1887, &c. &c.

PREVENTIVE MEDICINE. The discoveries of Pasteur, Koch, and others, relative to the propagation of disease by minute germs (see Germs Theory), led to the gradual formation of a British Institute of Preventive Medicine by a committee of eminent physiologists and medical men.

Sir Joseph Lister was proposed as the first president, and Cambridge as the site of the Institute, Dec 1890.

PRICES, see Corn, Bread, and Provisions.
 Mr T Tooke, in 1838, published a "History of Prices from 1793 to 1836." He was latterly aided by Mr. W Newman's "History of Agriculture and Prices" (1259-1702). By Mr J E T Rogers, six volumes published 1866-87, he died 13 Oct 1890.

PRIDE'S PURGE. On the 6th Dec 1648, colonel Pride, with two regiments, surrounded the house of parliament, and during the passage forty-one members of the Presbyterian party, sent them to a low room, then called hell. Above 160 other members were excluded, and none admitted but the most famous of the Independents. The privileged members were named the Rump parliament, which was dissolved by Cromwell, 20 April,

PRIENCE, one of the twelve cities of the Ionian league in Asia Minor. The temple of Minerva Polias, founded here by Alexander the Great, and the work of Pythias, was excavated by Mr R P Pullan, for the Dilettanti Society, in 1868-9.

PRIEST (derived from presbyteros, elder), in the English church the minister who presides over the public worship. In Gen vii 18, Melchisedek king of Salem is termed "priest of the most high God." (1913 B.C. see Hebrews vii.) The Greek hierous, like the Jewish priest, had a sacerdotal character, which idea of the priesthood is still maintained by the Romists and those who favour their views. Among the Jews, the priests assumed their office at the age of thirty years. The dignity of high or chief priest was fixed in Aaron's family, 1491 B.C. After the captivity of Babylon, the civil government and the crown were superadded to the high priesthood, it was the peculiar privilege of the high priest, that he could be prosecuted in no court but that of the great Sanhedrim. The heathens had their arch-priest or high priest, resembling the Christian archbishop. For "Priest in Absolution," see Holy Communion.

PRIMER. A book so named from the Romish book of devotions and formerly set forth or published by authority, as the first book children should publicly learn or read in schools, containing prayers and portions of the scriptures. Primers were printed 1535, 1539. Henry VIII issued a prayer-book called a "primer" in 1545. The three were published by Dr Burton in 1834.

PRIMOGENITURE, RIGHT OF. A usage brought down from the earliest times. The first-born in the patriarchal ages had a superiority over his brethren, and in the absence of his father was priest to the family. In some parts of England, by the ancient customs of gavel-kind and borough-English, primogeniture was superadded. It came in with the feudal law, 3 Will I 1068. The rights of primogeniture abolished in France, 1790.

PRIMROSE LEAGUE, formed in 1884 in memory of the late lord Beaconsfield (with whom the primrose is said to have been a favourite flower) and in support of conservative principles, he died 19 April, 1881, and the anniversary of this day is termed "Primrose Day," when the flower is generally worn by his admirers. The marquis of Salisbury became grand master.

The league, which began with under a thousand members, was declared to consist of 80,000 knights, dames, and associates, with 1,000
 "habitués," on 30 May, 1889.

The league issues great number of political leaflets and wings. "Habitations" have been established in Scotland and Ireland.

About 200 persons were saved, but of the rest about 16 died afterwards. About 600 bodies were recovered and buried; many at Woolwich.

Report dated 6 Nov. 1878.

Coroner's Inquest.—Verdict: "By neglect of the crew did not take necessary precautions in time of coming, &c.; Princess Alice contributed to the collision by not stopping her engines and going astern, &c." 14 Nov. 1878.

PRINTING. Block printing is said to have been invented by the Chinese about 593 A.D., movable types made in the 10th century. The honour of first printing with single types in Europe has been appropriated to Mainz, Strasbourg, Harlem, Venice, Rome, Florence, Basle, and Augsburg; but the names of the three first only are entitled to attention; see Press.

Adrian Junius awards the honour of the invention to Laurens Jahn Koster, of Harlem, "who printed with blocks, a book of images and letters, Speculum Illustrium Salvationis, and compounded an ink more viscous and tenacious than common ink, which blotted, about 2438."

[The leaves of this book, being printed on one side only, were afterwards pasted together.]

[In 1259, Mr. Samuel Leigh Sotheby issued an elaborate work compiled by his father and himself, entitled "Præceptor Typographorum," containing fac-similes, &c., of the block-books of the 15th century, and Mr. J. Russell Smith published a fac-simile of the Biblia Pauperum, a very early block-book.]

PRINTING-MACHINES.—William Nicholson, editor of the Philosophical Journal, first projected (1790-4), but Mr. König first contrived and constructed a working printing machine, which began with producing the Times of 1 Nov. 1824, a memorable day in the annals of typography.

* Samiah Service-books, used at Salisbury, by the devout called Pies (Pies, Latin), as is supposed from the different colour of the text and rubric. Our printing-type Pies is called Cleere by foreign printers.—A. Acley.

In 1818, Mr E. Cowper patented improvements to König's machine printed 2800 an hour on one side. Cowper's improvements increased this number to 4000. This was raised to 15,000 by Mr Applethorn's machine, which printed the Lives.
Hoe's American machine, introduced into London 1858, prints 20,000 an hour.
Marinoni's machine at Paris said to print 36,000 an hour, Dec 1868.

Ingam web rotary machine, invented by Mr W J Ingam, M P, for printing illustrated papers first used to print Illustrated London News, 4 Oct 1877.

PAINTING IN COLOURS was first commenced by the employment of several blocks, to imitate the initial letters in Mss. (for instance, the Wente Palace of Faust, 1425, which has a letter in three colours). Imitations of chiaroscuro soon followed ('Repose in Egypt,' engraving on wood after Louis Charrin, in 1810 in Germany, others by Ugo da Carpi in Italy, 1518).

J & Jackson (1790-54) attempt to imitate water colour drawing, and to print paper-hangings. About 1793, John Skuppe an amateur, printed some chiaroscuro.

In 1829, Mr William Savage produced his remarkable work, 'Hints on Colour Printing,' illustrated by imitations of chiaroscuro, and of coloured drawings, giving details of the process employed.

In 1836 Mr George Baxter procured beautiful specimens of Picture Printing and took out a patent, which expired in 1851. In some of the illustrations to the 'Pictorial Album' (1836), he employed twenty different blocks.

It has been applied to Lithography (hence Chromolithography).

In 1849 Mr G C Topham produced imitations of water-colour drawings by means of 100 different inks and improvements of Savage's process. In 1851, he commenced colour printing by machinery and has since avoided himself of aqua tincts and plates and also of electricity in the use of copper surfaces to obtain purity of color as well as durability.

The huge coloured prints of the Illustrated London News were first issued in Dec 1846.

Mr E. Mervin explained his process of printing many colours at one impression (chromochromy), Society of Arts 13 Dec 1876.

PRIVATEER, a ship belonging to private individuals, sailing with a licence (termed a Letter of Marque), granted by a government in time of war, to seize and plunder the ships of the enemy. The practice, said to have been adopted by Edward I against the Portuguese in 1295, was general during the war between Spain and the Netherlands in the 17th century, and during the last French war privateering was abolished by the great powers of Europe by treaty, 30 March, 1856. The United States government refused to agree unless the right of blockade was also given up. The British government declined this, asserting "that the system of commercial blockade was essential to its naval supremacy." On 17 April, 1861, Jefferson Davis, president of the southern confederacy, announced his intention of issuing letters of marque and on the 19th president Lincoln proclaimed that all southern privateers should be treated as pirates. This decree was not carried out see United States. All the great powers forbade privateering during the American civil war (which see). By the treaty of Washington privateering was prohibited.

Anthony Ashley, earl of Shaftesbury, being president. The number is now unlimited. To attempt the life of a privy councillor in the execution of his office was made capital, occasioned by Cromwell's stabbing Mr. Harley while the latter was examining him on a charge of high treason, 9 Aug., 1711.

The Proceedings and Ordinances of the Privy Council of England from 10 Richard II to 33 Hen VIII, edited by Sir H. Nicolas, 9 vols, were published by the record commissioners, 1834-7.

The attorney-general, Sir R Collier was made a judge of the Common Pleas 7 Nov., and a member of the judicial committee 22 Nov. 1871.

PROTESTANT REFORMATION SOCIETY, established 1820; it employs missionaries and readers.

PROTESTANTS. The emperor Charles V. called a diet at Spire in 1529, to request aid from the German princes against the Turks, and to devise means for allaying the religious disputes which then raged owing to Luther's opposition to the Roman catholic clergy. Against a decree of this diet, to support the doctrines of the church of Rome, six Lutheran princes, with the deputies of thirteen imperial towns, formally and solemnly protested, 19 April, 1529. Hence the term protestants was given to the followers of Luther; it afterwards included Calvinists, and other sects separated from the see of Rome. The six protesting princes were: John, elector of Saxony; George, margrave of Brandenburg; Ernest and Francis, the dukes of Lunenburg; the landgrave of Hesse; and the prince of Anhalt; these were joined by the citizens of Strasburg, Nuremberg, Ulm, Constance, Heilbron, and seven other cities; see Lutheranism, Calvinism, Huguenots, Germany, Church of England, &c.

Simple water distilled from the leaves of the Lau-o-cerasus first ascertained to be a most deadly poison by Dr. Madden of Dublin, see Diss.

These meetings were prohibited by the Gagging acts, which we passed in 1795, see Sedition. In the reign of George IV, the right of public meetings was fully ascertained, and they were very efficient in relation to the passing the Reform acts, the repeal of the Corn Laws, and other important measures. See Hyde Park. The place on which the speakers stand is termed a "platform," corresponding to the Roman cofrum and the French tribune. "The Platform" by Mr H. Jephson, was published in 1792. The term "platform" is also applied to a set of political or religious opinions held by a party, such as the "platform of General" Hoar.

PUMPS Ctesibius of Alexandria is said to have invented pumps (with other hydraulic instruments), about 224 B.C., although the invention is ascribed to Damascus, at Lindus, 148, n.c. Pumps were in general use in England, A.D. 1425 in inscription on the pump in front of the Late Royal Exchange, London, it stated that the well was sunk in 1282. The air pump was invented by Otto Guericke in 1654, and improved by Boyle in 1657, see Air and Boyle.

The period (.) is the most ancient, the colon (:) was introduced about 1485, the comma (,) was first seen about 1527, and the semicolon (;) about 1570. PURCHASE OF LAND, see under Land

PURCHASE SYSTEM in the army. The payment of a present or gratuity for a commission was prohibited by William III, 1693, but in 1702 purchase was legally re-organised. In 1711 the sale of commissions was forbidden without the royal permission. In 1719-20 regulations were issued, and a fixed scale of prices was adopted in consequence of a commission in 1765. Large over-regulation payments continued to be paid. Commissions of inquiry were held frequently since 1858 and in 1877 the system was abolished, with compensation, by royal warrant, 20 July, 1877, the bill for the purpose having been rejected by the house of lords. For amounts paid, see under ARMY.

PURGATIVES of the mild species (aperients), particularly castor, mineral, and senna, are ascribed to Icturius, a Greek physician, 1245.

PURGATORY the middle place between heaven and hell, while it is believed by the Roman Catholics, the soul passes through the fire of purification before it enters the kingdom of God. The doctrine was known about 250, was introduced into the Roman church in the 5th century, and made a religious dogma by Gregory I, 590-604. It was first set forth by a council at Florence, 1439, enforced by the council of Trent, Dec 1563, see Indulgence.

PURIFICATION, after childbirth, was ordained by the Jewish law, 1390 n c (Lev vii), see Chw. ch. 9. The first of the purification was instituted, 542, in honour of the Virgin Mary's going to the temple (Isid. ii). Pope Sergius I ordered the procession with wax tapers, whence Candlemas-day.

PURITANS, the name first given, it is said, about 1564, to persons who aimed at greater purity of doctrine, holiness of living, and stricter discipline than others. They withdrew from the established church, professing to follow the word of God alone, and maintaining that the church retained many human inventions and popish superstitions; see Coburn's, Nonconformists, and Presbyterians.

PURLEY, see Disorders.

PURPLE, a mixed tinge of scarlet and blue, discovered at Tyre. It is said that Hercules Tyrius having observed his dog's lips to be stained, after eating a shell-fish named murex or purpura, was thereby led to invent the dye. Purple was anciently used by the princes and great men for their garments. It was restricted to the emperor by Justinian I. 532, and porphyrogenitus attached to the names of some emperors signifies "born to the purple."

PURVEYANCE, an ancient prerogative of the sovereigns of England of purchasing provisions, &c., without the consent of the owners, led to much oppression. It was regulated by Magna Charta, 1215, and other statutes, and was only surrendered by Charles II. in 1660, for a compensation.

PUSEYISM, a name attached to the views of certain clergymen and lay members of the church of England, who proposed to restore the practice of the church of England to what they believed to be required by the language of her Liturgy and Rubrics, but which were considered by their opponents to be of a Romish tendency. The term was derived from the name of the professor of Hebrew at Oxford, Dr. Edward Pusey. The heads of houses of the university of Oxford passed resolutions censuring Dr. Pusey's attempts to renew practices which are now obsolete, 15 March, 1841; and his celebrated sermon was condemned by the same body, 30 May, 1843; he died 16 Sept. 1882; see Tractarians, and Ritualism.

PYRAMIDS OF EGYPT, about 75 in number, of various sizes, constructed for the preservation of mummies of the kings and their families.

The Stepped Pyramid of Sakkara is conjecturally assigned to Ousagesphes of the first dynasty, see Egypt. Three great pyramids are situated near Gizeh on the W. bank of the Nile. The first or greatest, is said to have been erected as the tomb of Cheops, fourth dynasty, the Cheops of Herodotus, dated by Bunsen, 2723-2666 B.C. Its height is said to have been originally 481 feet, and its base 777 square feet. The second pyramid is ascribed to Chafra, or Chephren, 2666-2633 B.C. The third pyramid is said to have been built by Menkaura or Mycerinus, 2633 B.C.

The pyramids have been visited and described by Belzoni, 1817; Vyse, 1836; C. Piazzi Smith, and others, see Egypt Exploration Fund.

Some of the eleven pyramids at Sakkara have been explored by M. Mariette, 1880 & seq.

At the battle of the Pyramids, Napoleon Bonaparte defeated the Mamelukes, and thereby conquered Lower Egypt, 13 and 21 July, 1798.

PYRENEES. After the battle of Vittoria (fought 21 June, 1813), Napoleon sent Soult to superintend Saragossa, with instructions to drive the allies across the Ebro; Soult retreated into France with a loss of more than 20,000 men, having been defeated by Wellington in a series of engagements from 25 July to 2 Aug. One at the Pyrenees on 28 July. A railway through the Pyrenees (from Bilbao to Miranda) was opened 21 Aug. 1862.—THE PALACE OF THE PYRENEES was concluded between France and Spain, by cardinal Mazarin, for the French king, and don Louis de Haro, on the part of Spain, in the island of Pheasant, on the Bidassoa. By this treaty Spain yielded Roussillon, Artois, and her right to Alsace; and France ceded her conquests in Catalonia, Italy, &c., and engaged not to assist Portugal; Nov. 1659.

Improvements were made by Elliott and others. Wedgwood employed clay cylinders, 1782-6. In 1830 professor Daniell received the Rumford medal for an excellent pyrometer made in 1821. Mr. Ericsson's pyrometer appeared in the Great Exhibition of 1851. (Egy. Cyc.) Mr. (aft. air) C. W. Siemens employed electric resistance in his pyrometer, exhibited in 1871.

PYROPHONE (Greek, pur, fire; phone, voice), a musical instrument, invented by M. Frédéric Kastner, of Paris. It consists of glass tubes of various lengths; the tones being produced by what are termed "singing flames." It is based upon the "chemical harmonicon." Keys are attached for playing, as in the piano. The invention was reported to the French Academy of Sciences, 17 March, 1873; exhibited at Vienna, same year; and at the Society of Arts, 17 Feb. 1875. M. Kastner died aged 31, 6 April, 1882.

PYROXYLIN, the chemical name of Gun Cotton (which see).

PYRTHONISM, see Sceptics.

PYTHAGOREAN PHILOSOPHY.

Pythagoras, of Samos, head of the Italic sect, flourished in the 6th century B.C. He is said to have taught the doctrine of metempsychosis, or transmigration of the soul from one body to another, forbidden his disciples to eat flesh and beans, invented the multiplication table, improved geometry, and taught the present system of astronomy.

PYTHIAN GAMES, in honour of Apollo, near the temple of Delphi; asserted to have been instituted by himself, in commemoration of his victory over the serpent, Python. Also said to have been established by Agamemnon, or Diomedes, or Amphictyon, or lastly, by the council of the Amphictyons, 1203 B.C. They lasted till 394.

PYX, the casket in which Catholic priests keep the consecrated wafer. In the ancient chapel of the pyx, at Westminster abbey, are deposited the standard pieces of gold and silver, under the joint custody of the lords of the treasury and the comptroller-general. The "trial of the pyx" signifies the verification by a jury of goldsmiths of the coins deposited in the pyx or chest by the master of the mint; this took place on 17 July, 1861, at the exchequer office, Old Palace-yard, in the presence of twelve privy councillors, twelve goldsmiths, and others, and on 15 Feb. 1870. This trial is said to have been ordered in the reign of Henry II., 1154-89; King James was present at one in 1611. The first annual trial of the pyx, appointed by the Coinage act of 1870, took place 18 July, 1871.

QUACKERY.

QUACKERY, or medical imposture, is very ancient. Quack medicines were taxed in 1783 et seq. An inquest was held on the body of a young lady, Miss Cashin, whose physician, St. John Long, was afterwards tried for manslaughter, 21 Aug. 1830; he was found guilty, and sentenced to pay a fine of 25*ol.*, 30 Oct. following. He was tried for manslaughter in the case of Mrs. Catherine Lloyd, and acquitted, 19 Feb. 1831. Dr. Vrita, "the black doctor," a professed cancer-curer, at Paris, was condemned to fifteen months' imprisonment as an impostor in Jan. 1860.

QUADRAGESIMA SUNDAY, first Sunday in Lent and 40th day before Good Friday; see Lent, and Quinquagesima.

QUADRANT, a mathematical instrument in the form of a quarter of a circle. The solar quadrant was introduced about 290 a.c. The Arabian astronomers used the calpita, in 995, had a quadrant of 21 feet 8 inches radius, and a sextant 59 feet 9 inches radius. Davis's quadrant for measuring angles was produced about 1600; Hadley's quadrant about 1731; see Navigation.

QUADRILATERAL or QUADRANGLE, terms applied to four strong fortresses in N. Italy, long held by the Austrians, but surrendered to the Italians, Oct. 1866;—Peschiera, on an island in the Mincio; Mantua on the Mincio; Vicenza and Legnago, both on the Adige; see Italy, Peschiera, &c. The Turish Quadrilateral was Slumla, Varna, Rustchuk, and Silistria, lost to the sultan by the treaty of Berlin, which established the autonomy of Bulgaria.

QUADRILLE, a dance (originally quadrille de contre danse, introduced into French ballets about 1745), in its present form became popular in France about 1801. It was introduced into this country about 1808 (Miss Berry), and promoted by the duke of Devonshire and others, in 1813. Raisins.

QUADRIVIUM, see Arts.

QUADRUPE ALLIANCE. That between Great Britain, France, and the emperor (signed at London, 22 July, 1718), on the accession of the states of Holland, 8 Feb. 1719, obtained its name. It guaranteed the succession of the reigning families of Great Britain and France, settled the partition of the Spanish monarchy, and led to war.

QUADRUPE TREATY, concluded in London 22 April, 1834, by the representatives of Great Britain, France, Spain, and Portugal, guaranteed the possession of her throne to Isabella II., the young queen of Spain.

QUADRUPEX TELEGRAPHY, see under Electricity.

QUESTORS (seekers). Two questores paritici, public prosecutors, in cases of murder and other capital crimes, seated in Rome under the kings; two questores classici, who had the management of the public treasure; appointed about 484 a.c. The number of questors was raised from time to time, as circumstances demanded. Plots were first elected in 409 a.c. There were eight questors in 265. Sylla raised the number to twenty; Julius Cæsar to forty.

QUAKERS or SOCIETY OF FRIENDS, originally called Seekers, from their seeking the truth, and afterwards Friends (3 John, 14). Justice Bennet, of Derby, gave the society the name of Quakers in 1650, because George Fox (the founder) admonished him and those present to quake at the word of the Lord. This sect was commenced in England about 1645, by George Fox (then aged 22), who was joined by George Keith, William Penn, and Robert Barclay, of Ury, and others. Fox rejected all religious ordinances, explained away the commands relative to baptism, &c.; discarded the ordinary names of days and months, and used this and thou for you, as more consonant with truth. He published a book of instructions for teachers and professors, and died 13 Jan. 1691. Sir H. Nicolas explains the Quaker calendar in his Chronology of History. The first meeting-house in London was in White Hart-court, Gracechurch-street.

Their principles are contained in "Extracts of minutes" (from the beginning) published 1782; revised 1802, 1862, and 1883.

The Quakers early suffered grievous persecutions. At Boston, U.S., where the first Friends who arrived were females, they (even females) were cruelly scourged, and had their ears cut off, some put to death. In 1659 they stated in parliament that 2000 Friends had endured sufferings and imprisonment in Newgate; and 164 Friends offered themselves at this time, by name, to government, to be imprisoned in lieu of an equal number in danger (from confinement) of death, 1659. Fifty-five (out of 120 sentenced) were transported to America, by an order of council, 1664.

The masters of vessels refusing to carry them for some months, an embargo was laid on West India ships, when a mercenary wretch was at length found for the service. The Friends would not walk on board, nor would the sailors host them into the vessel, and soldiers from the Tower were employed. In 1666, the vessel sailed; but it was immediately captured by the Dutch, who liberated twenty-eight of the prisoners in Holland, the rest having died of the plague. Few reached America.

First meeting of Quakers in Ireland in Dublin in 1658; and their first meeting-house there was opened in Connaught-street.

The solemn affirmation of Quakers enacted to be taken in all cases in the courts below, wherein oaths are required from other subjects (see Affirmation).

William Penn, with a company of Friends, colonised Philadelphia.

John Archdale, a Quaker, elected M.P. for Chipmington; refused to take the oath, and his election was declared void.

Quakers emancipated their negro slaves.

A schism in the society was begun in America about 1829, by Elias Hicks publishing his opinions denying the divinity of Christ and his atonement and the authority of the Holy Scriptures. His numerous followers are styled Hicksite Friends.

Joseph Pease, a Quaker, was admitted to parliament on his affirmation.

The Quakers had in England 423 meeting-houses in 1800, and 372 in 1879.

At an annual assembly it was agreed to recommend that mixed marriages should be permitted, and that many of the peculiarities of the sect in speech and costume should be no longer insisted on.

QUARANTINE: the custom observed at Venice as early as 1127, whereby all merchants and others coming from the Levant were obliged to remain in the house of St. Lazarus, or the Lazaretto, forty days before they were admitted into the city. Various southern cities have now lazarettoes; that of Venice is built in the water. In the times of plague, England and all other nations oblige those that come from the infected places to perform quarantine with their ships, &c., a longer or shorter time, as may be judged most safe. Quarantine acts were passed in 1753 and in 1825. By order of council, 10 Nov. 1866, foreign cattle were made subject to quarantine.

QUARTER SESSIONS were established, 25 Edw. III. 1350-1. The days of sitting were appointed, 2 Hen. V. 1413. In 1830 it was enacted that quarter sessions of the peace should be held in the first week after 11 Oct., 28 Dec., 31 March, and 24 June. Further regulated, 1842, 1848, and 1858.

QUARTERLY REVIEW, the organ of the Tory party. The publication was proposed to Mr. George Canning, and his support solicited by Mr. John Murray, the publisher, in a letter dated 25 Sept. 1807, in opposition to the opinions of the Edinburgh Review. Mr. Murray was ably assisted by Walter Scott, Robert Southey, John Gibson Lockhart (editor 1825-53), J. W. Croker, and other eminent persons. The review first appeared in Feb. 1809, under the editorship of William Gifford, the celebrated translator of "Juvenal." He died 31 Dec. 1826.

QUASI MODO, a name given to Loto Sunday (the first Sunday after Easter) from the commencement of a hymn sung on that day.

QUATERNIONS, an important mathematical method or calculus, invented by Sir Wm. Rowan Hamilton, about 1843.

It is based upon the separation of multiplication from addition, and its fundamental idea is mental transference or motion by what he termed vectors. He attributed to addition motion from a point; to multiplication about a point. Four numbers are generally involved, hence the name quaternion. Hamilton's "Lectures on Quaternions," was published 1853; his "Elements," 1866. Other works by professors Kelland and Tait, published since.

QUATRE-BRAS (Belgium). Here on 16 June, 1815, two days before the battle of Waterloo, a battle was fought between the British and allied army under the duke of Brunswick, the prince of Orange, and sir Thomas Picton, and the French under marshal Ney. The British fought with remarkable intrepidity, notwithstanding their inferiority in number, and their fatigue through marching all the preceding night. The 42nd regiment (Royal Highlanders) suffered severely in pursuit of a French division by snailshells posted in ambush behind growing corn. The duke of Brunswick was killed.

He died in 1741, aged 26 years.

Edipus was the fastest horse that ran in England since the time of Childers; he was never beaten, and died in February, 1789, aged 25 years. His heart weighed 14 lb., which accounted for his wonderful spirit and courage. Charlotte White's Hist. of the Turf RACK, an engine of torture, for extracting a confession from criminals, mentioned by Demosthenes, de Coronis, B.C. 330, and in later times an instrument of the Inquisition. Lord Coke states from tradition that the duke of Exeter, in the reign of Henry VI., erected a rack of torture (thence called the duke of Exeter's daughter, now seen in the Tower, 1447). In the case of Felton, who murdered the duke of Buckingham, the judges of England protested against the proposal of the privy council to put the assassin to the rack, as contrary to the laws, 1628; the use of the rack was abolished 1640. See Ravallius and Torture.

RADCLIFFE LIBRARY, OXFORD, founded under the will of Dr. John Radcliffe, an eminent physician. He died 1 Nov. 1714, leaving 40,000l. to the university of Oxford for the founding a library, the first stone of which was laid 17 May, 1737, and the edifice was opened 13 April, 1749.—The RADCLIFFE OBSERVATORY, Oxford, founded by the exertions of Dr. Hornsby, Savilian professor of astronomy, about 1771, was completed in 1794. The publication of the observations was commenced in 1842, by Mr. Manuel J. Johnson, the director, appointed in 1839.

RADICALS or "RADICAL REFORMERS,"

persons who professed to aim at procuring a thorough reformation in the government and policy of England, became prominent in 1816, when Hampden clubs were formed, of which sir Francis Burdett, lord Cochrane, major Cartwright, and William Cobbett were prominent members. Samuel Bamford's "Life of a Radical," published in 1842, gives much information; he died 13 April, 1872. Many radicals were severely punished, 1817-20. Wm. Harrie's "History of the Radical Party," published early in 1885.—The "Radicals" in the United States were the party headed by Thaddeus Stevens, bitterly opposed to the policy of President Johnson, as too favourable to the subdued Southern States.

The Radical Programme, attributed by the rt. hon. Joseph Chamberlain, widely circulated, first appeared July, 1885, in the Fortnightly Review; it included reform of the land laws, free education, increased local government, reform in taxation and finance, improvement of condition of agricultural labourers and of the poor, and religious equality and disestablishment of national churches. Which tended to disorganise the liberal party.

Mr. O. C. Grenville (Journals, 25 Aug. 1837) describes "Tory Radicals." Some politicians were so termed in 1885.

The National Radical Union at its fourth anniversary at Birmingham, Mr. Chamberlain in the chair, changed its name to National Liberal Union. 24 April, 1889.

RADSTADT, Austria. Here Moreau and the French defeated the Austrians, 5 July, 1796.

RAFFAELLE WARE, see Pottery.

RAGGED SCHOOLS, free schools for outcast destitute ragged children, set up in large towns. The instruction is based on the scriptures, and most of the teachers are unpaid. John Pounds, a cobbler, of Portsmouth, who died in 1839, opened a school of this kind; and one was set up by Andrew Walker, in "Devil's Acre," Westminster, in 1839. Knight. They did not receive their name till 1844, when the "Ragged school union" was formed, principally by Mr. S. Starey and Mr. Wm. Locke (afterwards hon. secretary). The earl of Shaftesbury was chairman. In 1856 there were 150 Ragged school institutions. Sunday ragged schools reported in London in 1867, 226; in 1873, 177; day schools, in 1867, 204; in 1873, 58; week evening schools, in 1867, 207, in 1873, 147. Ragged school buildings were exempted from rates, 1869. The day schools are being gradually superseded by those established by the London school board; but the Sunday and night schools, mother's meetings, &c., are still maintained in very great efficiency (1886). The union has many affiliated institutions (1892). Dr. Guthrie, a founder of ragged schools in Edinburgh, &c., died 24 Feb. 1873. The earl of Shaftesbury presided at the 40th anniversary of the Ragged School Union, 12 May, 1884. See Shoe-Black.

RAGMAN ROLL (said to derive its name from Ragmunde, a papal legate in Scotland) contains the records of the homage and fealty to Edward I., sworn to by the nobility and clergy of Scotland at Berwick in 1296. The original was given up to Robert Bruce, king of Scotland, in 1328, when his son David was contracted in marriage to the princess Joanna of England.

RAGUSA, a city on the Adriatic, on the south confines of Dalmatia, was taken by the Venetians, 1171, but became an independent republic, 1358. It suffered much by an earthquake, 1667; was taken by the French in 1806, and given up to Austria in 1814.

RAILWAY COMMISSIONERS; see Railways, 1873 and 1880.

RAILWAYS. Short roads, in and about Newcastle, laid down by Mr. Beaumont, so early as 1602, are thus mentioned in 1676.—"The manner of the carriage is by laying rails of timber from the colliery to the river, exactly straight and parallel; and bulky carts are made with four rollers fitting those rails, whereby the carriage is so easy that one horse will draw down four or five chaldrons of coals, and is an immense benefit to the coal merchants." Roger North. REGENTS CANAL, begun at Paddington, where it joins a cut to the Grand Junction, passes under Maida-hill, continues its course by the Regent's-park to Islington, where another subterranean excavation, about three-quarters of a mile in length, was formed for its passage. It then proceeds by Hoxton, Hackney, Mile-end, to Limehouse, where it joins the Thames. The whole length of it is nine miles; it comprises twelve locks and thirty-seven bridges. Begun, 1812; opened 1 Aug. 1820. Great explosion of gunpowder (which see), 2 Oct. 1874. New bridge, near Gloucester gate, Regent's park, opened by the duke of Cambridge, 3 Aug. 1878. Regent's Canal and City Railway Co. act passed, 1882.

REGENT'S PARK, originally part of the grounds belonging to a palace of queen Elizabeth, near to the north end of Tottenham court-road, pulled down in 1791. Since 1600, the property was let to various persons, but the leases having expired it reverted to the crown; and in 1814 great improvements were commenced under the direction of Mr. Nash. The park consists of about 450 acres; within it are the gardens of the Zoological Society and the Royal Botanical Society. During a frost on 15 Jan. 1867, the rotten ice of one of the lakes gave way, and about 200 persons were immersed, of whom above 40 perished. Addition of 20 acres made to the public park, 1883.

Joseph Humbold was murdered near York Gate, 24 May. Eight youths, George Galliey, 17, William Ellis, 16, Francis Cole, 18, Peter Lee, 17, William Joseph Graef, 17, William Henshaw, 16, Charles Henry Govier, 16, and Michael Dullin, 15, all described as labourers, were charged with the wilful murder, 2 Aug.; Galliey was convicted: the rest acquitted of murder, 4 Aug.; they pleaded guilty to minor charges, and were sentenced to various terms of penal servitude, 4 Aug. The evidence disclosed the existence of local bands of young rascals carrying on internecine warfare. Joseph Humbold was not the intended victim; Galliey reprieved, Aug. 1884.

REGENT STREET, London, W.; designed and executed by John Nash; authorised by act, 53 George III. 1813. The colonnades of the quadrant were removed in 1848.

REGICIDES, in English history, are the commissioners appointed to try king Charles I, 150 in number, of whom 70 acted, and 59 signed the death-warrant. Jan 1649 Of these 140, 29 were tried, and 10 executed. Harrison, 13 Oct., Cook and Peters, 16 Oct., Scott, Skirrow, Clement, and Jones, 17 Oct., Axtell and Hacker, 19 Oct 1660 They asserted themselves to be martyrs. Others were imprisoned. REGISTERS The registering of deeds and conveyances disposing of real estates was appointed to be effected in Yorkshire and in Middlesex, Anne, 1703, et seq. Greater security was thus given to purchasers and mortgagees, and the value of estates increased in those counties. Wills have been for a series of years kept and registered, in London, at Doctors' Commons, see Wills. The registering of shipping in the Thames was commenced, 1786 and throughout England, 1787, and several acts and amendments of acts have since followed for keeping and improving registers. The duties and payments of the Lord Clerk Register of Scotland and his deputy were regulated by 42 & 43 Vict c 44 1879

REGISTERS, PAPOCHILL, were established by Cromwell, lord Essex, by which the dates of births, marriages, and burials, became ascertainable, Sept 1538. This measure was opposed by the people, who feared some new taxation. A stamp-tax was laid on registers in 1784. Laws for their better regulation were enacted in 1813 et seq the great Registration act (introduced by lord John Russell), 6 & 7 Will IV c 86, passed 17 Aug 1836, see Bills of Mortality, &c.

REGIM DONUM (Royal gift), an allowance from the sovereign for the maintenance of the Presbyterian ministers in Ireland, commenced by Charles II in 1672 and revived by William III in 1690, was commuted by the Irish Presbyterian Church act passed June, 1871. The allowance to certain protestant dissenting ministers in Ireland was given up by them in 1857, in deference to the wishes of English dissenters.

REGULATION OF PUBLIC WORKS, see Public Works

REGULATION OF THE FORCES ACT passed 17 Aug 1871 see Army

REICHENBACH (Prussia). Here Duroc was killed during the conflicts between the French and the allies 22 May, 1813, see Battle of. Here was signed a subsidy treaty between Russia, Prussia, and England, whereby the last engaged to provide means for carrying on the war against Napoleon I on certain conditions, 14 15 June, 1813. Austria joined the alliance soon after.

REICHSRATH, the representative council of the empire of Austria, constituted by decree 5 March, met on 31 May, 1860. In May, 1861, the upper house consisted of 17 spiritual, 55 hereditary, and 39 peers. The lower house consisted of 136 elected deputies. No representatives came from Hungary, Transylvania, Venetia, the Banat, Slavonia, Croatia, and Istria. The Reichsrath was abolished by a rescript, 21 Sept 1865, with the view of restoring autonomy to Hungary and other provinces. It again met 20 May, 1867. The Reichstag of Germany, the imperial parliament or diet, first met at Berlin, 21 Mar 1871.

REIGATE (Surrey), sent two members to parliament in the reign of Edward I, lost one by the Reform Act of 1832, and was wholly disfranchised for corruption by that of 1867. Population, 1881, 18,662, 1891, 22,546.

REIGN OF TERROR Maximilien Robespierre headed the populace in the Champ de Mars, in Paris, demanding the dethronement of the king, 17 July, 1793. He was triumphant in 1793, and numbers of eminent men and citizens were sacrificed during his sanguinary administration. Billand Varennes denounced the tyranny of Robespierre in the tribune, 27 July, 1794. The next day he suffered death, with many of his companions, see France. This has been termed the Red Terror. The reaction after the restoration of the Bourbons, 1815, disgraced by many atrocious acts of wanton cruelty, has been termed the White Terror. The Jesuits were then conspicuous in the destruction of their adversaries.

REIGNS OF SOVEREIGNS The average duration, according to Newton, is 19 years each, according to Hales 22½ years, that of the sovereigns of England being 31½ years, and that of the popes, 7½ years. Pius IX was the first pope who reigned above 25 years, 1846-78.

RELIEF CHURCH, a secession from the church of Scotland, founded by Thomas Gillespie, who was deposed from his ministry for opposing the doctrine of passive obedience to the law of the church of Scotland respecting the settlement of ministers, 23 May, 1752. The church was constituted as the "presbytery of relief," 22 Oct 1761. The Relief and Secession churches were united as the United Presbyterian Church, 13 May, 1847.

RELIEF OF DISTRESS (IRELAND) ACT, 43 & 44 Vict c 14 passed 2 Aug 1880 see Ireland, Dec 1890

RELIGION (from religio, I bind again, in the sense of a vow or oath) comprehends a belief in the being and perfections of God, and obedience to his commandments. The Jewish religion is set forth in the Old, and the Christian religion in the New Testament. Departure from these scriptures has been the origin of all corrupt forms of religion, as foretold in them. Buddhism differs from this. See Mahometanism, and other religions and sects under their names. The population of the globe with reference to religious worship, is given by Balbi (who assumed the total population to be 1,050,000,000), and Dietsch (who assumed it to be 1,288,000,000), as follows:

REMUNSTRANCE, THE GRAND, drawn up by the house of commons, and presented to King Charles I., 1 Dec 1641. It consisted of 206 articles, dwelt bitterly on all the king's illegal and oppressive acts, and was printed by order of the house.

REMUNSTRANTS, see Arguments

RENAISSANCE, a term applied to the revival of the classic style of art in the 15th and 16th centuries, under the patronage of the Medici and RENSBURG (Holstein), was taken by the imperialists in 1627, by the Swedes in 1643, and by the Prussians and confederate troops in 1848. The first diet of Schleswig and Holstein met here 3 April, 1848. It was re-occupied by the Danes in 1852 and taken by the Prussians after a serious conflict, 21 July, 1864.

RENNES (capital of Brittany, N W France) Here was established by Henry II, in 1553, the parliament so celebrated for its independence, especially in its struggle with the court, 1788-89. On 20 May, 1788, it declared infamous every one who should take part in the seigneurie then proposed, but afterwards suppressed.

RENTS said to have been first made payable in money, instead of in kind, about 1135. Numerous statutes have been enacted in various reigns to define the relations and regulate the dealings between landlord and tenant. 8 & 9 Vict c 106 (1845) regulates leases. By the act 8 Anne, 1709, no goods are removable from tenements under an execution until the rent shall have been paid to the landlord by the sheriff, 1709. The rental of England, including land, houses, and mines, was 6,000,000 about the year 1600, and twelve years' purchase the value of land. About 1690, the rental amounted to 14,000,000, and the land was worth eighteen years' purchase. See also on the Revenue. The rental of the United Kingdom has been estimated in the present century at 127,000,000, Great anti-rent agitation in Ireland, 1879, et seq, see Land and Ireland, &c

REPEAL OF THE UNION, IRELAND An Irish association was formed with this object under the auspices of Mr O'Connell, in 1829. See Home Rule and Ireland

A proclamation of the lord lieutenant prohibited the meetings of a society, organized for the purpose of procuring a repeal of the union under the name of the Irish Society for Legal and Legislative Relief or the Anti Union Society. 28 Oct 1820.

The commons by a majority of 484 rejected Mr O'Connell's motion for repeal. 7 April 1824.

A new association in 1841, 1842 and 1843 became more violent. Assemblies of the lower classes of the people were held in the last named year in various parts of the land some of them amounting to 150,000 persons and called 'monster meetings'.

A great meeting at Trim, 16 March other meetings were held at Mullingar, Cork, and Longford, in 1841 and 1842 respectively. At Drogheda, Kilkenny, Mullingar and Dundalk on 5 & 6, 12, and 20 June at Donnybrook and Balintown, and 20 July at Tern 25 Aug at Loughrea, Clifton, and Lamoine, 10, 17 and 24 Sept., and at Mullaghmasat. 1 Oct 1843.

A meeting to be held at Clontarf, on 8 Oct was prevented by government and Mr O'Connell and his chief associates were brought to trial for political conspiracy 15 Jan 1844 and convicted 18 Feb but the sentence was reversed by the house of lords 4 Sept., see Trials.

The association for the repeal of the union continued for some time under the direction of Mr John O'Connell but was little regarded. The total "repeal rent" is said to have amounted to 134,379.

A fruitless attempt was made in Dublin to revive repeal agitation. 4 Dec, 1860.

REPLENISHMENT, see Electricity (Practical)

REPORTING The publication of the debate in parliament is forbidden as a breach of privilege but was virtually conceded, after a severe struggle, in 1771 * Reporters' galleries were erected in the house of parliament after the fire of 1834. To the unfettered liberty of reporting we doubtless owe much of our freedom and good government, see under Law. By the verdict for the defendant in the case of Wason v The Times (for libel) reports of parliamentary debates were decided to be privileged, Nov 1868. For the attempted exclusion of reporters, see Parliament, 1875. A commons convention on reporting recommended continuance of Hansard's debates with improvement, May, 1879.

The publication of Hansard's parliamentary debates began 1852 and closed in 1888. The publication of the debates was taken up by Messrs Macmillan & Co Feb 1889 and continued by the Hansard Publishing Union limited 1889, the Union ordered to be wound up 23 May 1890.

M<sup>r</sup> Thomas Curson Hansard formerly editor of the debates aged 78 dies 12 Nov 1891. Government contract with him as a Telegram company for printing and publishing, 100,000 of parliamentary debates, &c, at Dec 1891, published 26 Feb 1892.

REPRESENTATION OF THE PEOPLE ACT FOR ENGLAND, passed 15 Aug 1867, for Ireland and Scotland, 13 July, 1868, a new act passed, 6 Dec 1884. See Reform.

The Representative a daily Tory paper, was started by Mr John Murray the bookeller 1101, position in the Times in 1846. Although he was assisted by Mr Benjamin Disraeli and other eminent persons, the project was unsuccessful, the first number appeared 2 Jan, the last 29 July 1857.

"REPTILE BUREAUCRACY," term applied in Germany to certain journalists writing for government pay, 1871, &c, &c.

REPUBLICANS, see Democrats. The name adopted by the Northern party in the United States, N A, opposed to the democrats in the South. Sir Charles Dilke, M P professed himself a republican at public meetings and was much applauded, Nov 1871, but at some places his appearance led to riotous proceedings. His motion for returns respecting the expenditure of the civil list by the queen was negatived in the house of commons (2-276), 19 March, 1872. A national republican conference of delegates was held at Sheffield, 1 Dec 1872, when a national flag was adopted.

REQUESTS, COURTS OF, see Conscience.

REQUIEM, a solemn mass, sung for the dead, so called from the introit "Requiem Aeternam," &c. Palestrina's Requiem was printed at Rome, 1591, Vittoria's at Madrid, 1605, Mozart's last work was a requiem, 1791.

RESEDOS, the screen or decorated portion of the wall behind the altar in a church.

A highly sculptured screen designed by Sir G G Scott, was erected in Lichfield Cathedral, by subscription 1873.

Very inaccurate reports of parliamentary debates were inserted in the Gentleman's Magazine and other periodicals in the middle of the last century. Miller, printer of the London Evening Mail, was arrested in the city of London, by order of the house of commons, for publishing the debates, but was discharged by the lord mayor, who for doing this was sent to the Tower where he remained until the end of the session. No opposition was made to the publication of the debates in the next session 1777.

Prebendary Philpotts, the chancellor, and others who objected brought their objections before the bishop's visitation court on 7 Jan, it was decided that the bishop had jurisdiction in the matter, and he ordered the article to be removed, 13 April 1874. Dean Boyd appealed to the court of arches, and Mr R Philpotts reversed the previous decision 6 Aug 1874.

Prebendary Philpotts appealed to the judicial committee of the privy council who decided that the verdict should remain 24 Feb 1875. The magnificent service set up in St Paul's Cathedral, London was protested against as idolatrous by some of the London clergy April, 1888. An action against the dean having been stopped by the bishop, the queen's bench division ordered the bishop to withdraw his veto upon the procession 2 June, 1888. After further litigation in the house of lords sustained the bishop's veto 20 July 1892.

RESERVE FORCES. In the summer of 1859, acts were passed to provide for the establishment of a military reserve force of men who have been in her majesty's service (not to exceed 20,000), and a volunteer reserve force of seamen not to exceed 30,000. These acts were consolidated and amended in 1867 and 1882. The reserve forces called out by proclamation on account of possible war with Russia, 2 April, 1878. About 35,000 good soldiers appeared, and were commended. They were disbanded 31 Aug 1878. Again called out on account of war in Egypt, 25 July, 1882, and prospect of war with Russia, 27 March, 1883. The force of army reserve, 1888, 55,068, 1890, 54,082.

RESOLUTE, ship, see Franklin Search, 1854.

RESONATOR, a small apparatus placed in the mouth to strengthen and increase the volume of the voice in singing, invented by signor Alberto Bach, who exhibited its effects at the Royal Academy of Music, 29 June, 1880.

RESPIRATORS, see Charcoal and Firemen.

RESTITUTION BILL, of Mr Jesse Collings, proposes the surrender of lands illegally taken from commons, to be given to small cultivators, to become peasant proprietors, Jan 1885.

RESTORATION, THE, of king Charles II. to the crown of England, after an interregnum of eleven years and four months, between 30 Jan 1649, when Charles I was beheaded, and 29 May, 1660, when Charles II entered London amidst the acclamations of the people. The annual form of prayer, with thanksgiving, then appointed was ordered to be desisted by 22 Oct 2, 25 March, 1649. See France, 1814, 1815.

RETREAT OF THE TEN THOUSAND GREEKS, who had joined the army of the younger Cyrus in his revolt against his brother, Artaxerxes Mnemon. The Greeks were victors, but Cyrus was defeated and slain at the battle of Cunaxa, 401 B C. Artaxerxes having enticed the Greek leaders into his power and killed them, Xenophon was called to the command of his countrymen. Under continual alarms from sudden attacks, he led them across rapid rivers, through vast deserts, over the tops of mountains, till he reached the sea. The Greeks returned home after a march of 1155 parasangs or leagues (3465 miles), which was performed in 215 days, after the absence of fifteen months. This retreat has been immortalised by the account given by its conductor, in his "Anabasis Cyn." (Expedition of Cyrus).

REVUE DES DEUX MONDES, the French literary and historical periodical published on the 1st and 15th of each month, first appeared in 1831. It includes among its contributors the most eminent writers in France

REYNARD THE FOX, "REINERKE FUCHS," a satirical epic in low German, in which beasts are actors and speakers, was first printed as Reincke Voss, at Lubek in 1498, and professes to be written by Hinrich van Alken. It has been frequently translated. Goethe's version in High (or literary) German in hexameters appeared in 1794. Jacob Grimm has shown that the subject-matter of this "Fuchs-epic" or "beast-fable" is very ancient, many incidents being found in Pilpay and other oriental writers. The early French had a "Roman de Renart," and "Renart le Nouvel." A poem, entitled "der Reinart," in Flemish, was known in the 11th century, Catton's translation in English prose was printed 1481, a poetic English translation of Goethe's version, by T. J. Arnold, appeared in 1855

RHEIMS (N France) The principal church here, built before 400, rebuilt in the 12th century, is now very beautiful. The corpse of St Remi, the archbishop, is preserved behind the high altar, in a magnificent shrine. The kings of France were crowned at Rheims, probably because Clovis, the founder of the French monarchy, when converted from paganism, was baptized in the cathedral in 496. Several ecclesiastical councils have been held here. The city was taken and retaken several times in the last months of the French war, 1814. University founded by cardinal Lorraine, 1547, suppressed about 1790. Strike of the workmen of Mr Jonathan Holden, millowner, a great benefactor to the town, May, 1890. Population, 1891, 104,186.

RHETORIC Rhetorical points and accents were invented by Aristophanes of Byzantium, 200 B.C. Rhetoric was first taught in Latin at Rome by Pholus Gallus, about 87 B.C. He taught Cicero, who said "We are first to consider what is to be said, secondly, how, thirdly, in what words, and lastly, how it is to be ornamented." A regius professor of rhetoric was appointed in Edinburgh, 30 April, 1762, when Dr Blair became first professor.

RHINE (Latin, Rhenus, German, Rhein, French, Rhin), a river, about 760 miles long, rising in Switzerland, receiving the Moselle, Main, Meuse, Neckar, and other rivers, terminating in many arms in Holland, and falling into the German ocean. On its banks are Constance, Basel, Strasbourg, Spire, Mannheim, Cologne, Düsseldorf, Utrecht, and Leyden. The possession of the banks of the Rhine has been the cause of many wars, and it has been crossed by the French about twenty times in a century. In the beginning of the revolutionary war, Custine invaded Germany by crossing it in 1793, and at the close of the war in 1815, France retained the left bank, but lost it at the close of the Franco-Prussian war, 1870-1 (see below). A navigation treaty with other powers was signed by France 17 Oct 1868. A central committee for the navigation exists, formed by members of Alsace, Lorraine, Bielefeld, Bavaria, Hesse, Holland, and Prussia. Very great damage (about 4,000,000 francs) and loss of life caused by the rising of the river through excessive rain end of November and December, 1882, relieved by government grants.

RHODES, an island on the coast of Asia Minor, is said to have been peopled from Crete, as early as 916 B.C. In these about 150,000 Mahomedans took refuge during the Russo-Turkish war on the approach of the Russians in Dec 1877 and Jan 1878 and resisted the invaders. The Russians were accused of killing and outraging thousands of men, women, and children. A European commission of inquiry, met in July 1878, 26 Aug., confirmed the statements but issued no united report, some members seceded.

The insurgents asserted that they were not resisting the Sultan himself, but male administration. They are governed by an English chief (Col St Clair), who receives the taxes &c. and is styled commander in chief of the national army of the Rhodope. Sept.

The petition thus became a statute 13 Car. I. c. 1. An important declaration was made by the lords and commons of England to the prince and princess of Orange on 13 Feb. 1689, in an act "declaring the rights and liberties of the subject, and settling the succession of the crown." RITUALISTS, a name given in 1866 to a party in the church of England, formally named Puseyites, for endeavouring to give a more imposing character to public worship, by the use of coloured vestments, lighted candles, incense, &c., professing to go back to the practices of the church in the time of Edward VI. An exhibition of these things was held during the church congress at York in Oct 1866, but was not officially connected with it. The practices of the ritualists (said by Mr Denham to be symbolical of doctrines they were bound to renounce), were censured in several episcopal charges in Dec 1866, in two reports of the ritualistic commission, 19 Aug 1867, and April, 1868, and by the judicial committee of the privy council on appeal, 23 Dec 1868. See Church of England and Life, 1867-9. At a general convention of the American episcopal church at Philadelphia, 27, 28 Oct 1868 after a unanimous censure on ritualism, the discussion was adjourned. It was renewed at the convention to Oct 1874, and the ritualists were decidedly beaten by the evangelical party. A stringent canon on ceremonies being passed 27 Oct. The coroner was severely blamed for charging the jury improperly, but the court of queen's bench, in Jan 1861, refused to issue a writ for a new inquiry. Constance Kent, on 25 April, 1865, before Sir Thomas Henry at Bow street and at her trial at Old Bailey, on 21 July following, confessed herself to be guilty of the murder. Her punishment was commuted to penal servitude for life. Let out on ticket-of-leave, 18 July, 1885. Road in near Krome Somerset.

ROMILLY'S ACT, SIR SAMUEL, 52 Geo.
III. c. 101 (1812) relates to charities

RONCESVALLES (in the Pyrenees), where, it is said, Charlemagne's paladin Roland, or Orlando, was surprised, defeated and slain by the Gascons, 778. On 25 July, 1813, marshal Soult was defeated here by the British entering France.

RONDO A short piece of music having one prominent subject to which returns are made, many composed by Beethoven, Chopin, and others.

ROOF. The largest in the world was said to be that over a riding-school at Moscow, erected in 1791, being 235 feet in span. The roof of the London station of the Midland railway, in Euston-road, London, N.W., is 240 feet wide, 690 feet long, 125 feet high. The extent of ground covered is about 165,000 square feet.

ROPE-MAKING MACHINE. One was patented by Richard March in 1784, and by Edm. Cartwright, in 1792. Many improvements have been made since.

ROCKE'S DRIFT, boundary of British territory of Natal, in South Africa and Zululand. Behind extemporised trenches a handful of British soldiers here successfully resisted a large Zulu army, and probably saved the colony, 22 Jan. 1879. See Zululand.

ROSAMOND'S BOWER. Rosamond was daughter of lord Clifford, and mistress of Henry II. about 1154. A conspiracy against her was formed by the queen, prince Henry, and the king's other sons. Henry kept her in a labyrinth at Woodstock, where his queen, Eleanor, it is said, discovered her apartments by the clue of a silk thread, and poisoned her. She was buried at Godstow church, from whence Hugh, bishop of Lincoln, had her ashes removed, 1191.

ROSARY, see Beads.

In a brief of pope Pius IX., 30 Sept. 1852, it was asserted that 40 repetitions in a rosary of 40 beads of "Sweet Heart of Mary, be my salvation" will obtain a large number of days of indulgence for souls in purgatory (23,300 days calculated).

ROSAS (N. E. Spain), BAY OF, where a brilliant naval action was fought by the boats of the Tigre, Cumberland, Volantaira, Apolló, Tippaz, Philoset, Scout, and Tascen, led by lieutenant John Tallow (of the Tigre), which ended in the capture or destruction of eleven armed vessels in the bay, 1 Nov. 1809; for which purpose lord Collingwood had organised the expedition commanded by capt. Hallowell. Rosas was gallantly defended by lord Cochrane, 27 Nov.; but surrendered, 4 Dec. 1809.

ROSBACH (Rosebeque), Flanders. Here Charles VI. of France beat the Flemings, who had revolted against their count, 27 Nov. 1382.—At ROSBACH, in Prussia, a great battle was fought between the Prussians, commanded by Frederick the Great, and the combined army of French and Austrians, in which the latter were defeated with severe loss, 5 Nov. 1757.

"ROSCUR, INFANT," Wm. Henry West Betty, born 13 Sept. 1791. After acting at Belfast, 16 Aug. 1803, and at other places, with much applause, he appeared at Covent-garden, 1 Dec. 1803, as Salim, in "Barbarossa," and is said to have gained in his first season, 17,200l.

After several years' retirement, he re-appeared, but soon after left the stage, not being successful. He retired on the fortune he had amassed, and died Aug. 1874.

A portrait may be seen at the Garrick club.

ROSE, see under Flowers. The rose, a symbol of silence, gave rise to the phrase under the rose; "under the rose," said, by Italian writers, to have risen from the circumstance of the pope's presenting consecrated roses, which were placed over the confessionals at home, to denote secrecy, 1526. The pope sent a golden rose to the queen of Spain, which was given to her with much solemnity, 8 Feb. 1868. A "national rose society" opened its first annual show, St. James's hall, 4 July, 1877.

The League of the Rose, under the patronage of the Comtesse de Paris, formed to promote the restoration of the monarchy in France, autumn 1888.

ROSE'S ACT, 33 Geo. III. c. 54 (1793) brought to rest societies under the control of government.

ROSES, WARS OF THE, between the Lancastrians (who chose the red rose as their emblem) and the Yorkists (who chose the white rose), 1455-1485. It is stated that in the Wars of the Roses there perished 12 princes of the blood, 200 nobles, and 100,000 gentle and common people. The union of the roses was effected in the marriage of Henry VII. with the princess Elizabeth, daughter of Edward IV. 1486.

Richard II., who succeeded his grandfather Edward III. in 1377, was deposed and succeeded in 1399 by his cousin Henry IV. (son of John of Gaunt), duke of Lancaster, the fourth son of Edward III., in pursuance to the right of Roger Mortimer (grandson of Lionel, duke of Clarence, Edward's third son), who was declared presumptive heir to the throne in 1395.

Attempts at compromise failed, and the war began in 1455.

The Lancastrians were defeated at St. Alban's: the protector Somerset was slain, a truce was made, and Richard was declared successor to Henry VI. 23 May.

The war was renewed, and the Yorkists defeated the Lancastrians at Bloreheath 23 Sept. 1459.

The Yorkists eventually dispersed, and the duke was attainted.

He defeated his opponents at Northampton, took Henry prisoner, and was declared heir to the crown; but fell into an ambush near Wakefield, and was put to death 31 Dec. 1460.

His son (Edward) continued the struggle; he was installed as king 4 March.

Defeated the Lancastrians at Towton 29 March.

Was deposed by Warwick, who restored Henry VI. Sept. 1470.

Edward defeated the Lancastrians at Barnet, 14 April, and finally at Tewkesbury 4 May, 1471.

The struggle ended with the defeat and death of Richard III. at Bosworth 22 Aug. 1485.

ROSETTA (in Egypt), taken by the French in 1798, and by the British and Turks, 19 April, 1801. The Turks repulsed the British here, 22 April, 1807. Near Rosetta was fought the battle of the Nile, 1 Aug. 1798; see Méhemet Ali rendered great service to his country by constructing a canal between Rosetta and Alexandria.

The Rosetta Stone, discovered by the French in 1799, was brought from Rosetta in a French vessel, from whence it was taken by Sir Wm. R. Hamilton, who deposited it in the British Museum in 1802. Mr. Letronne published the text and a translation of the Greek inscription. It is a piece of black basalt, about 3 feet long and 2 feet wide, with an inscription in three languages, viz. hieroglyphics, modified hieroglyphics (demotic or enchorial), and Greek, setting forth the praises of Ptolemy Epiphanes (about 196 B.C.). It was studied in 1817 by T. Young and especially by J. F. Champollion, whose works were published 1824-1845. Champollion's method was adopted by Rosellini, and extended by Lepsius, Brugsch, Birch Brugsch, and others. Champollion discovered that the hieroglyphs represented sounds by an initial letter, and after studying the "Ritual of the dead," published a grammar and dictionary.

ROSCRUCIANS, a sect of mystical philosophers who appeared in Germany in the 14th century. It is asserted that their founder was a noble German monk, named Christian Rosenkreutz, born 1378, who travelled in Arabia, Egypt, Africa, and Spain; returned to Germany and founded the fraternity of the Rose (1406, and died aged 102). The Magna Fraternitas and the Confusio Rose Crucis, 1615, the latter attributed to Johann Valentin Andreae and others, are important works. They swore fidelity, promised secrecy, and wrote hieroglyphically, and affirmed that the ancient philosophers of Egypt, the Chaldeans, Magi of Persia, and Gymnosophists of the Indies, taught the same doctrine.

Mr. Arthur B. Waite's elaborate work "The Real History of the Rosicrucians" published in 1887.

ROSS, Cork (S. Ireland), a bishopric founded, is supposed, by St. Fachnan, in the beginning of the 6th century. It was united to Cork in 1340, and Cloyne to both, by the Irish Church Temporalities act (1833); see Bishops; New Ross.

ROSTRUM (plural rostra), a beak, the name given to the prows of ships, which were affixed to the front of the platform (hence termed rostra), erected between the comitium and the forum in Rome, whence the tribunes addressed the people. The custom is said to have begun with the ships of Antium, taken during the Latin war, which ended 33 B.C.

ROTA CLUB, a society who met at Mule's Coffee-house in New Palace-yard, Westminster, during the administration of Oliver Cromwell, their plan was that all the great officers of state should be chosen by ballot, and that a certain number of members of parliament should be changed annually by rotation, from whence they took their title. Sir William Petty was one of the members in 1659. Acog. Brit.

ROTHESAY, capital of the Isle of Bute. The ruined castle, founded about 1003, was repaired by the marquess of Bute, 1751-77. ROTHESAY CASTLE, see Newcastle, 1831.

ROTHESCHILD FAMILY. Meyer Amsehel, or Anselm, was born at No. 147, Judengasse (Jew-lane), Frankfurt, in 1743. In 1772 he began business as a money-lender and dealer in old coins, in the same house, over which he placed the sign of the red shield (in German, Rothschild). Having had dealings with the landgrave of Hesse, that prince entrusted him with his treasure (said to have been 250,000*l.*) in 1806, when the French held his country. With this sum as capital, Anselm traded and made a large fortune, and restored the 250,000*l.* to the landgrave in 1815. At his death his sons continued the business as partners. His son, Nathan, began at Manchester in 1798, removed to London in 1803; and died immenely rich, 28 July, 1836. The baron, James, head of the family, died at Paris, 15 Nov. 1868.

ROTTERDAM, the second city in Holland. Its importance dates from the 13th century. The commerce of Antwerp was transferred to it in 1501. In 1572, Rotterdam was taken by the Spaniards by stratagem, and cruelly treated. It suffered much from the French revolutionary wars, and from inundations in 1775 and 1825. Desiderius Erasmus was born here in 1467. The museum and picture-gallery of Rotterdam were destroyed at the time of the Schiedam palace, 16 Feb. 1861. ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC was established in 1822, mainly by the exertions of lord Burghersh (afterwards earl of Westmoreland, who died 16 Oct. 1859), and was incorporated by charter 23 June, 1830. The first concert took place 8 Dec. 1828. Its reconstruction was proposed in 1866, and since effected. Sir George Macfarren principal, 1876, died, 31 Oct. 1887, succeeded by Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, Feb. 1888.

The academy unites with the Royal College of Music in regard to local examinations, announced 13 Nov. 1889.

ROYAL ADELAIDE, see Works, 1850.

ROYAL ASSENT. If the king assent to a public bill, the clerk of the parliament declares in Norman French, "Le roy le veut," the king wills it so to be. If the king refuses his assent, it is in the gentle language of "Le roy s'avise," the king will consider it. Hals. By the statute 33 Hen. VIII., 1541, the king may give his assent by letters-patent. Blackstone's Com.

ROYAL EXCHANGE (Cambium Regie), London. The foundation of the original edifice was laid by Sir Thomas Gresham, 7 June, 1566, on the site of the ancient Tun prison. Queen Elizabeth opened it on 23 Jan. 1571, and her herald named it the Royal Exchange. Hume. It was totally destroyed by the great fire, Sept. 1666. Charles II. laid the foundation-stone of the next edifice, 23 Oct. 1667, which was completed by Mr. Hawksmore, a pupil of Sir Christopher Wren, in about three years; it was repaired and beautified in 1769. This fire was burnt, 10 Jan. 1838. The new Royal Exchange, erected under the direction of Mr. Tite, was opened by the queen, 28 Oct. 1844.—The ROYAL EXCHANGE, Dublin, commenced 1709, opened 1719.

ROYAL GEORGE, a man-of-war of 108 guns, lost off Spithead. While keeled over to repair a pump, a sudden gust of wind washed the sea into her ports, and she went down. The rear-admiral Kempenfeldt, the crew, many maimes, women, and Jews, in all about 600 persons, were drowned, 29 Aug. 1782. By the use of the diving-bell, the ship, embedded in the deep, was surveyed in May, 1817, et seq. Portions of the vessel and its cargo were brought up in 1839-42, under the superintendence of Sir Charles Pasley, when gunpowder was ignited by the agency of electricity.

The queen on July 2 applied to parliament for a grant to prince Albert Victor of Wales for his maintenance, and for one to the princess Louise of Wales on her proposed marriage with the earl of Fife, a select committee was appointed consisting of 23 members (including Mr. Goschen, Mr. W. H. Smith, Lord Hartington, Mr. J. Chamberlain, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. John Morley, Mr. Labouchere, Mr. Burt, Dr. Cameron, Mr. Parnell, and Mr. Sexton), 3 July, the committee first met

10 July, 1889. After several meetings at which there was much discussion on various propositions, a report was submitted to the house of commons, who eventually resolved, after several amendments had been rejected, that 26,000*l.* out of the consolidated fund should be paid annually (through trustees) to the prince of Wales for the support and maintenance of his family, the same to continue till six months after the queen's decease, 29 July, 1889. An act of parliament to this effect was passed 13 Aug. "

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN, the earliest of the kind in London, was founded 9 March, 1799, by count Rumford, Sir Joseph Banks, Sir Francis Baily, and several other noblemen and gentlemen. It received the immediate patronage of George III., and was incorporated 13 Jan. 1800, by royal charter, as "The Royal Institution of Great Britain, for the diffusing knowledge, and facilitating the general introduction of useful mechanical inventions and improvements, and for teaching, by courses of philosophical lectures and experiments, the application of science to the common purposes of life." It was enlarged and extended by an act of parliament in 1810; the original plan, as drawn up by count Rumford, in 1799, having been considerably modified. The members are elected by ballot, and pay ten guineas on admission, and five guineas annually, or a composition of sixty guineas. "The Royal Institution, its Founder, and its first Professors," by Dr. Benze Jones, 4th ed., published 1871.

The House (in Albemarle street, Piccadilly) was purchased in June, 1799, and the present front was added by subscription in 1818. The Lecture theatre was erected in 1803, under the superintendence of Mr. E. Webster.

The Laboratory established in 1800, was rebuilt, with the modern improvements, 1872.

The Library was commenced in 1803, by the munificent subscriptions of the proprietors of the Institution.

It now (1889) comprises about 20,000 volumes. Classified catalogues (by W. H. Baily) were published in 1809 and 1861, and one (by H. Vincent) in 1872 and 1878.

The Museum contains original philosophical apparatus of Young, Cavendish, Davy, Faraday, and De la Rive. The first Lecture was delivered 4 March, 1800, by Sir in which, in being the first professor of natural philosophy and chemistry.

In 1806, he was succeeded by Dr Thomas Young, so celebrated for his researches in optics, resulting in the discovery of the interference of light, and the establishment of the theory of undulation. His "Lectures on Natural Philosophy and the Mechanical Arts," first published in 1807, are still considered a text-book of physical science. His works on antiquarian literature (hieroglyphic inscriptions, &c.) are highly esteemed.

In Feb. 1810, Mr (afterwards Sir Humphry) Davy was engaged as assistant lecturer and director of the laboratory, and on 31 May, 1809, he was appointed professor of chemistry. His lectures were eminently successful, and his discoveries in chemistry and electricity have immortalised his name, and conferred honour on the institution. By him the alkaline metals potassium and sodium, were discovered in 1807; the nature of chlorine was determined in 1810, and the safety lamp invented in 1815.

William Thomas Brande succeeded Sir Humphry Davy as professor of chemistry in 1813, and held that office till his resignation in 1852, since which time, till his death (Feb. 1866), he was hon. professor. From 1816 to 1850 he delivered, in the laboratory of this institution, his celebrated chemical lectures to students.

In 1813 Michael Faraday (born 22 Sept. 1791), on the recommendation of Sir H. Davy was engaged as assistant in the laboratory, and in 1825 as its director. In 1827 he became one of the permanent lecturers of the institution. In 1820 he commenced those researches in electricity and magnetism which form an era in the history of science. In 1833 he discovered the conductivity of chlorine and other gases. In 1831 he obtained electricity from the magnet. In 1835 he exhibited the two-fold magnetism of matter comprising all known substances, the magnetism of gases, &c. In 1839 he published his researches on diamagnetic magnetism. Died, 25 Aug. 1867.

John Tyndall, F.R.S., professor of natural philosophy, July, 1853, hon. professor, 9 May, 1857, is eminent for his researches on magnetism, heat, glaciers, &c.

Lord Kelvin, F.R.S., professor of natural philosophy, 9 May, 1857, is eminent for his researches on sound, light, &c.

Isaac Franklin, F.R.S., professor of chemistry 1865-8, is eminent for his discoveries in organic chemistry.

In 1804, Sir J. E. Ashby and other gentlemen proposed to form a society or union at this institution, but the plan, although warmly supported by the members, was withdrawn for want of encouragement by the government and by sailing proprietors.

The WEEKLY EVENING MEETINGS on the 17th date, from January to June, as now arranged, commenced in 1866. Discourses (of which abstracts are printed) are given at these meetings by the professors of the most famous, and other eminent scientific men.

KNOWLEDGE. In 1833 John Fuller, esq., of Rosehill, endowed two professorships, of chemistry and physiology, the former bestowed on Mr Faraday for life, succeeded by Dr Wm. Odling 1863-73, by Dr John Hall Gladstone 1874 by James Dewar, 1877. The latter on Dr Rogie's death was to be filled up afterwards by triennial election.—The Fullerton professors of physiology have been P. M. Roget, R. E. Grant, T. R. Jones, W. B. Carpenter, W. G. Hall, T. W. Jones, T. H. Huxley (twice), R. Owen, J. Marshall, Michael Foster, Wm. Rutherford, Alfred H. Garrod, and E. A. Schickel (1874-81), J. G. M. Kendall, 1882-4, A. G. Sanger, 1884, G. J. Romanes, 1885, Victor Horsley, 1891.—In 1861, Mrs. Acton gave 1000 to be invested for paying every seven years 100 guineas for the best essay on the benevolence of the Almighty, as illustrative of a department of sciences which have been awarded—in 1864 to Mr. G. F. Poyne in 1851 to Mr. T. Wharton Jones, in 1862 he was made, in 1865 to Mr. George Warrington, in 1870 to Rev. George Henslow and E. Thompson Lowe, in 1879, to Mr. G. B. Boulger, in 1886, to Prof. (off. air) G. G. Stokes, F.R.S.

THE "Fund for the Promotion of Experimental Research" was founded on 6 July, 1863, by Sir Henry Halliday, Professor Faraday, Sir J. I. Murchison, Dr George Jones, and others.

The first officer was Sir Joseph Banks, president, till the office was granted, afterwards the Earl of Winchelsea, Mr. (afterwards Sir Thomas) Bouverie, Treasurer, Rev. Dr Samuel Clarke, Secretary.—Algeron Duke of Devonshire, B.A., second president, 1848, succeeded by Sir Henry Holland, in 1865 (died 27 Oct. 1873), by Algernon George, Duke of Northumberland K.G., 1873, W. Pole, esq., Treasurer, elected 1861, and succeeded by Wm. ROYAL SOCIETY (London). In 1665 several learned men met in London to discuss philosophical questions and report experiments, the Notion Organon of Bacon, published in 1620, having given great impulse to such pursuits. Some of them (Drs Wilkins, Wallis, &c.), about 1648-9, removed to Oxford, and with Dr (afterwards Bishop) Seth Ward, the hon. Robert Boyle, Dr (afterwards Sir) W. Petty, and several doctors of divinity and physics, frequently assembled in the apartments of Dr Wilkins, in Wadham college, Oxford. They formed what has been called the Philosophical Society of Oxford, which only lasted till 1690. The members were, about 1658, called to various parts of the kingdom, on account of their respective professions, and the majority coming to London, constantly attended the lectures at Gresham college, and met occasionally till the death of Oliver Cromwell, 3 Sept. 1658, see Societies.

The society was organised in 1660, and constituted by Charles II. a body politic and corporate, by the appointment of The President, Council, and Fellowship of the Royal Society of London, for improving Natural Knowledge, 24 April, 1662.

Eleven records the first anniversary meeting St. Andrew's day, 30 Nov. 1663.

The Philosophical Transactions began 6 March, 1664-5. In 1668 Newton invented his reflecting telescope (now in the possession of the society) and on 28 April, 1666, presented to the society the MS of his Principia which the council ordered to be printed. This was done under the superintendence and at the expense of Halley the astronomer, at that time clerk to the society.

The society met for some years at Gresham College, and afterwards at Arundel House (1666), where it came into possession of a valuable library, presented by Mr Howard, grandson of its collector the Earl of Arundel. After various changes the fellows returned to Gresham College, where they remained till their removal to Crane-court, in a house purchased by themselves, 8 Nov. 1720.

The first Copley medal was awarded to Stephen Gray in 1731; the Royal medal to John Dalton 1866, the Rumford medal (instituted in 1797) to Count Rumford himself in 1800.

The society remove to apartments granted them in Somerset-house, 1780 to apartments in Burlington House, Piccadilly, 1857.

Parliament votes annually 4000 to the Royal Society for scientific purposes.

Regulations made by which only fifteen fellows are to be annually elected, who pay ten pounds on admission, and four pounds annually, or a composition of sixty pounds March, 1847. In consequence, the number of fellows was reduced from 399 in 1847 to 563 in 1865, to 567 in 1875, to 552 in 1877, to 523 in 1884.

The entrance fee abolished, and the annual payment reduced to 31, announced, Nov. 1878.

The "Royal Society Bolestan Fund" was founded in imitation of the "Literary Fund" in 1859; see Scientific Fund.

The Davy Medal (which see) first awarded, Nov. 1877.
The Darwin medal (see Development) first awarded, 1890.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF EDINBURGH, incorporated 29 March, 1783, arose out of the Philosophical Society of Edinburgh, founded in 1739. It received a second charter in 1811.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF LITERATURE was founded under the auspices of king George IV. in 1823, and chartered 13 Sept. 1826.

RUBICON, a small river flowing into the Adriatic sea, separated Cisalpine Gaul from Italy proper. Roman generals were forbidden to pass this river at the head of an army. Julius Cæsar did so, Jan. 49 B.C., and thereby began a revolt and deadly civil war.

RUBIDIUM, an alkaline metal, discovered by Bunsen by means of the spectrum analysis, and made known in 1861.

RUBRICS, directions in church offices, often printed in red. New ones for the English service agreed to by convocation, 4 July, 1879.

RUBY MINES OF BURMAH, Tavernier (middle of the 17th century) describes it as a place where rubies and other precious stones are largely obtained, in a country difficult of access. Similar accounts were given by Father Giuseppe d'Amato, about 1830. The largest stones were royal property. Mr. Bredemeyer had charge of these and other mines in 1868. Revenue about 1855, from 12,500, to 15,000, per annum. These mines are now British property (see under Burma, 1885), and for the use of them a revenue is paid by the Shan tribes, 1887. An agreement respecting them made between the Indian Government and Messrs. Streeter & Co. of London, announced May, 1887; suspended July, 1887. Working licences issued to persons on the spot, 1887. Lease for seven years to the Streeter Syndicate signed at the India office, 22 Feb. 1889; formation of a company headed by Messrs. Rothschild, March et seq., 1889. Visit of Sir Lepel Griffin to the mines, satisfactory to the company, reported March, 1890.

RUFFLES became fashionable about 1520; and went out about 1790.

RUGBY SCHOOL (Warwickshire), was founded in 1567 by Lawrence Sheriff, a London tradesman; its arrangements were affected by the Public Schools act 1868. Dr. Thomas Arnold, the historian, entered on the duties of head-master here in August, 1828, and under him the school greatly prospered. He died 12 June, 1842. His successors were Drs. Tait, Goulbourn, Tompale, and Hayman. See New Rugby.

Dr. H. Hayman was opposed by the masters of the school, and after much discussion and discussion, was dismissed by the trustees, Dec. 1873, and Dr. Jex Blake elected in his room, Feb. 1874. Succeeded by Rev. J. Percival, Nov. 1886. Vice-Chancellor Mellor decided against Dr. Hayman in his attempt to set aside his dismissal, but expressed his own opinion on "the grievous hardship of Dr. Hayman's case," 21 March, 1874.

Mr. Disraeli, the premier, presented Dr. Hayman to the living of Aklingsham, Lancashire, April, 1874. Population of Rugby in 1881, 9,991; 1891, 11,064.

"RULE, BRITANNIA." Nearly all the words are by James Thomson; the music, ascribed to Dr. Arne, is said by Schlegel (in his life of Handel) to have been taken from an air in Handel's "Occasional Oratorio" composed 1745, but the song and music were really printed in Dr. Arne's masque of "Alfred," 1740. Grove.

RULING MACHINES, used for ruling paper with faint lines, for merchants' account-books, &c. They were invented by an ingenious Dutchman, resident in London, in 1782, and were subsequently greatly improved by Woodmasson, Payne, Brown, and others. They were improved in Scotland in 1803. An invention has lately rendered account-books perfect by the numbering of the pages with types, instead of the numbers being written by a pen, so that a page cannot be torn out from them without being discovered. The late Herr F. A. Nobert devised a ruling machine in 1845 for the production of microscopical test plates, diffraction gratings, and micrometers, specimens of which were exhibited in 1857. The test plates contain bands of lines in a graduated series of fineness from reus to robus of a Paris line.

RUM (French Rhum), ardent spirit distilled from sugar lees and molasses, deriving its peculiar flavour from a volatile oil. Rum is principally made in the West Indies. The duty (since 1858) on colonial rum imported into the United Kingdom is 8s. 2d. per gallon. The duty on rum to be employed as methylated spirits was reduced in 1863.

RUSSELL INSTITUTION (Great Corn-market, London), was founded in 1868 by Sir Samuel Romilly, Francis Horner, Mr. Mason Good, Henry Hallam, Sir James Scarlett (aft. Lord Abinger), and others. The building comprises a library, news room, billiard room, &c.

RUSSELL TRIAL. Wulham, Lord Russell's trial for complicity in the Rye-house plot was marked by a most touching scene. When he requested to have some one near him to take notes to help his memory, he was answered, that any of his attendants might assist him; upon which he said, "My wife is here, and will do it for me."
He was beheaded in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, 21 July, 1683. Lady Russell survived him forty years, dying 29 Sept. 1723, in her eighty-seventh year.
His attainder was reversed, 1 Will. III. 1689.

RUSSIA, the eastern part of ancient Sarmatia.
The name is generally derived from the Roxolani, a Slavonic tribe. Rurik, a Varangian chief, appears to have been the first to establish a government, 862. His descendants ruled amid many vicissitudes till 1598. The progress of the Russian power under Peter the Great and Catherine II. is unequalled for rapidity in the history of the world.
The established religion of Russia is the Greek church, with toleration of other sects, even Mahome-tans. By an imperial ukase, in 1802, six universities were established, viz., at St. Petersburg, Moscow, Wilna, Dorpat (in Livonia), Cherson, and Kazan; but literature made little progress till the present century, the native publications being very few, and the best books being translations.
The Russian language, though not devoid of negotiate, is, to a foreigner, of very difficult promulgation: the number of letters and diphthongs is forty-two. The population of the empire in 1867, 82,190,630, in 1878, about 86,680,045, in 1877 (estimated), 86,952,347, in 1885, 106,843,192. By the first Russian budget (1862), the estimated revenue was 24,500,000; expenditure, 37,850,000. Besides about 500 cathedrals, about 35,000 churches (Greek church, which see).

RUSSO-TURKISH WAR.* The Russian and French governments having each taken a side in the dispute between the Greek and Latin churches as to the exclusive possession of the Holy Places (which are) in Palestine, the Porte advised the formation of a mixed commission, which decided in favour of the Greeks, and a firman was promulgated accordingly, 9 March, 1853; to this decision the French assented, although dissatisfied.

The Russians make further claims, and prince Menschikoff (who arrived at Constantinople 28 Feb. 1853), by various notes (between 22 March and 18 May), demands that a convention should be signed by the sultan granting to the czar such a protectorate over the Greek Christians in Turkey, as the sultan considered inimical to his own authority. 22 March-18 May, 1853.

In January and February of that year the czar had several conversations on the subject with the British envoy at St. Petersburg, sir G. H. Seymour, in one of which (Jan. 24) he compared Turkey to a "sick man" in a state of decrepitude, on the point of death, and made proposals to the British government as to the disposal of his property. He stated frankly that he would not permit the British to establish themselves at Constantinople; but said in another conversation, he would not object to their possessing Egypt. The purport of these conversations was conveyed in despatches to Lord John Russell, who replied that the British government declined to make any provision for the contingency of the fall of Turkey. The czar made similar proposals to the French government with the same result.

RUSTCHUK, Turkish town on the Danube, one of the "quadrilateral" fortresses lost to Turkey with Bulgaria by treaty of Berlin, 13 July, 1878.

RUTHENIUM, a rare metal, discovered in an ore of platinum by M. Claus, in 1845.

RUTHERFORD'S ACT, LORD (13 & 14 Viet. c. 36), for simplifying law proceedings in Scotland, passed 1850.

RUTHVEN, RAID OF, a term applied to the seizure of the person of James VI. of Scotland by William Ruthven, earl of Gowrie, and other nobles, in 1582, to compel the king to disavow his favourites, Arran and Lennox. Ostensibly for this, Gowrie was judicially put to death by his two opponents in 1584.

RUTLAND, STATUTE OF, 10 or 12 Edw. I. 1282 or 1284.

RYE-HOUSE PLOT, a plot (some think pretended) to secure the succession of the duke of Monmouth to the throne in preference to the duke of York (afterwards James II.), a Roman catholic. Some of the conspirators are said to have projected the assassination of the king, Charles II., and his brother. This design is said to have been frustrated by the king's house at Newmarket accidentally taking fire, which hastened the royal party away eight days before the plot was to take effect, 22 March, 1683; see Newmarket. The plot was discovered 12 June following. Lord William Russell on 21 July, and Algernon Sidney on 7 Dec. following, suffered death for being concerned in this conspiracy. The name was derived from the conspirators' place of meeting, the Rye-house at Broxbourne, Hertfordshire.

EYSWICK (Holland), where the celebrated peace was concluded between England, France, Spain, and Holland, signed, by their representatives, 20 Sept., and by the emperor of Germany, 30 Oct. 1697.

SAALFIELD.

SAALFIELD (Saxony, N. Germany). Here the Prussians, under prince Louis of Prussia, were defeated and their leader slain by the French under Lannes, 10 Oct. 1806.

SAARBRÜCK, the Roman Augusti Muri or Sara pens, an open town on the left bank of the Saar, in Rhenish Prussia, founded in the tenth century, long subject to the bishops of Metz, afterwards ruled by counts (about 1237), and by the house of Nassau about 1380. It was captured by the French and retaken by the Germans 1676, reunited to France 1704-1814, and ceded to Prussia, 1815. On 2 Aug. 1870, it was bombarded by the French under Frossard (between 11 and 1 in the daytime), and the Prussians in small force were dislodged, and the town occupied by the French general Bataille. The mitrailleuses were said to be very effective. The emperor Napoleon, who was present with his son, said in a telegram to the empress, "Louis has gone through his baptism of fire. He has not been in the least startled. We stood in the foremost rank, and the rifle balls were dropping at our feet, and Louis picked up one that fell near him. His bearing was such as to draw tears from the soldiers' eyes." On the 6 Aug. the Prussian generals Guben and Von Steinmetz, with the first army, recaptured Saarbrück, after a sanguinary conflict at the village of Spicheren. The heights taken by the French on the 2nd are in Germany, those taken by the Germans on the 6th are in France, and both battles were fought between Saarbrück, and the town of Forbach, which was captured and has given a name to the second conflict. The loss was great on both sides. The French general François was killed, and the 2nd corps under Frossard nearly destroyed. The French retreated to Metz. They were greatly superior in numbers at the beginning of the fight, but were badly commanded.

SABBATARIANS. Traces exist of Sabbatarii, or Sabbathaires, among the sects of the 16th century on the continent. Upon the publication of the "Book of Sports" in 1618, a violent controversy arose among English divines on two points: first, whether the Sabbath of the fourth commandment was in force among Christians; and secondly, whether, and on what ground, the first day of the week was entitled to be distinguished and observed as "the Sabbath." In 1628, Theophilus Brabourne, a clergyman, published the first work in favour of the seventh-day or Saturday, as the true Christian Sabbath. He and several others suffered great persecution for this opinion; but after the restoration there were three or four congregations observing the last day of the week for public worship in London, and seven or eight in the country parts of England. In 1851 there were three Sabbatarian or Seventh-day Baptist congregations in England; but in America (especially in the New England states) they are more numerous.—Joseph Davis suffered imprisonment in 1670. He and his son bequeathed property to maintain the sect; and litigation respecting its disposal was settled by vice-chancellor Stuart in conformity with their intentions in June, 1870. Very few Sabbatarians then remained.

SACRAMENT.

SABBATH: ordained by God. Gen. ii. 3; Exod. xx. 8; Isaiah lviii. 13. Jews observe the seventh day in commemoration of the creation of the world, and of their redemption from the bondage of the Egyptians; Christians observe the first day of the week in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ from the dead, and the redemption of man; see Sunday.

SABBATH SCHOOLS, see Sunday Schools.

SABBATICAL YEAR: a Jewish institution, 1491 a.c. Leviticus xxiii. During every seventh year the very ground had rest, and was not tilled; and every forty-ninth year all debts were forgiven, slaves set at liberty, and estates, &c., that were before sold or mortgaged, returned to their original families, &c.

SABELLIANISM, from Sabellius (of Ptolemais in Egypt), who flourished in the 3rd century, and who taught that there was but one person in the Godhead, the other persons of the Trinity being but different names of the same person. This doctrine was condemned at a council at Rome, 260.

SABINES, an ancient people of central Italy, from whom the Romans, under Romulus, took away their daughters by force, having invited them to some public sports or shows on purpose. When the Sabines determined to revenge this affront, the women became mediators to their fathers in behalf of their husbands, the Romans, and a lasting peace was made between them, 750 a.c. The Sabines, who had supported the Samnites in their war with Rome, were thoroughly defeated by M. Curius Dentatus, and their lands annexed 290 a.c., and eventually the Sabines were combined with the Roman people. One of the ecclesiastical provinces is still called Terra Sabina; chief town, Magliano.

SACCHARINE, see Benzole.

SACCHAROMETER, an instrument for determining the amount of sugar in solutions. Soleil, an optician of Paris, in 1847 made use of rotary polarized light for this purpose in a saccharometer, since improved by Duboscq.

SACKVILLE INCIDENT, see United States, Oct. 1888.

SACRAMENT (from sacramentum, an oath, obligation, also mystery). The Christian sacraments are baptism and the Lord's Supper. The council of Trent, in 1547, affirmed the doctrine of the schoolmen that there are seven sacraments, baptism, the Lord's Supper, confirmation, penance, holy orders, matrimony, and extreme unction. The name was given to the Lord's Supper by the Latin fathers. The wine was restricted to the clergy about the beginning of the 12th century. Communion in one kind only was authoritatively sanctioned by the council of Constance, 15 June, 1415. Henry VIII. of Germany was poisoned by a priest by the consecrated wafer, 24 Aug. 1513. The sacramental wine was poisoned by the gravedigger of the church at Zurich, by which sacrilegious deed a number of penance that they took 4 Sept. 1776. In 1614 members of both houses of parliament were ordered to take the sacrament, or a guard against the introduction of Roman Catholicism. In 1673 the test act was passed; repealed in 1688; see Transcendentalism.

"Society of the Sacred Sacrament" (English churchmen, London, founded, 1860; "Consecrators of the Human Sacrament" founded 1860; the two united, 1867) SACRAMENTARIES, followers of Erasmus (1487-1536), who differed from the Romanists and Lutherans in regard to the sacrament.

SACRED BOOKS OF THE EAST. The publication of translations of the sacred books of the religion of the Brahmins, Buddhists, and Mohammedans, and of the followers of Khung-fu-tao and Lao-tao, edited by professor Max Müller, began in 1879. Thirty volumes have been published, 1889.

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY, see Musica.

SACRED HEART OF JESUS; a form of devotion said to have been instituted in England in the seventeenth century, and much promoted by Marguerite Marie Alacoque, an enthusiastic French nun, who asserted that Christ had appeared to her, and taken out her heart, placed it in his own, glowing in flame, and then returned it. She died in 1690.

Her book "Devotion au Cœur de Jésus," published in 1690, much advocated by father Joseph Gallifet about 1760; and introduced into France, by regent.

A vigorous form England, especially blessed by the pope, and headed by the duke of Norfolk, went to the shrine of Marguerite, at Fanny-B-Musiel, and returned. 1-6 Sept. 1873

The R.C. diocese of Bedford dedicated to the Sacred Heart, 4 Sept. 1873; and a church at Mount-Marie, near Paris, founded for the same purpose, 26 June, 1875

The pope dedicated the universal church to "the Sacred Heart" 25 June, "

They were conquered by Philip of Macedonia, and their cities depopulated, 346. See Oracles.

SACRIFICE was offered to God by Abel, 375 B.C. Sacrifices to the gods were introduced into Greece by Prometheus, king of Argos, 1773 B.C. Human sacrifices were to have originated with the Chaldeans, from whom the custom passed into other Eastern nations. All sacrifices to the true God were to cease with the sacrifice of Christ, 33 A.D. Heb. x. 12-14. Pagan sacrifices were forbidden by the superior Commandment II. 341.

SADDLES. In the earlier ages the Romans used neither saddles nor stirrups. Saddles were in use in the 3rd century, and are mentioned as made of leather in 304, and were known in England about 600. Side-saddles for ladies were introduced by Anne, queen of Richard II. in 1385. Steele.

SADDUCEES, a Jewish sect, said to have been founded by Sadoc, a scholar of Antiquity, about 200 B.C., who, misinterpreting his master's doctrine, taught that there was neither heaven nor hell, angel nor spirit; that the soul was mortal, and that there was no resurrection of the body from the dead. The Sadducees rejected the oral law, maintained by the Pharisees. See Matt. xxiii. 23; Acts xxiii. 8.

SADLER'S WELLS (N. London), so called after Mr. Sadler, who built an orchestra to entertain the invalids who used the waters medicinally, 1683. Eighteen persons were trampled to death at this theatre, on a false alarm of fire, 18 Oct. 1807; see under Theatre. The theatre put up to auction and not sold, 31 Aug. 1875; and 30 July, 1878.

SAFES, A National Safe Company, London, opened vaults for storage of valuables, 1876.

SAFETY LAMP. One was invented in 1815 by Mr. Humphry Davy, to prevent accidents which happen in coal and other mines. The safety-lamp is founded on the principle that flames, in passing through iron-wire meshes, lose so much of its heat as to be incapable of igniting inflammable gases. The father of all safety-lamps was Dr. Hald Clanny, of Sunderland, whose invention and improvements are authenticated in the Transactions of the Society of Arts for 1817. The "Geordy," constructed by George Stephenson, the engineer, in 1816, is said to be the earliest. A miner's electric light, by M.M. Dumas and Benoit, was exhibited in Paris on 8 Sept. 1864. On 14 Aug. 1867, safety-lamps were rigidly tested by several mining engineers, and serious doubts thrown upon their complete efficiency. Col. Shakspeare's safety lamp (light extinguished by opening) exhibited at Royal Institution, &c., May, 1879. Messrs. Floum and Foster's new safety mining lamp approved, Jan. 1884.

Mr. J. Wilson-Swan's electric safety lamp, weighing 6 lb. exhibited at Aberdeen meeting of British Association Sept. 1885.

Mr. Charles D. Arle's safety lamp reported successful; the supply of mineral oil is isolated from the burner, 1884.

The Thornbury miners' lamp tried at Aldwicks Main Collieries by Mr. C. H. Rhodes, and subjected to experiments by prof. Dewar and Mr. Frederick Abel, who declare that this lamp fulfils the conditions required by the royal commission in 1866. Paraffin and other mineral oils may be used in this lamp, reported Nov. 1889.

They burnt themselves, with their houses, and the conqueror became master of a pile of ashes, 218 B.C.

SAHARA, a great sandy desert, North Africa, south of Barbary States. A project for making an inland sea here was entertained in 1883; and the construction of a railway was proposed in Algeria, Oct. 1890. A large natural reservoir of water at El Golea in the desert, was discovered early 1891.

Similar institutions have since been established. Sailors' orphan girls' school and home, Hampstead, established 1829. Sailors' and Firemen's Union, see Shipping.

Near here the British and allies, commanded by lord Wellington, totally defeated the French army under marshal Marmont, 22 July, 1812. The loss of the victors was most severe, amounting in killed, wounded, and missing, to nearly 6000 men. Marmont left in the victor's hands 7141 prisoners, 11 pieces of cannon, 6 stands of colours, and 2 eagles. This victory was followed by the capture of Madrid. Population, 1887, 23, 190.

This law, introduced into Spain by the Bourbons 1700, was formally abolished by decree 29 March, 1830; and on the death of Ferdinand VII. his daughter succeeded as Isabella II., 29 Sept. 1833; see Spain. By this law also Hanover was separated from England, when queen Victoria ascended the English throne, 1837.

SALISBURY (Wilt), founded in the beginning of the 13th century, on the removal of the cathedral hither from Old Sarum. National councils or parliaments were repeatedly held at Salisbury, particularly in 1206, by Edward I.; in 1328, by Edward III.; and in 1384, Henry Stafford, duke of Buckingham, was executed here by order of Richard III., in 1483.—On SALISBURY PLAIN is Stonehenge (which see). This plain was estimated at 500,000 acres. On it were so many cross roads, and so few houses to take directions from, that Thomas, earl of Pembroke, planted a tree at each milestone from Salisbury to Shaftesbury, for the traveller's guide. The autumn military manoeuvres took place on Salisbury Plain, Aug., Sept. 1872; see under Army.—The first seat of the BISHOPRIC was at Sherborne, St. Aldhelm being prelate, 705. Norman removed the seat to Old Sarum, about 1072; and the see was removed to Salisbury by a papal bull, in 1217. It has yielded to the church of Rome two times and two cardinals. The building of the cathedral commenced 28 April, 1220, and was completed in 1258. This edifice is reckoned one of our finest ecclesiastical erections. Its spire, the tallest in the kingdom, was considered in danger in April, 1864, and subscriptions were begun for its immediate repair. The choir was re-opened, after restoration by sir G. G. Scott, 1 Nov. 1876. The bishopric is valued in the king's books at 1367*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.* Present income 5000*l.* Population, 1882, 14,792; 1891, 15,980.

An act restricting the capture of salmon at certain times, passed in 1863, was amended in 1869-1870, and 1873. During the "salmon fence," 14 Sept. to 1 Feb., it is unlawful to catch fish of the salmon kind. A salmon-fishery congress opened at South Kensington, 7 June, 1867. SALT (chloride of sodium, a compound of the gas chlorine and the metal sodium) is procured from the rocks in the earth, from salt-springs, and from sea-water. The famous salt-mines of Wieliczka, near Cracow in Poland, have been worked 600 years. The salt-works in Cheshire, called the WICKES (Nantwich, Northwich, and Middlewich), were of great importance in the time of the Saxon heptarchy. The salt-mines of Staffordshire were discovered about 1670. Salt duties were first exacted in 1702; they were renewed in 1732; renewed in 1823; and in that year were ordered to cease in 1825. During the French war the duty reached to 30s. per ton. For the salt-tax in France see Gabells. The government salt monopoly in India was abolished in May, 1853, by sir C. Trevelyan. Since 1797 salt has been largely employed in the manufacture of chloride of lime or bleaching powder (by obtaining its chlorine), and soap (by obtaining its soda). On this are based the chemical works of Cheshire, Lancashire, and other places. See under Alkalies.

Much distress in the salt districts of Cheshire through the subsidence of land, 1887-8. The proprietors of the Cheshire salt mines combined to form a "trust" or syndicate in the autumn of 1888; central office, Northwich; the trade being nearly ruined by great competition, first meeting 27 Sept. 1888.

SALT-PETRE (from sal petre, salt of the rock), or Nitre, is a compound of nitric acid and potash (nitrogen, oxygen, and potassium), and hence is called nitrate of potash. It is the explosive ingredient in gunpowder, many detonating powders, and hoofier matches. Boyle in the 17th century demonstrated that salt-petre was composed of aqua fortis (nitric acid) and potash; the discoveries of Lavoisier (1777) and Davy (1807) showed its real composition. Its manufacture in England began about 1625. During the French revolutionary war, the manufacture was greatly increased by the researches of Berthollet.

SALUTE AT SEA. It is a received maxim at sea, that he who returns the salute always fires fewer guns than he receives, which is done even between the ships of princes of equal dignity; but the Swedes and Danes return the compliment without regarding how many guns are fired to them. The English claim the right of being saluted first in all places, as sovereigns of the seas; the Venetians claimed this honour within their gulf, &c. The admiralty issued a code of rules for salutes, Dec. 1876. See Flag, and Naval Salutes.

SALVADOR, SAN, one of the Bahamas, and the first point of land discovered in the West Indies or America by Columbus. It was previously called Guanahani, or Cay's Isle, and Columbus (in acknowledgment to God for his deliverance) named it San Salvador when he first saw it, 11 Oct. 1492. The capital, San Salvador, was destroyed by an earthquake, 16 April 1854, and is now abandoned.

Zaldivar, May, 1876; Gen. Menéndez, June, 1885; re-elected 1 March 1887 for four years. Population, 1886, 651,130. The capital, San Salvador, was nearly destroyed by an earthquake, 19 March, 1873, about 50 persons perished. The convulsion began 5 March and thus gave timely warning. SASSANIDES, descendants of Artaxerxes or Artabazus, whose father, Babek, was the son of Sasan. He revolted against Artabanus, the king of Parthia; defeated him on the plain of Hormuz, 226; and re-established the Persian monarchy. This dynasty was expelled by the Mahometans, 652; see Persia.

SATAN, see Devil Worship.

SATELLITES, see Planets, Jupiter, Mars, Saturn.

SATIRE. About a century after the introduction of comedy, satire made its appearance at Rome in the writings of Lucilius, called the inventor of it, 116 B.C. Lery. The Satires of Horace (35 B.C.), Juvenal (about A.D. 100), and Persius (about A.D. 60), are the most celebrated in ancient times, and those of Churchill (1761) and Pope (1729), in modern times. Butler's "Hudibras," satirizing the presbyterians, first appeared in 1663. Satire Menippée, a celebrated satirical pamphlet, partly in verse and partly in prose, attacking the policy of the court of Spain and the league, written in the style of the biting satires of the cynic philosopher Menippus. The first part, "Catholicon d'Espagne," by Lery, appeared in 1593; the second, "Abrégé des États de la Ligue," by Gillot, Pitou, Rapin, and Fumelet, appeared in 1594. Boutillet.

SATRAPIES, divisions of the Persian empire, formed by Darius Hystaspes about 516 B.C.

SATTARA (W. India) was long a flourishing state, founded by Seirajee about 1646; subjugated by the Maharrats about 1749; conquered by the British, 1818; ruled by a rajah under the protection of the company. The last rajah died without issue in 1848; when the country was annexed.

SATURDAY (the last, or seventh day of the week; the Jewish Sabbath; see Sabbath). It was so called from an idol worshipped on this day by the Saxons, and according to Vorstegan, was named by them Saturne's day. Parsons. It is more probably from Saturn, dies Saturni. Saturday Review, an independent literary weekly journal, was first published, 3 Nov. 1855. See Hospital.

SATURN, the planet, ascertained to be about 900 millions of miles distant from the sun, and its diameter to be about 77,230 miles. One of the eight satellites was discovered by Huyghens (25 March, 1655); four by Cassini (1672-84); two by air William Herschel (1789), and one by Bond and Lamelle (1848). The ring was observed by Galileo, about 1610; its annular form determined by Huyghens, about 1655; and discovered to be two-fold by Messrs. Bail, 13 Oct. 1665; an inner ring was detected in 1850 by Dawes in England (29 Nov.), and by Bond in America.

SATURNALIA, festivals in honour of Saturn, father of the gods, were instituted long before the foundation of Rome, in commemoration of the freedom and equality which prevailed on the earth in his golden reign. Some, however, suppose that the Saturnalia were first observed at Rome in the reign of Tullius Hostilius (673-640 B.C.), after a victory obtained over the Sabines: whilst others suppose that Janus first instituted them in gratitude to Saturn, from whom he had learned agriculture. Others assert that they were first celebrated after a victory obtained over the Latins by the dictator Posthumus, when he dedicated a temple to Saturn, 497 B.C. During these festivals no business was allowed, amusements were encouraged, and distinctions ceased. Langlet.

SAVAGE CLUB, instituted by various literary men, in 1857, facetiously terming themselves "savages," on account of their freedom from conventionalism. On some occasions they gave a war-whoop. Sala. Mr. W. E. Gladstone was present at the 22nd anniversary, 14 June, 1879, and the prince of Wales has been a visitor (1882).

SAVANDROOG (Mysoor, S. India), a strong fortress, was captured by the British without loss, 21 Dec. 1791.

SAVINGS' BANKS. The first of these was instituted at Berne, in Switzerland, in 1787, by the name of caisse de donations, being intended for servants only; another was set up in Basel, in 1792, open to all depositors. The rev. Joseph Smith, of Waverley, began a Benevolent Institution in 1799; and in 1803-4, a "charitable bank" was instituted at Tottenham by Miss Fricilla Wakefield. The rev. Henry Duncan established a parish bank at Ruthwell in 1810. One was opened in Edinburgh in 1814. The benefit clubs, among artisans, having accumulated stocks of money for their progressive purposes, a plan was adopted to identify these funds with the public debt of the country, and an extra rate of interest was held out as an inducement; hence were formed savings' banks to receive small sums, returnable with interest on demand.

Rt. hon. Geo. Rose developed the system, and brought it under parliamentary control, 1826.

In 1840 there were 550 banks; 766,354 depositors; amount, £2,060,904.

Acts to consolidate and amend previous laws relating to savings' banks were passed in 1828 and 1847; extended to Scotland in 1835; again consolidated and amended in 1863, 1880 and 1887.

On 30 Nov. 1881, the number of savings' banks in Great Britain and Ireland was 478, leaders above 20,000 friendly societies and charitable institutions. The depositors (in the banks) were 2,096,581, while the societies embraced a vast but unknown number of persons: the amount of deposits was 32,903,521.

SAVONA (a manufacturing town, N Italy, lun., held by the Genoese) was captured by the king of Sardinia in 1746, by the French in 1809, and annexed restored to Sardinia at the peace. Pope Pius VII was kept here by Napoleon I., 1809-12. Some is said to have been invented here, and hence its French name savon.

SAVOY, the ancient Sapaudia or Sabaudia, formerly a province in N Italy, east of Piedmont. It became a Roman province about 118 B.C. The Alemanni seized it in A.D. 395, and the Franks in 490. It shared the revolutions of Switzerland till about 1048, when Conrad, emperor of Germany, gave it to Humbert, with the title of count. Count Thomas acquired Piedmont in the 13th century. Amadeus, count of Savoy, having entered his dominions, solicited Sigismund to erect them into a duchy, which he did at Cambrai, 19 Feb 1416. Victor-Amadeus, duke of Savoy, obtained the kingdom of Sicily from Spain, by a treaty, in 1713, but afterwards exchanged it with the emperor for the island of Sardinia, with the title of king, 1720. The French subdued Savoy in 1792, and made it a department of France, under the name of Mont Blanc, in 1800. It was restored to the king of Sardinia in 1814, but with Nice annexed to France in 1860, in accordance with a vote by universal suffrage, 23 April, 1860. Savoy was visited by the emperor and empress of the French in August, 1860. The annexation was censured in England.

SAVOY PALACE (London), was built by Peter of Savoy, uncle of Eleanor, queen of Henry III, in 1245, on land granted to him. He gave it to the fraternity of Mountjoy (Monte Jovis), from whom it was purchased by queen Eleanor for her son Edmund. Here resided John, king of France, when a prisoner, 1357 & seq. The Savoy was burnt by Wat Tyler and his followers, 1381. It was restored as an hospital of St John the Baptist by Henry VII about 1505. The fruitless CONVENTION of bishops and eminent puritans for the revision of the liturgy was held at the Savoy, April-July, 1661. The hospital was dissolved in 1702, and the buildings (then used as a military prison) removed for Waterloo-bridge and its approaches, 1817-19. The ancient Chapel (which once possessed the privilege of sanctuary), after several restorations, was destroyed by fire, 7 July, 1864, and was rebuilt at the queen's expense, and re-opened 26 Nov 1865. The privilege of sanctuary, much abused, was abolished by parliament 1697. The Rev Henry White, 30 years chaplain, died 7 Oct 1890.

SAW Invented by Dardalus Pliny. Invented by Talus Apollodorus. Talus, it is said, having found the jaw-bone of a snake, employed it to cut through a piece of wood, and then formed an instrument of iron like it. Saw-mills were erected in Madeira in 1420 at Breslau in 1427. Norway had the first saw-mill in 1530. The bishop of Ely, ambassador from Mary of England to the court of Rome describes a saw-mill there, 1555. The attempts to introduce saw-mills in England were violently opposed, and one erected by a Dutchman in 1663 was forced to be abandoned. Saw-mills were erected near London about 1770. The excellent saw machinery in Woolwich dockyard is based upon the invention of the elder Brunel, 1806-13. The circular saw was introduced into England about 1790. The saw gin for separating cotton wool from the pod, invented by Eli Whitney, an American, in 1793, led to the immense growth of cotton in the southern states of the Union. Fowles and James's hand saw was patented in 1858.

Witkind, their great leader, who claimed descent from Woden, professed Christianity about 755. From him descended the first and the present ruling family of Wettin (the houses of Sappenburg, Guelph, and Anjou intervened from 1106 to 1421).  went to Ireland, and, having settled his affairs there, was drowned on his return, launching from the shore, near the harbour, called Cerrack Feryus to this day,

SCOURERS, see Mohocks.

SCOURING OF THE WHITE HORSE, see Aardvark.

SCREW, was known to the Greeks. The pumping-screw of Archimedes, or screw-cylinder for raising water, invented about 236 B.C., is still in use. It is stated that with the assistance of the screw, one man can press down or raise up as much as 150 men can do without it.—The Screw-Propeller consists of two or more twisted blades, like the vanes of a windmill, set on an axis, running parallel with the keel of a vessel, and revolving beneath the water at the stern. It is driven by a steam-engine. The principle was shown by Hooke in 1681, and since by Du Rueil, Borelli, and others. Patents for propellers were taken out by Joseph Bramah in 1784, by Wm. Lyttelton in 1794; and by Edward Shorter in 1799. But these led to no useful result. In 1836 patents were obtained by Francis Pettit Smith (knighted July, 1871; died, 12 Feb. 1874) and captain John Ericsson (died, aged 86, March, 1889); and to them the successful application of the screw-propeller must be attributed. The first vessels with the screw were the Archimedes, built on the Thames in 1838 by H. Wigham, and the Rattler, built in the United States (1844), and tried in England in 1845. Double screw-propellers are now employed. A new form of screw-propeller invented by col. W. H. Mallory, of U. S. A. army, was tried on the Thames and reported successful, Aug. 1878.

SCRIBLERUS CLUB, a literary club, founded by Swift in 1714, included amongst its members, Bolingbroke, Pope, Gay, and Arbuthnot.

SCRIPTURE KNOWLEDGE INSTITUTION, Bristol, was founded by George Muller, a Prussian (born in 1805). He came to Bristol as a minister of the "Brethren" in 1832, and on 5 March, 1834, founded this institution, the objects of which are: 1. Assistance of schools giving instruction on scriptural principles; 2. Circulation of the scriptures; 3. Assistance to missions; 4. Circulation of tracts; 5. Provision for destitute orphans, see Orphan-houses. Without application, Mr. Muller, since he began, up to 1868, had received by voluntary contribution, 430,000*l*.

SCROFULA, see King's-evil.

SCRUTIN (French for ballot). In scrutin de liste the voter writes on his paper as many names as there are persons to be elected, for instance for the whole department. In scrutin d'arrondissement, the members are elected separately. The adoption of one of these modes was much discussed in France in 1875. The conservatives prefer the latter, the radicals the former. See France, Nov. 1875. The scrutin de liste was adopted in the elections of 1848, 1849, 1871, and 1875.

M. Bardon's bill for adopting the scrutin de liste (warmly advocated by M. Gambetta), was passed by the chamber of deputies (243-235), 18 May, 1881; rejected by the senate (148-124), 9 June, 1881; again rejected, Jan. 1882.

M. Waldeck Roussseau's bill for the scrutin de liste passed by the deputies (322-99), 14 March, finally passed, 9 June, 1885.

The bill for the restoration of the scrutin d'arrondissement passed by the chamber 11 Feb. and senate 13 Feb. 1880.

SCULLABOGUE, see Masquerade, 1798.

SCULPTURE is said to have begun with the Egyptians. Bezaleel and Aholiab built the tabernacles in the wilderness, and made all the vessels and ornaments, 1491 B.C., and their skill is recorded as the gift of God. Exod. xxxi. 3. Diponius and Scylla, statuaries at Crete, established a school at Sicyon. Pliny speaks of them as being the first who sculptured marble and polished it; all statues before their time being of wood, 568 B.C. Alexander gave Lysippus the sole right of making his statues, 326 B.C. He left no less than 600 pieces, some of which were so highly valued in the age of Augustus, that they sold for their weight in gold. Sculpture did not flourish among the Romans, and in the middle ages with some fine exceptions, was generally degraded. With the revival of painting, it revived also; and Donato di Bardi, born at Florence, A.D. 1383, was the earliest professor among the moderns. An institute of sculptors was established in 1861. See Royal Academy and Statues.

SCOUTAGE or ESCOUAGE. The service of the field (scoutum) is either uncertain or certain. Vacuag uncertain is where the tenant by his tenure is bound to follow his lord; and is called Casteward, where the tenant is bound to defend a castle. Escoage certain is where the tenant is set at a certain sum of money to be paid in lieu of such uncertain services. The first tax levied in England to pay an army, 5 Hen. II. 1159. Cowel.

SCUTARI, Asiatic Turkey, opposite Constantinople, of which it is a suburb. It was anciently called Chrysopolis, golden city, in consequence, it is said, of the Persians having established a treasury here when they attempted the conquest of Greece. Near here Constantine finally defeated Licinius, 323. The hospital was occupied by the sick and wounded of the Anglo-French army, in 1854-5, whose sufferings were much alleviated by the kind exertions of Miss Florence Nightingale and a band of nurses under her, aided by a large fund of money (£5,000) subscribed by the public and placed in the care of the proprietors of the Times newspaper; see Times. Explosion of powder magazine by lightning, about 150 killed, 8 June, 1883.

SCYTHIA, situate in the most northern parts of Europe and Asia. The boundaries were unknown to the ancients. The Scythians made several irruptions upon the more southern provinces of Asia, especially 624 B.C., when they remained in possession of Asia Minor for twenty-eight years, and at different periods extended their conquests in Europe, penetrating as far as Egypt; see Tartary.

SEA. Lieut. Maury first published his "Physical Geography of the Sea" in 1854, and other important works since; he died Feb. 1873; see Deep Sea.

SEA BIRDS' PRESERVATION ACT, passed 24 June, 1869.

SEA FIGHTS see Naval Battles.

SEA FISHERIES, see Fisheries, and Behring Straits.

SEAL FISHERY ACT, passed 14 June, 1875.

SEALS or SIGNETS. Engraved gems were used as such by the Egyptians, Jews, Assyrians, and Greeks; see Exod. xxviii. 14. Ahab's seal was used by Jezebel, 899 B.C. (1 Kings xxi. 8.) The Romans in the time of the Tarquins (about 600 B.C.) had gummed rings. They sealed rooms, granaries, bags of money, &c. The German emperor, Frederick I. (A.D. 1152) had seals of gold, silver, and tin. Impressions of the seals of Saxon kings are extant; and the English great seal is attributed to Edward the Confessor (1041-66). "A seal with armorial bearings before the 11th century, is certainly false." Foebroke. The most ancient English seal with arms on it is said to be that of Richard I. or John. White and coloured waxes were used. Our present sealing-wax, containing shellac, did not come into general use in Germany and England until about 1550. Red waxes for seals came into use about 1624; but were not used for public seals till the 18th century. A seal acquired by the British Museum made of black hematite, thought to be Hittite, found at Yuzgat in Asia Minor, announced Nov. 1886. Nat. Society, for publication of fac-similes of ancient seals, was established in 1883.—For SEALED LETTERS, see Great Seal and Lettres de Cachet.

SEAMEN. In consequence of the great loss of life by wrecks of merchant vessels, attributed to bad ships and overloading, a commission of inquiry was agreed to by parliament on the motion of Mr. S.

Pimsoil (who published "Our Seamen: an Appeal"), 4 March, 1873. The duke of Edinburgh was on the commission; the duke of Somerset, chairman. Mr. Pimsoil has been censured for exaggeration.

The report issued in September tended to justify the public apprehensions, but suggested no remedy. The report presented to parliament, 2 July, 1874, condemned the present insurance system, and recommended increased responsibility of owners and others, and strengthening the powers of the Board of Trade for investigation.

The Merchant Shipping Survey Bill was rejected (173-170) 24 June, 1874.

After much excitement, an Act was passed to give further powers to the Board of Trade to stop unseaworthy ships 12 Aug. 1875.

Another Merchant Shipping Act (which see) passed 15 Aug. 1876.

Strong circular issued by the Board of Trade (Mr. Chamberlain); deaths of the employed in ships asserted to be 1 in 60; in coal mines 1 in 315; present system stated to be ineffectual. 1 Jan. 1884. First annual congress of the National Seamen's and Firemen's union held at Cardiff (Mr. Pimsoil present). 8 Oct. 1889.

See Shipping.

Seamen's hospital society, see Dreadnought.

SEAS, SOVEREIGNTY OF THE. The claim of England to rule the British seas is of very ancient date. Arthur is said to have assumed it, and Alfred afterwards supported this claim. It was maintained by Selden, and measures were taken by government in consequence, 8 Chas. I. 1633. The Dutch, after the death of Charles I., made some attempts to obtain it, but were roughly treated by Blake and other admirals. Russia and other powers of the north armed to avoid search, 1780; again, 1800; see Armed Neutrality and Flag. The international rule of the road at sea was settled in 1862; (new rules were issued in 1879 and 19 Aug. 1884), yet near Great Britain alone there have been 13,000 collisions in six years. Mr. Wm. Stirling Lacon proposed to reduce the rules from 749 words to 144, for simplicity and security. His form had been nine times before parliament, 1873. Revised rules issued by the admiralty in a "Fleet Circular," Nov. 1885.

The British Board of Trade appointed a committee, consisting of admirals N. Bowden Smith, sir Robert Moynaux, sir George B. Nares, and others, to consider measures for the prevention of collisions at sea; first meeting 1 Aug. 1880.

SEASONS. The four natural divisions of the year.

In the north temperate regions in 1884 the spring quarter began 30 March, 5 a.m., the summer, 21 June, 1 a.m., the autumn, 22 Sept. 3 p.m., the winter, 21 Dec. 10 a.m. See Lapland seasons under Year. James Thomson's "Seasons" published: "Winter," 1726; "Summer," 1727; "Spring," 1728; "Autumn," 1730. Haydn's "Seasons" first performed, 1801.

SEATS BILL, see under Reform.

SEBASTIAN, ST. (N. Spain), was taken by the French, under the duke of Berwick, in 1719. It was besieged by the British and allied army under Wellington. After a most heavy bombardment, by which the whole town was laid nearly in ruins, it was stormed by general Graham (afterwards lord Lynedoch), and taken 31 Aug. 1813.—On 5 May, 1836, the fortified works, through the centre of which ran the high road to Hernani, were carried by the English auxiliary legion under general Evans, after very hard fighting. The British naval squadron, off St. Sebastian, under lord John Hay, lent very opportune aid to the victors in this contest.—A vigorous assault was made on the lines of general De Lacy Evans, at St. Sebastian, by the Carlists, 1 Oct. 1836. Both parties fought with bravery. The Carlists were repulsed, after suffering severely. The loss of the Anglo-Spanish force was 376 men and 37 officers, killed and wounded. General De Lacy Evans was slightly wounded. See under Leagues. The queen regent of Spain meets queen Victoria here, 27 March, 1889. Population, 1887, 29,047.

SEBASTOPOL or SEVASTOPOL, a town and once a naval arsenal, at S.W. point of the Crimea, formerly the little village of Akkier. The buildings were commenced in 1784, by Catherine II. after the conquest of the country. The town is built in the shape of an amphitheatre on the rise of a large hill flattened on its summit, according to a plan laid down before 1794, which has been since adhered to. The fortifications and harbour were constructed by an English engineer, colonel Upton, and his sons, since 1830. The population in 1834 was 15,600. This place underwent eleven months' siege, by the English and French in 1854 and 1855. Immediately after the battle of the Alma, 20 Sept. 1854, the allied army marched to Sebastopol, and took up its position on the plateau between it and Balaklava, and the grand attack and bombardment commenced 17 Oct. 1854, without success. After many sanguinary encounters by day and night, and repeated bombardments, a grand assault was made on 8 Sept. 1855, upon the Malakoff tower and the Redan, the most important fortifications to the south of the town. The French succeeded in capturing and retaining the Malakoff. The attacks of the English on the great Redan and of the French upon the little Redan were successful, but the assailants were compelled to retire after a desperate struggle with great loss of life. The French lost 1646 killed, of whom 5 were generals, 24 superior and 116 inferior officers, 4500 wounded, and 1400 missing. The English lost 385 killed (29 being commissioned and 42 non-commissioned officers), 1886 wounded, and 176 missing. In the night the Russians abandoned the southern and principal part of the town and fortifications, after destroying as much as possible, and crossed to the northern forts. They also sank or burnt the remainder of their fleet. The allies found a very great amount of stores when they entered the place, 9 Sept. The works were utterly destroyed in April, 1856, and the town was restored to the Russians in July; gen. Todleben, the able defender, died 1 July, 1884, and was buried here; his monument uncovered 28 June, 1890. See Russo-Turkish War. Population of Sebastopol, 1885, 33,803.

SECEDERS; SECESSION CHURCH, see Burghes.

SECONDARY OF LONDON, an ancient office, resembling that of under-sheriff in counties. The place was purchaseable till early in the present century, when it was bought up by the corporation.

SECRET SOCIETIES, Assassins, Fenians, Ribbonmen, Volcani, Tribunali, Rosicrucians, Illuminati, Carbonari, Mary-Anne, Nihilists.

* In consequence of the sufferings and disasters of the army in the winter of 1854-5, the Sebastopol Inquiry Committee was appointed, and the Aberdeen administration resigned, Feb. 1855. The committee sat from 1 March to 13 May, and Aberdeen being the last person examined. Its report was presented 16 June. Mr. Roebuck, the chairman, moved on 17 July that the house should pass a vote of severe reprobation on every member of the Aberdeen administration. On 29 July his motion was lost by a majority of 107 against it. In 1855 the government sent Mr. John McNeill and col. Tulloch to inquire into the state of the armies in the Crimea. Their report was presented to parliament in Feb. 1856. A commission was appointed to consider the statements in the report (which were very unfavorable to many officers), but the substance of the report was unshaken.

SECRETARIES OF STATE. The earliest authentic record of a secretary of state is in the reign of Henry III., when John Maunsell is described as "Secretarius Noster," 1253. Kymer. Towards the close of Henry VIII.'s reign, two secretaries were appointed; and upon the union with Scotland, Anne added a third as secretary for Scotch affairs; this appointment was afterwards laid aside; but in the reign of George III. the number was again increased to three, one for the American department. In 1782 this last was abolished by act of Parliament, and the secretaries were appointed for home, foreign, and colonial affairs. When there were but two secretaries, one held the portefeuille of the Northern department, comprising the Low Countries, Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Poland, Russia, &c.; the other, of the Southern department, including France, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Portugal, and Turkey; the affairs of Ireland belonging to the elder secretary; both secretaries then equally directed the home affairs. Deaton. There are now six secretaries—home, foreign, colonial, war, (in 1858) India, and (in 1885) Scotland, all in the cabinet. Secretary of State for Scotland act passed 14 Aug. 1885, amended 1887, explained 1889. See Administrations, and separate articles.

The Institute of Secretaries was started at a meeting in London, 4 July, 1890, to collect information respecting the position, duties, and responsibilities of secretaries to be applied for their benefit. First dinner 24 June, 1891.

SECTS, RELIGIOUS, see under Worship, and their respective titles.

SECULAR GAMES (Ludi Saeculares), very ancient Roman games, celebrated on important occasions. Horace wrote his "Carmen Saeculare" for their celebration in the reign of the emperor Augustus (17). They took place again in the reign of Claudius (47), of Domitian (88), and for the last time, of Philip (238), believed to be 2000 years after the foundation of the city.

SECULARISM, a name given to the principles advocated by G. J. and Austin Holyoake, about 1846, and since by Mr. Bradlaugh.

Its central idea is free, not lawless thought, and it considers acceptance to be scrutiny. It advocates liberty of action without injury to others. It is not against Christianity, but independent of it. Its standard is utilitarian, it is the religion of the present life only; teaching men to seek morality in nature, and happiness in duty. Mr. Austin Holyoake and other secularists repudiated atheism, Mr. Bradlaugh and others profess it.

SECURITY FROM VIOLENCE ACT, passed in 1863, appointed whipping as part of the punishment for attempts at garroting.

SEDAN, an ancient fortified city in the valley of the Meuse, N.E. of France, the seat of a principality long held by the dukes of Bouillon. On 6 July, 1641, a victory was gained at La Marée, near Sedan, by the count of Soissons and the troops of Bouillon and other French princes, over the royal army supporting Richelieu; but the count was slain on 23 June, 1642. The duke was arrested in the midst of his army, and was made to cede Sedan to the crown. The protestant university was abolished after the revocation of the edict of Nantes, 22 Oct. 1685. Around this place a series of desperate conflicts on 29, 30, and 31 Aug. between the French army of the north, under marshal MacMahon (about 150,000 men), and the greater part of the three German armies under the king and crown-prince of Prussia and the crown-prince of Saxony (about 250,000 men) was brought to a close on 1 Sept. 1870. The battle began with attacks on the French right and left about 3 a.m., and was very severe at 3 p.m. At 4 p.m. the Germans remained masters of the field, and the towns-people of Prussia announced a complete victory, the chief part of the French army retreating into Sedan.

The emperor Napoleon was present during the battle, and, it is said, stood at Igny, near Sedan, exposed for four hours to the German grenades. The impossibility of further resistance was then evident. The Germans had constructed their circle close round Sedan, their formidable artillery held all the heights, from which they could at pleasure wholly destroy the town and the army, and only 3000 men were in a condition to respond to their commander's call, and to make a supreme effort to break through the enemy with the emperor and escape to Montmédy.

At first general de Wimpfen (called to the command when MacMahon was wounded) indignantly rejected the terms offered by the victor, and the emperor had a fruitless interview with count Bismarck to endeavour to mitigate them.

On 2 Sept. the emperor wrote in autograph to the king of Prussia, "Mon frère, n'avant pu mourir à la tête de mes troupes, je dépose mon épée au pied de votre majesté, Napoléon." A capitulation of Sedan and the whole army therein was signed by General Von Moltke and De Wimpfen at the château of Bellevue, near Frenois, at 11.30 a.m., and at 2 p.m. an interview took place between the king and the emperor, who was downcast but dignified.

The conflict was principally carried on by the artillery, in which (according to the emperor) the Germans had the advantage, not only in number (600 to 500), but also in weight, range, and precision. The carnage was awful, and the field the next day was a mass of shattered bones, torn flesh, and coloured rags.

About 35,000 French prisoners were taken in the battle, and 35,000 surrendered the next day, together with 70 mitrailleurs, 400 field-pieces, and 150 fortress guns. About 1,000 French wounded were found lying in the neighbourhood, and about 3000 escaped into Belgium and laid down their arms. The great army of the north had ceased to exist. Among the killed was Lieut.-col. Fremy, a correspondent of the Times, who had approached too near the conflict. The French emperor and his suite arrived at Wilhelmshöhe, a castle near Cassel appointed for his residence, (formerly inhabited by his uncle Jerome, when king of Westphalia), in the evening of 5 Sept.

On 2 Sept. the village of Bazailles was stormed by the Prussians and burnt, it was said, because the inhabitants fired on the ambulances; many women and children perished. The French denied the provocation. The place had been previously twice bombarded and stormed by the maligned combatants.

In a letter dated 12 May, 1872, the emperor Napoleon took upon himself the whole responsibility of the surrender of Sedan.

SEDAN CHAIRS (so called from Seden), were first seen in England in 1581. One used in the reign of James I., by the duke of Buckingham, caused great indignation, and the people exclaimed that he was employing his fellow-creatures to do the service of beasts. Sedan chairs came into London in 1614, when sir Francis Duncomb obtained the sole privilege to use, let, and hire a number of such covered chairs for fourteen years. They came into very general use in 1649.

SEDANGS, a tribe dwelling on the borders of Annam. M. de Mayreux, an ex-officer of the French navy, having made himself their king, came to Paris. He was set aside, and the Sedangs were brought under French protection by the French resident-general in Indo-China; reported Oct. 1889.

SEDMOOR (Somersetshire), where the duke of Monmouth (natural son of Charles II. by Lucy Walters), who had risen in rebellion on the accession of James II., was completely defeated by the royal army, 6 July, 1685. The duke was made a prisoner in the disguise of a peasant, at the bottom of a ditch, overcome with hunger and fatigue. He was tried and beheaded on 15 July following.

SEDITION. Sedition acts were passed in the reign of George III. The proclamation against seditious writings was published May, 1792. The celebrated Sedition bill passed Dec. 1795. Seditious societies were suppressed by act, June, 1797. The Seditious Meetings and Assemblies bill passed 31 March, 1817. In Ireland, during the Roman Catholic and Repeal agitation, acts or proclamations against sedition and seditious meetings were published from time to time until 1848.

SEEDS. An act was passed to prevent the adulteration of seeds (a common practice), 11 Aug. 1869; amended in 1878.

SEEKERS, see Quakers.

SEGEDIN, or SEZGEDIN, Hungary. Here was concluded a treaty between Ladislaus IV. and Amurath II. 12 July, 1444. It was treacherously annulled at the instigation of cardinal Julian, who with Ladislaus perished in the fatal battle of Varna, 10 Nov. 1444. See Varna.

SEICENTO, see under Italian.

SEIDLICE (Poland), where a battle was fought 10 April, 1831, between the Poles and Russians. The Poles obtained the victory after a bloody conflict, taking 4000 prisoners and several pieces of cannon; but this success was soon followed by fatal reverse.

SEISMOMETER (from seismos, Greek for earthquake), an apparatus for measuring the violence of the shocks. One is described by Mr. Robert Mallet in his work on earthquakes, published in 1858. Many described by Prof. J. A. Kwing, 1880-8.

SELA, see Petra.

SELBORNE SOCIETY, for the preservation of birds, plants, and pleasant places, originated in the Selborne league (afterwards society) formed by Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Musgrave in Nov. 1885. It has included the plumage league since Jan. 1886, (see under Birds).

SELDEN SOCIETY, founded 29 Jan. 1887, for the study of English legal history, and publication of ancient MSS. and books, by lords justice Fry, Coleridge, and Lindley, and other eminent lawyers. John Selden, legal antiquary, born 16 Dec. 1584, died 30 Nov. 1654.

SELECT-MEN, the earliest officers of the townships formed by the first colonists of New England about 1635.

SELECTION, NATURAL, see Species.

SELENIUM, a grayish-white elementary substance (chemically resembling sulphur), discovered in the stone riolite by Berzelius, in 1817.

The variation in its resistance to the electric current when subjected to light was observed by Mr. Willoughby Smith in 1873, and utilised in the telephone (which see). Dr. C. Wm. Siemens constructed a "selenium eye."

SELEUCIA (Syria), made the capital of the Syrian monarchy by its builder, Seleucus Nicator, 312 B.C. On the fall of the Seleucids, it became a republic, 65 B.C. It was taken by Trajan, A.D. 116; several times given up and retaken; subjugated by the Saracens, and united with Ctesiphon, 636.

SELEUCIDES, ERA OF THE, dates from the reign of Seleucus Nicator. It was used in Syria for many years, and frequently by the Jews until the 15th century, and by some Arabians. Opinions vary as to its commencement. To reduce it to our are (supposing it to begin 1 Sept. 312 B.C.), subtract 311 years 4 months.

SELF-DENYING ORDINANCE, which ordained that no member of parliament should hold any civil or military office or command conferred by either or both of the houses, or by authority derived from them, after much discussion, was passed 3 April, 1655, by the influence of Cromwell, who thus removed the earl of Essex and other Presbyterians out of his way. A somewhat similar ordinance was adopted by the parliament at Melbourne in Australia, in 1858. The name was given to an arrangement made respecting British naval promotions and retirements in 1870.

SELLASIA (Laconia). Here the Spartans under Cleomenes were defeated by Antigonus Doseon and the Achæans, 221 B.C.

SELSEY, see Chichester.

SEMAPHORE, see Telegraphs.

SEMATOLOGY (Greek sema, a sign), the science of signs, a term proposed by B. H. Smart, who died 1872.

SEMINARA (Naples). Near here Gonsalvo de Cordova, the great captain, was defeated by the French, in 1495; but defeated them, 21 April, 1503.

SEMINCAS, see Simancas.

SEMPACH (Switzerland). Here the Swiss gained a great victory over Leopold, duke of Austria, 9 July, 1386, under Arnold von Winkelried; the duke and Arnold were slain, and the liberty of Switzerland was established. The day is still commemorated. Especially on 5 July, 1886.

SEMPER PARVUM ("Always the same"), one of the mottoes of queen Elizabeth, was adopted by queen Mary and queen Anne, 13 Dec. 1702.

SENATE (Senatus). In the ancient republic the government was divided between the senatus (from senia, old; in Greek, gerousia, from geron, old), an assembly of elders, and the popular assembly (comitia, Latin; ekklesia, Greek), the king being merely the executive. The Roman senate, said to have originally been composed of 100 members, was raised to 300 by Tarquinius Priscus; to about 600 by Spilia, about 81 B.C.; and to 900 by Julius Cæsar. It was reformed and reduced to 600 by Augustus; and gradually lost its power and dignity under the emperors. The mere form existed in the reign of Justinian. A second senate, formed at Constantinople by Constantine, retained its office till the 6th century. S. P. Q. R. on the Roman standard stood for "Senatus Populusque Romanus," "the Roman senate and people." A senatus consultum was a law enacted by the senate.

The French senate was created by the constitution of the year 8, promulgated 24 Dec. 1799, to watch over the administration of the laws. The number of senators was raised gradually from 60 to 137. The senate was replaced by the chamber of peers in 1814; re-established by Napoleon III. 14 Jan. 1852; and abolished, 5 Sept. 1870. Its re-establishment was proposed in 1873. Establishment of a senate of 300 voted; 253 to be elected for 9 years by the departments; 75 (for life) by national assembly, 22 Feb. 1875.

The commissioners of sewers in London were superseded by the metropolitan commissioners of sewers, nominated by the government. They abolished the large brick sewers, introducing pipe drains, and turned the contents of 30,000 cesspools into the River Thames. The necessity for purifying the defiled river led to the construction of a new system of drainage, under the superintendence of the Metropolitan Board of Works (which see). The main drainage (the plan of Mr J. W. Bazalgette) consists of the Northern High-level, Middle-level, and Low-level, and Southern High-level and Low-level. On 14 March, 1865, the works were said to be completed, except the low-level sewer on the north side, which was waiting for the completion of the Thames embankment, &c. On 4 April, 1865, the prince of Wales started the engines which commenced lifting the waters of the southern outfall, at Crossness Point, near Erith. The main drainage works of the metropolis (82 miles), were finally completed Aug. 1875. The sewage is carried 14 miles down the river. Total cost, 4,500,000. See Carbolio Acid.

Royal commission on the Metropolitan Sewage Discharge (Lord Beaumont, Mr John Lubbock, Mr A. W. Williams, and others) appointed 22 June, 1882, reports on the great contamination of the Thames at the outfalls, and need of change, approval of the combination of chemical precipitation with filtration through earth, June and Dec. 1882.

Mr Wm. Webster's method of decomposing London sewage by electricity set up at Crossness, reported successful on inspection March 1886.

Mr H. Wollheim's process, the Ammonia (or ammonia compounds), reported successful exhibited at Wimbledon Sewage Farm, Aug., before the lord mayor and others 18 Sept. 1889.

SEWING-MACHINE. It is said that Thomas Saint patented one for boots and shoes in 1790. Similar inventions are ascribed to Duncan (1804), Adams and Dodge (American, 1818), Thimomani (French, 1834), and W. J. Hunt (1834). The first really practical sewing-machine was the invention of Elias Howe, an American mechanic, of Cambridge, in Massachusetts, about 1841, who died at Brooklyn, 2 Oct. 1867, aged 47. It is now known under an improved form as Thomas's shuttle machine, by whom it was introduced in England in 1846. Many improvements have been since made and new machines invented.

He died 1 Oct. 1885, aged 84. A large sum was subscribed for two statues and a national convalescent home, Oct. 1885. A statue uncovered in Westminster Abbey by the business Burdett-Coutts, 1 Oct. 1888. A memorial fountain by Alfred Gilbert is to be set up in Piccadilly circus (Aug., 1892).

* The utilisation of diminished sewage as manure is now much advocated. Great interest is said to have been attained at Edinburgh, Carlisle, Croydon, and other places. Much hot controversy has arisen respecting this disposal of the London sewage. On 15 Nov. 1864 the Metropolitan Board accepted a contract for its disposal from Messrs. Hope and Nipm. Sewage Utilisation acts were passed in 1865 and 1867 and the Metropolitan Sewage and Sewer Reclamation acts were passed in June, 1865. The sewage farm near Barking, Essex, was reported to be flourishing in 1868. Good grass and corn crops raised.

SHAFESBURY PARK ESTATE, near Wandsworth, London, S.W., a model village, and termed "a workman's city;" built here for clerks, artisans, and labourers, by a company, was opened by the earl of Shaftesbury, 3 Nov. 1873, and 18 July, 1874.

SHAKERS, an English sect, now chiefly found in America, arose in the time of Charles I., and derived its name from their voluntary convulsion. It existed for a short time only, but was revived by James Wardley in 1747, and still more by Ann Lee (or Standlee), expelled quakers, about 1757. The sect emigrated to America, May, 1772, and settled near Albany, New York, 1774. They denounce marriage as sinful, regard celibacy as holy, oppose war, disown baptism and the Lord's Supper, and use dancing as part of their worship. Masters. One of their elders, Fred. W. Evans, lectured in London, Aug. 1871.

About a hundred of them settled in the New Forest, near Lymington, Hampshire, on property obtained for them by a Miss Wood not paying the interest of a mortgage they were enticed in severe weather and suffered much, end of Dec. 1874. They are called Grimlings, from Mrs. Grimling, a leader among them who died 18 Sept. 1886. The community then gradually dispersed.

Goods seized for debt about 27 July, expelled, 22 Aug. permitted to remain in the neighbourhood, Oct. 1878. Miss Wood was confined as a lunatic, 25 Feb. 1874; so men and 40 women half-starved in the New Forest; will not work for hire, Jan. 1884.

SHAKESPEARE'S PLAYS. William Shakespeare was born at Stratford-upon-Avon, Warwickshire, (23) April, 1564, and died 23 April, 1616. [An act to incorporate the Trustees and Guardians of Shakespeare's birthplace was passed 26 March, 1891.] The first collected edition of his works is dated 1623 [a facsimile of this edition was published, 1862-5], the second, 1632,* the third, 1664, the fourth, 1685, all in folio. Critical editions of the text, edited by Alexander Dyce, were published in 1857 and 1864-6, Boydell's edition, with numerous plates, was published in nine vols. folio, in 1802. Aynough's Index to Shakespeare was published in 1790, Twiss's Index, in 1805, and Mrs. Cowden Clarke's Concordance, 1847; "Key to Shakespeare," 1879; Shakespeare-Lexicon, by Alexander Schmidt, 1874-5.

Shakespeare's first plays were probably produced about 1590, and soon after presented, himself frequently, taking a part as the "Theatre," or the "Curtain," near Shore-ditch, E. London, and after 1594 at the new "Globe" theatre, Bank-side, southward, of which Shakespeare himself was part proprietor. It was of a horse-shoe form, yardly covered with thatch. After it was licensed, the thatch took fire, through the negligent discharge of a piece of ordnance, and the whole building was consumed, 29 June, 1613. The house was crowded to excess, to witness the play of Henry VIII., but the audience escaped unhurt.

SHAKESPEARE'S JUBILEE, projected by David Garrick, was celebrated at Stratford upon Avon, 68 Sept. 1769. A similar festival was kept 23 April, 1866. The tenth anniversary of Shakespeare's birth was celebrated, with many festivities, at Stratford upon Avon, 23 29 April, 1864.

SHAKESPEARE'S HOUSE. In 1847, a number of persons of distinction interested themselves for the preservation of the house in which Shakespeare was born, then actually up for sale. They held a meeting at the Thatched-House Tavern, London, 26 Aug. [in that year], and took measures for promoting a subscription set on foot by the Shakespeare Club at Stratford-upon-Avon; and a committee was appointed to carry out their object. In the end Shakespeare's house was sold at the Auction Mart in the city of London, where it was "knocked down" to the United Committee of London and Stratford for the large sum of 3000, 15 Sept. 1847. In 1848, a learned oratorical scholar, John Shakespeare (no relation of the poet), gave assent to purchase the adjoining house, that it might be pulled down, in order to ensure the poets' house from the risk of fire.

SHAKESPEARE FUND, established in Oct. 1866, to purchase Shakespeare's garden, birth place estate, and to erect and endow a public library and museum at Stratford-upon-Avon. The catalogue of the library and museum was published, Feb. 1868.

SHAKESPEARE MEMORIAL ASSOCIATION (established 1875; eleventh annual meeting, Stratford-upon-Avon, 28 April, 1886. A monument is surmounted by a statue of Shakespeare, including statues of Shakespearean characters, executed by Lord Ronald Gower, presented by him to the association, set up at Stratford-upon-Avon, unveiled by Lord Haldon (the mayor), 20 Oct. 1888. Bigger statue of Shakespeare (presented by Mr. William Knightham) erected in the boulevard Haussmann, Paris, unveiled 14 Oct. 1888.

The hon. Ignatius Donnelly, an American, reports his discovery of a cryptogram of Francis Bacon in the text of one of the plays in the folio of 1623, and thereon asserts his belief that Bacon was the author of the Shakespeare plays autumn 1877. His book, entitled "The Great Cryptogram, Francis Bacon's cipher in the so-called Shakespeare Plays" was published in 1888.

* In 1849, Mr. J. P. Collier, editor of an edition of Shakespeare, purchased a copy of the second folio, on which was written in pencil, a number of corrections, supposed to have been made soon after the time of publication. At first he thought little of these marks, but in 1853 he was induced to publish "Notes and Emendations" derived from this volume. Much controversy ensued as to the expediency of these corrections, and in 1859 it was generally agreed that they were of modern date, and consequently of little value. Mr. Collier died aged 94, 17 Sept. 1883.

SHERIFF, or shuereve, governor of a shire or county. London had its sheriffs prior to William I's reign, but some say that sheriffs were first nominated for every county in England by William in 1079. According to other historians, Henry Cornhill and Richard Bynere were the first sheriffs of London, 1 Rich. I., 1189. The nomination of sheriffs, according to the present mode, took place in 1461. Since, Anciently sheriffs were hereditary in Scotland, and in some English counties, as Westmoreland. The sheriffs of Dublin (first called bailiffs) were appointed in 1308, and obtained the name of sheriff by an incorporation of Edward VI. 1548. Thirty-five sheriffs were fined, and sheren existed in one year, rather than upon the office for London, 1734; see Seaford. The high sheriffs of the counties of England and Wales, except Middlesex and Lancaster, are nominated on the morrow of St. Martin, Nov. 12. This somewhat vice-regal office, of Saxon origin, has gradually lost much of its importance.

SHITES, the Mahometan sect predominating in Persia, see Mahometanism.

SHILLING. The value of the ancient Saxon coin of this name was fivepence, but it was reduced to fourpence about a century before the conquest. After the conquest the French solidus of twelve pence, in use among the Normans, was called shilling. The true English shilling was first coined, some say, in small numbers, by Henry VII., 1504. Ruding. A peculiar shilling, value nine pence, but to be current at twelve, was struck in Ireland, 1560, and a large but very base coinage in England for the service of Ireland, 1598. Milled shillings were coined 13 Chas II. 1662, see Coin.

SHILOH, see Pittsburg.

SHIP-BUILDING, &c., according to the Greek legends, began with the Egyptians, and ancient drawings of their rude vessels are extant. The Greeks, Phoenicians, and Carthaginians were skilful shipbuilders, and Solomon's "navy of ships" (1 Kings ii. 26), was doubtless constructed by Tyrians, 924 B.C. The ships of Tarshish (probably in Spain), are mentioned in Psalms xlviii. 7, Isaiah li. 16 &c. The Romans built their first fleet of boats, by copying a Carthaginian vessel wrecked on their coast, 260 B.C. The dangers of navigation are described in Psalms cxxi. 23-30, and Acts xvi. strong vessels were constructed by the Norsemen for invasion and piracy in the 5th century, A.D. &c., and by the Venetians and other Italians for commerce and war in the Middle Ages. The first double-decked ship built in England was of 1000 tons burthen, by order of Henry VII., was called the Great Harry, and cost 14,000*l*. Stow. Port-holes and other improvements were invented by Dembarges, a French builder at Brest, in the reign of Louis XII., about 1500. Ship-building was treated as a science by Hoste, 1696. Iron and steel are now greatly used in ship-building.

A grabstare ship cut out of solid oak, 45 feet long, 4 feet 4 inches wide, and 3 feet deep, was found by the Bridg gas company while excavating near the river Ancholme in Lincolnshire April 1825. Mr. Justice Chitty decided 6 July, 1826 that the ship was the property of the owner of the land, Mr. Elwes.

The Prancer, a great sailing ship, was built on the Clyde by Messrs. Henderson for a Bordeaux firm, 812 tons, 360 feet long, 48 feet wide, bowsprit 30 feet long, carrying power over 6,000 tons.

Ships, originally made of wood, and latterly of iron, are now frequently made of steel.

SHIPKEA, see Schipska.

SHIP-MONEY was first levied about 1607, to form a navy to oppose the Danes. This impost, levied by Charles I. in 1634-6, was much opposed, and led to the revolution. He assessed London in seven ships, of 4000 tons, and 1550 men, Yorkshire in two ships, of 600 tons or 12,000*l*, Bristol in one ship of 100 tons, Lancashire in one ship, of 400 tons. Among others, John Hampden refused to pay the tax, he was tried in the Exchequer in 1636. The judges declared the tax legal, 12 June, 1637. Ship-money was included in the grievances complained of in 1641. The five judges, who had given an opinion in its favour, were imprisoned. Hampden received a wound in a skirmish with prince Rupert, at Chalgrove, 18 June, and died 24 June, 1643.

SHIPPING, BRITISH. Shipping was first registered in the river Thames in 1786, and throughout the empire in 1787. In the middle of the 18th century, the shipping of England was but half-a-million of tons—less than London now. In 1830, the number of ships in the British empire was 22,785. The merchant shipping act of 1854 was amended in 1867, see Merchant Shipping Act, Navy and Navigation Acts.

SHIP-RAILWAY, see Railways, Oct. 1889.

SHIPWRECKS, see Wrecks.

SHIRES, see Counties and under Horse.

SHIRTS are said to have been first generally worn in the west of Europe early in the 8th century. De Fresnoy. Woollen shirts were commonly worn in England until about 1253, when linen, but of a coarse kind (fine coming at this period from abroad), was first manufactured in England by Flemish artisans. Stow.

SHODDY, a kind of soft woollen goods, manufactured from old woollen rags, or the refuse, to which new wool is added, is stated to have been first manufactured about 1813, at Batley, near Dewsbury, Yorkshire.

SHOEBLACK SOCIETY Brigades (Blue, Red, and Yellow) were established at various times, especially in 1851, by the Ragged School Union (which see), founded 1844. In 1855, 108 boys had cleaned 544,800 pairs of boots and shoes, and thus earned 2270s.; of which 1235s. had been paid to the boys, 519s. to their bank, and 516s. to the society. The brigades earned 4548s. in 1859; 11,031s. in 1871; 10,936s. (in nine districts) in 1886. There were eleven shoeblack societies in the metropolis in 1888.

SHOEBURYNESSE (Essex). Some ground here, purchased in 1842 and 1853, by an act of parliament in 1862 was set apart as "ranges for the use and practice of artillery," and a school for gunnery was established; see Cannon, note. Experiments with Mr. Whitworth's projectiles on 12 Nov. 1862, showed their great improvement in form and material. Shells were sent through 5½ inch plate and the wood-work behind it. It was objected, that they might not do this with ships in motion. The National Volunteer Artillery Association began their annual meetings here in July, 1865.

During shell experiments with a new sensitive fuse, col. Francis Lyon (the inventor), col. Fox-Strangways, capt. Francis M. Gould-Adams, and four others were killed, 26 Feb. 1885.

SHOES, among the Jews were made of leather, linen, or wood. Moams were worn as ornaments in their shoes by Jewish women. Isaiah iii. 18. Pythagoras would have his disciples wear shoes made of the bark of trees; probably that they might not wear what were made of the skins of animals, as they refrained from the use of everything that had life. The Romans wore an ivory crescent on their shoes; and Caligula enriched his with precious stones. In England, about 1462, the people wore the heels or points of their shoes so long that they encumbered themselves in walking, and were forced to tie them up to their knees; the fine gentlemen fastened theirs with chains of silver or silver gilt, and others with laces. This was prohibited, on the forfeiture of 20s. and on pain of being cursed by the clergy, 7 Edw. IV. 1467; see Dress. Shoes, as at present worn, were introduced about 1633. The buckle was not used till 1668. Stow; Mortimer. The buckle-makers petitioned against the use of shoe-strings in 1791. A strike of London shoe-makers respecting wages, April, 1884.

SHOOTING STARS, see under Meteors.

SHOP HOURS' REGULATION ACT (Sir John Lubbock's), for the protection of young persons, passed, 1886. The Shop Hours' bill passed 1892.

SHOP-TAX enacted in 1785; caused so great a commotion, particularly in London, that it was deemed expedient to repeal it in 1789. The statute whereby shoplifting was made a felony, without benefit of clergy, was passed 10 & 11 Will. III. 1699. This statute has been some time repealed.

SHORE, JANE, the mistress of Edward IV. and afterwards of lord Hastings. She did public penance in 1481, and was afterwards confined in Ludgate, but upon the petition of Thomas Hymore, who agreed to marry her, king Richard III., in 1484, restored her to liberty: and sir Thomas More mentions having seen her. Harleian MSS.

SHORT-HAND, see Stenography.

"SHORT - LIVED" ADMINISTRATION—that of William Pulteney, earl of Bath, lord Carlisle, lord Winchelsea, and lord Granville, existed from 10 Feb. to 12 Feb. 1746.

SHOT. In early times various missiles were shot from cannon. Bolts are mentioned in 1413; and in 1418 Henry V. ordered his clerk of the ordnance to get 7000 stone shot made at the quarries at Maidstone. Since then chain, grape, and canister shot have been invented, as well as shells, all of which are described in Schoffer's work on "Projectile Weapons of War, and Explosive Compounds," 1858; see Bombs and Cannon. For Pulliser's chilled shot, see Cannon.

SHREWSBURY ADMINISTRATION. Charles, duke of Shrewsbury, was made lord treasurer, 29 July, 1714, two days before the death of queen Anne. His patent was revoked soon after the accession of George I., 20 Oct. following, when the earl of Halifax became first lord of the treasury; see Halifax. The office of lord treasurer has been executed by commissioners ever since.

SHREWSBURY (Shropshire), arose after the ruin of the Roman town Uriconium (see Wroaster), Here Richard II. held a parliament in 1307.—On 23 July, 1403, was fought a sanguinary battle at Halesley field, near Shrewsbury, between the army of Henry IV. and that of the nobles, led by Percy (surnamed Hotspur), son of the earl of Northumberland, who had conspired to dethrone Henry. Henry was seen in the thickest of the fight, with his son, afterwards Henry V. The death of Hotspur by an unknown hand gave the victory to the king. Home.—Shrewsbury grammar school was founded by Edward VI. in 1551, endowed by Elizabeth, and opened 1562. Siam was re-discovered by the Portuguese in 1511, and a trade established, in which the Dutch joined about 1604. A British ship arrived about 1613. In 1683, a Cephalaonian Greek, Constantine Phaulcon, became foreign minister of Siam, and opened a communication with France; Louis XIV. sent an embassy in 1685 with a view of converting the king, without effect. After several ineffectual attempts, sir John Bowring succeeded in obtaining a treaty of friendship and commerce between England and Siam, which was signed 30 April, 1855, and ratified 5 April, 1856. Two ambassadors from Siam arrived in Oct. 1857, and had an audience with the queen; they brought with them magnificent presents, which they delivered crawling, on 16 Nov. They visited Paris in June, 1861. By a treaty with France, the French protectorate over Cambodia was recognised; signed 15 July, ratified 24 Oct. 1867. They were named Chang and Eng, and were first discovered on the banks of the Siam river by an American, Mr. Robert Hunter, by whom they were taken to New York, where they were exhibited. Captain Duffin brought them to England. After having been exhibited for several years in Britain, they went to America, where they settled on a farm, and married two sisters. In 1865 they were in North Carolina in declining health. Their exhibition in London began again 6 Feb. 1865. Their death in America, within two hours of each other, took place 26, 17 Jan. 1874.

SIBYLS, Sibyllæ, women believed to be inspired, who flourished in different parts of the world. Plato speaks of one, others of two. Pileus of three, Ælian of four, and Varro of ten. An Erythraean sibyl is said to have offered to Tarquin II. nine books containing the Roman destinies, demanding for them 300 pieces of gold. He denied her; whereupon the sibyl threw three of them into the fire, and asked the same price for the other six, which being still denied, she burnt three more, and again demanded the same sum for those that remained, when Tarquin conferring with the pontiffs was advised to buy them. Two magistrates were created to consult them on all occasions, 531 B.C.; see Quindecimviri.

SICILIAN VESPERS, the term given to the massacre of the French (who had conquered Sicily, 1266), commenced at Palermo, 30 March, 1282.

On Easter Monday conspirators assembled at Palermo; and while the French were engaged in festivities, a Sicilian bride passed by with her train. One Drucbet, a Frenchman, used her rudely, under pretence of searching for arms. A young Sicilian stabbed him with his own sword; and tumult ensuing, 800 French were instantly murdered. The populace ran through the city, crying out, "Let the French die!" and, without distinction of rank, age, or sex, slaughtered all of that nation they could find, to the number of about 8000. Even the churches proved no sanctuary, and the massacre became general throughout the island.

SILICON or SILICUM (from siles, flint), a non-metallic element, next to oxygen the most abundant substance in the earth, as it enters into the constitution of many earths, metallic oxides, and a great number of minerals. The mode of procuring pure silicon was discovered by Berzelius in 1823. Unclean. See Water glass, and Banquets & Stoves.

SILISTRIA, a strong military town in Bulgaria, European Turkey. It was taken by the Russians, 30 June, 1829, and held some years by them as a pledge for the payment of a large sum by the Porte, but was eventually returned. In 1854 it was again besieged by the Russians, 30,000 strong, under prince Paskewitch, and many assaults were made. The Russian general was compelled to retire in consequence of a dangerous confusion. On 2 June, Musa Pacha, the brave and skilful commander of the garrison, was killed. On 9 June, the Russians stormed two forts, which were taken. A grand assault took place on 13 June, under prince Gortschakoff and general Schilder, which was vigorously repelled. On the 15th, the garrison assumed the offensive, crossed the river, defeated the Russians, and destroyed the siege works. The siege was thus raised, and the Russians commenced their retreat as Omar Pacha was drawing near. The garrison was ably assisted by two British officers, capt Butler and adjt Nasmith, the former of whom, after being wounded, died of exhaustion. They were highly praised by Omar Pacha and lord Haltinge, and lieutenant Nasmith was made a major. Population, 1838, 11,414.

SILK. Wrought silk was brought from Persia to Greece, 32, B.C. Known at Rome in Tiberius's time, when a law passed in the senate prohibiting the use of plate of mosaic gold, and also forbidding men to dress themselves by wearing silk, fit only for women. Heliofabius first wore a garment of silk, A.D. 220. Silk was at first of the same value with gold, weight for weight, and was thought to grow in the same manner as cotton on trees. Silk-worms were brought from India to Europe in the 6th century. Charlemagne sent Offa, king of Merca, a present of two silken vests, 780. The manufacture was encouraged by Rici, king of Sicily, at Palermo, 1146, when the Sicilians not only bred the silk-worms, but spun and wove the silk. The manufacture spread into Italy and Spain, and also into the south of France, a little before the reign of Francis I. about 1510, and Henry IV propagated mulberry-trees and silk-worms throughout the kingdom, about 1600. In England, silk-manufactures were worn by some noblemen's ladies at a ball at Kenilworth castle, 1286. Silk was worn by the English clergy in 1534. Manufactured in England in 1604, and broad silk wove from raw silk in 1620. Brought to perfection by the French refugees in London at Spitalfields, 1688. A silk-throwing mill was made in England, and fixed up at Derby, by sir Thomas Lombe, merchant of London, modelled from the original mill then in the king of Sardinia's dominions, about 1714. He obtained a patent in 1718, and died 3 Jan. 1739.

The Silk association of Great Britain and Ireland began, 1886-7. first exhibition at James's square, London, S.W. (opened by the duchess of Leck), 6-21 May, 1890. SILK-WORM DISEASE. In 1853 the annual produce of sericulture in South France was estimated at about 4,680,000. Soon after a disease broke out in the worms which reduced the value of the silk crop to about one third that amount. In 1858 a commission was appointed to inquire into the nature of the disease, then termed epidemie, and M. Quatrefages, in 1860, proved that it is hereditary, contagious, and infectious. M. Filippi discovered in the blood of the deceased worms a multitude of cylindrical corpuscles, more named paratyphus, which Pasteur who took up the study, in 1865, has demonstrated to be parasitical and the cause of the disease. He has since devised a way by which it is hoped, the organic germs may be got rid of and the disease extirpated.

SILOTVOR, a new explosive invented by M. Roudkeshell, who asked 50,000*l* for the patent, 1887.

SILURES, a British tribe, occupying the counties of Monmouth and Hereford, was subdued by the Roman general Ostorius Scapula, 50, A.D. Silropia. From this tribe is derived the geological term "Silurian strata," among the lowest of the paleozoic or primary series, from their occurrence in the above-mentioned counties. Murchison's "Siluria" was published 1849.

SILVER exists in most parts of the world, and is found mixed with other ores in various mines in Great Britain. The silver mines of South America are far the richest. A mine was discovered in the district of La Paz in 1660 which was so rich that the silver of it was often cut out with a chisel. In 1749, one mass of silver weighing 370 lbs was sent to Spain. From a mine in Norway, a piece of silver was dug, and sent to the Royal Museum at Copenhagen, weighing 560 lbs, and worth 1680*l*. In England silver plate and vessels were first used by Wilfrid, a Northumbrian bishop, a lofty and ambitious man, 709. Tynrell Silver knives, spoons, and cups, were great luxuries in 1300, see Morris's. The act of 1816 restricted the use of silver as legal tender to 40*s*. In 1855, 561,906 oz. in 1857, 532,866 oz. in 1865, 724,850 oz. in 1870, 784,502 oz. in 1876, 483,422 oz. in 1882, 372,544 oz. in 1887, 320,345 oz. in 1888, 321,425 oz. in 1889, 306,149 oz. in 1890, 291,724 oz. were obtained from mines in Britain. Pattinson's process for obtaining silver from lead ore was introduced in 1829. See Bullion, Coin, Goldsmiths, Morrell's, Plate, India, 1876, United States, 1878, 1890-2. Fall in price of silver through introduction of gold coinage in Germany, and increased produce from South American mines spring, 1876. The report of a commission on the subject was issued in July, 1887. Another commission appointed, see under Currency, 7 Sept. 1886.

In 1858 M. Germin Meneville introduced into France a Chinese worm termed the Cynthia Bombix, which feeds on the Alnus glandulosa, a hardy tree of the oak kind. The Cynthia yields a silk like substance termed Alnusine. It was known to Tann by Fankou in 1846.

national debt. The fallacy of the scheme was shown by Dr Hamilton in 1813. In July, 1828, the sinking fund was limited to one-fourth of the actual surplus of revenue.

The country, after having been held at times by the Greeks, Turks, and Hungarians, and the cause of sanguinary conflicts, was ceded finally to Hungary in 1699, at the peace of Carlowitz. Deputies from the Slavonian provinces of Austria were entertained at Moscow and St. Petersburg May, 1867. The Croatian-Slavonian diet, at Agram, was dissolved, May, 1867. It protested against incorporation with Hungary. The Slavonian family of languages includes Russian, Polish, Serbian, Bohemian, Bulgarian, Wendic, Slovak, and Polish. This place is mentioned as the site of a cattle market as far back as 1150. The space devoted to this purpose was enlarged from about three acres to four and a half, and in 1834 to six and a quarter. The ancient regulations were called the "statutes of Smithfield." In one day there were sometimes assembled 4000 beasts, and 30,000 sheep. The annual amount of the sales was about 7,000,000l

SNEEZING The custom of saying "God bless you" to the sneezer originated, according to Strada, among the ancients, who, through an opinion of the danger attending it, after sneezing made a loud prayer to the gods, as "Jupiter help me." The custom is mentioned by Homer, the Jewish rabbis, and others, and is found among savages. Polydore Vergil says it took its rise at the time of the plague, 558, when the infected fell

SOAP is a salt, a compound of a fatty acid with an alkali soda or potash. The Hebrew berith, translated soap, is merely a general term for cleansing substances. Job 15:30 Jer 17:22. Pliny declares soap to be an invention of the Gauls, though he prefers the German to the Gallic soap. Naucrates and her attendants, Homer tells us, washed clothes by treading upon them with their feet in pits of water. Odyssey, book 13. The Romans used fuller's earth. Saton, the French word for soap, is ascribed to its having been manufactured at Savon, near Girona. The manufacture of soap began in London in 1524, before which time it was supplied by Bristol at one penny per pound. The duty upon soap, imposed in 1711, after several reductions from 3*d* per pound, was totally repealed in 1853. It then produced, according to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr Gladstone about 1,120,000*l* annually. The enemy was defeated after a dreadful contest, and all their batteries taken, and in attempting the passage of the river by a floating bridge in their rear, the weight of the masses that crowded upon it caused it to break down, and thousands of Sikhs were killed, wounded, or drowned. The British loss was 2338 men.

The French socialists, termed Communists, became a powerful political body in that country, were implicated in the revolution of 1848, and made an insurrection at Paris, 1871. See France, Germany, 1878 et seq., Positive Philosophy, and Working-men (who, in Great Britain, have received by legislation nearly all they require).

SOCINIANS persons who accept the opinions of Faustus Socinus (died 1562) and his nephew Laelius (died 1604), Silesian polemicists. They held—1. That the Eternal Father was the one only God, and that Jesus Christ was no other than God than by his superiority to all other creatures, 2. That Christ was not a mediator, 3. That hell will endure for a time, after which the soul and body will be destroyed, 4. That it is unlawful for princes to make war. Hook. The Socinians established a church at Rakow in Poland and made proselytes in Transylvania, 1573. They were expelled from Poland in 1658. The Rakovian catechism was published in 1574, see Unitarians.

SODIUM, a remarkable metal, first obtained in 1807 by Mr Humphry Davy, from soda (which was formerly confounded with potash, but proved to be a distinct substance by Duhamel in 1736). This metal, like potassium, was obtained by the agency of the electric battery. In consequence of Davy's improved processes, sodium manufactured by Bell Brothers, of Newcastle, at now a pound (1868). It is an important agent in the modern production of aluminium. Common salt (chloride of sodium) is a compound of sodium and chlorine. Mr H. Y. Castner's (of New York) new process for the enhanced production of sodium, and through sodium of aluminium and magnesium announced in June, 1887. His works were set up at Oldbury, near Birmingham, the price of sodium in 1889 was about 4s 4d a pound. See Alkalies and Aluminium.

Several councils have been held at Soissons (in 744, 1092, 1122). Its academy was established in 1674. During the Franco-Prussian war, Soissons after three weeks' investment and four days bombardment, surrendered to the Germans under the grand duke of Mecklenburg, 16 Oct. 1870. 99 officers, 4633 men, 128 guns, &c., were said to be taken. The Germans thus obtained a second line of railway from Châlons to Paris.

SOLAR SYSTEM, nearly as now accepted, is said to have been taught by Pythagoras of Samos, about 529 B.C. He placed the sun in the centre, and all the planets moving in elliptical orbits round it—a doctrine superseded by the Ptolemaic system (which see). The system of Pythagoras, revived by Copernicus (1543), is called the Copernican system. Its truth was demonstrated by Sir Isaac Newton in 1687. See Planets.

SOLFERINO (in Lombardy), the site of the chief struggle on the great battle of 24 June, 1859, between the allied French and Sardinian army commanded by their respective sovereigns, and the Austrians under general Hess, the emperor being present The Austrians, after their defeat at Magenta, gradually retreated across the Mincio, and took up a position in the celebrated quadrilateral, and were expected there to await the attack. But the advance of Garibaldi on one side, and of prince Napoleon and the Tuscans on the other, induced them to recross the Mincio and take the offensive, on 23 June. The conflict began early on the 24th, and lasted fifteen hours. At first the Austrians had the advantage, but the successful attack of the French on Cavriana and Solferino changed the fortune of the day, and the Austrians, after desperate encounters, were compelled to retreat. The French attribute the victory to the skill and bravery of their emperor and the generals MacMahon and Niel, the Austrians, to the destruction of their reserve by the rifled cannon of their adversaries. The Sardinians maintained a fearful contest of fifteen hours. At San Martino, it is said against double their number. Loss of the Austrians, 630 officers, and 19,311 soldiers, of the allies, 8 generals, 936 officers, and 17,305 soldiers killed and wounded. This battle closed the war, preliminaries of peace being signed at Villa France, 12 July. On 24 June, 1870, on the site of the battle, three obelisks, containing the bones of thousands of the slain, were consecrated in the presence of representatives of Austria, France, and Italy.

SOLOMON'S TEMPLE, see Temple.

SOLWAY MOSS (Cumberland, bordering on Scotland) On 13 Nov. 1717, it swelled, owing to heavy rains. Upwards of 400 acres rose to such a height above the level of the ground, that at last it rolled forward like a torrent above 1 mile, sweeping along with it houses, trees, &c. It covered 600 acres at Netherby, and destroyed about 30 small villages. Near Solway Moss the Scots were defeated by the English, 25 Nov. 1542.

SOMAJ, see Dasm.

SOMBRERO (West Indies) On this desert isle, Robert Jeffery, a British man-of-war's man, was put ashore by his commander, the hon. captain W. Lake, for having tapped a barrel of beer when the ship was on short allowance. After sustaining life for eight days on a few limpets and rain-water, he was saved by an American vessel, 13 Dec. 1807, and returned to England. Sir Francis Burdett advocated his cause in parliament, and he received 600*l.* as a compensation from captain Lake, who was tried by a court-martial, and dismissed the service, 10 Feb. 1810.

SOMERSET-HOUSE (London), formerly a palace, founded on the site of several churches and other buildings, erected in 1549, by the protector Somerset, whose residence fell to the crown after his execution, 22 Jan. 1552. Here resided at times queen Elizabeth, Anne of Denmark, and Catherine, queen of Charles II. Old Somerset-house, a mixture of Grecian and Gothic, was demolished in 1775 and the present edifice, from a design by sir William Chambers, was erected for public offices. The Royal Academy of Arts first assembled in the apartments given to the members by the king, 17 Jan. 1771. The Royal Society met here, 1780-1857, and apartments here were also held by the Society of Antiquaries and the Geological Society, all three now at Burlington House. Large suites of government buildings were erected in 1774. The Navy-office, Pipe office, Victualling and other offices, were removed here in 1788, and various government departments since. The east wing forming the King's College (see King's College) was completed in 1833. By an act passed in 1854, the offices of the duchy of Cornwall were transferred to this house.

SOMERS-TOWN, a populous district in St. Pancras parish, N. London named after earl Somers, whose family acquired the property about 1695. The building began about 1726, and many French refugees settled in it. Much of the district has been occupied by the railway companies.

The priests wished to preserve the idol, but Mahmood broke it to pieces and found it filled with diamonds, &c. He carried the gates to Guzerat. When that city was taken by general Nott, 6 Sept. 1842, lord Ellenborough ordered the gates to be restored after an exile of 800 years, and issued a proclamation much censured at the time. The gates are made of mandal wood, and are described and figured in the Archæologia of the Society of Antiquaries, vol. xix.

The form fixed by Corelli (1653-1713), was adopted and modified by Vivaldi, the Bachs, Handel, Mozart, Haydn, and culminated in the masterpieces of Beethoven (1770-1827). Fine sonatas have been composed by Dussek, M. Clementi, Weber, Schubert, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Wm. Sterndale Bennett, Chopin, Liszt, and Rubenstein.

SONDERBUND, see Switzerland, 1846.

(in Constantinople) The first church was dedicated to St. Sophia (holy wisdom) by Constantius II., 360, this having been destroyed, the second, the present edifice, was founded by Justinian, 531, and dedicated 537. Since the Mahometan conquest in 1453, it has been used as an imperial mosque. Its length is 269 feet, and its breadth 243 feet. Six of its pillars are of green jasper, from the temple of Diana, at Ephesus; and of porphyry, from the temple of the Sun, at Rome. Four minarets were added by Selim II., who reigned in 1566. The interior of the dome is beautifully ornamented with mosaic work.

SORBONNE, a society of ecclesiastics at Paris, founded by Robert de Sorbonne in 1252. The members lived in common, and devoted themselves to study and gratuitous teaching. They soon attained a European reputation as a faculty of theology, their judgment being frequently appealed to, from the 14th to the 17th centuries. The influence of the Sorbonne was declining when the society was broken up in 1789. The buildings are now devoted to education. The new Sorbonne Buildings were opened on 5 Aug. 1880; this is the virtual reconstruction of the university of Paris. Gymnastic education introduced, 1892.

SORCERERS AND MAGICIANS. A law was enacted against their seductions, 33 Hen. VIII. 1541; and another statute equally severe was passed, 5 Eliz. 1563. The pretension to sorcery was made capital, 1 James I. 1603, see Witchcraft.

SOULAGES COLLECTION. About 1827,
M. Soulages of Toulouse, collected 790 specimens of Italian art and workmanship, &c. These were bought for 11,000 £ by 73 English gentlemen, with the view of first exhibiting them to the public, and afterwards selling them to the government (who gradually purchased them between 1858 and 1865).
They formed part of the "Art Treasures" exhibited at Manchester in 1857.

SOUND, see Acoustics.

SOUND DUTIES. Till the year 1857, no merchant ship was allowed to pass the Sound (a narrow channel separating Zealand from Sweden) without clearing at Elmsore and paying toll.

These duties had their origin in an agreement between the king of Denmark and the Hanse towns (1248), by which the former undertook to maintain lighthouses, &c., along the Carlsberg, and the latter to pay duty for the same. The first treaty with England in relation to this was in 1450, other countries followed. In 1855 the United States determined to pay the dues no more, and in the same year the Danish government proposed that these dues should be capitalised, which was eventually agreed to, the sum being 30,476,325 rixdollars. In Aug. 1857, the British government paid 10,126,855 rix-dollars (£1,125,266) to the Danes as their proportion.—The passage of the Sound was affected, in defiance of strong fortresses, by sir Hyde Parker and lord Nelson, 31 March, 1801, see Baltic Expedition.

SOUNDINGS AT SEA. Captain Ross, of H.M.S. Eden, in 1840 took extraordinary soundings at sea. In the latitude 33° 8' and longitude 9° W. about 300 miles from the Cape of Good Hope, 2266 fathoms were sounded, the weight employed amounted to 450 lbs. On 13 July, 1857, Lieut. Joseph Dayman, in the North Atlantic Ocean, lat 51° 9' N, long 40° 2' W, in sounding, found a bottom at 2425 fathoms. The deepest sounding known (3875 fathoms) was taken by the Challenger, capt. Hayes, 24 March, 1873, in the North Atlantic, north of St. Thomas. See Deep Sea Soundings.

Cape Town, Natal, and West Griqualand (1853)— and the two Dutch republics, Orange River free state, and the South Africa or Transvaal republic (1852). The formation was proposed by the earl of Carnarvon, colonial secretary, in a despatch to sir Henry Barkly, governor of Cape Town, 4 May, 1875, and advocated by the historian, J. A. Thynne, on a visit. It was much opposed at the Cape. See Cape. A conference of delegates in London was opened, 5 Aug. 1876.

SOUTHAMPTON, a seaport (S. England), a county of itself, near the Roman Clausentum and the Saxon Hamtune. It frequently suffered by Danish incursions. Canute, when king, occasionally resided here. The charter was granted by Henry I. and confirmed by Richard I. and John; and the first grammar school was founded by Edward VI. On 17 July, 1861, a monument to Dr Isaac Watts, a native, was uncovered; and on 15 Oct. 1862, the Hartley institution was opened by lord Palmerston. The prince of Wales laid the foundation of the parish church of St. Mary, built as a memorial of Samuel Wilberforce, bishop of Winchester, 12 Aug. 1878, commemorated 10 June, 1879. The British Association met here 1846 and 1882. Population 1881, 60,051; 1891, 65,325.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA was visited by capt Sturt in 1830, and explored shortly after by capt Parker and Mr Kent, the former of whom was killed by the natives. The boundaries of the province were fixed by 4 & 5 Will IV c 95 (1834), and it was occupied 26 Dec 1836, by capt Hindmarsh, the first governor. It was colonised according to Mr L. Gibbon Wakefield's scheme, which was carried out by the South Australian Colonisation Association. The colony for several years underwent severe trials through the great influx of emigrants, land-jobbing, building speculations, &c., which produced almost universal bankruptcy in 1839. In five years after, the energy of the colonists had overcome these difficulties, and the prosperity of the colony appeared fully established. In 1842 the highly productive Burra Burra copper mines were discovered, and large fortunes were suddenly realised, but in 1851 the discovery of gold in New South Wales and Victoria almost paralysed this province by drawing off a large part of the labouring population. Very little gold was found in South Australia, but a reaction took place in favour of the copper mines and agriculture, &c. Before the discovery of gold, little trade existed between Adelaide (the capital of South Australia) and Melbourne, but in 1852 gold was transmitted from the latter to the former to the amount of 2,215,167, principally for breadstuffs, farm produce, &c. The discovery of alluvial gold at Taupo, Waukaringa, Oct. favourable report Dec 1886. Sir Dominie Daly, appointed governor in Nov 1861, died 19 Feb 1868, succeeded by sir James Hergesson Dec 1868, by Anthony Musgrave, Jan 1873, by Wm. Wellington Collins, Jan 1877, Sir W. T. D. Jerrold, June, 1877, sir W. Robinson, Nov 1882, the earl of Kintore, Dec 1888. Population in 1855, 85,821, in 1865, 156,605, in 1871, 185,626, in 1877, 225,677, in 1882, 293,509, in 1891, 315,046.

SOUTHCOTT, JOANNA, a fanatic, born in 1750, came from Exeter to London, where her followers at one period amounted to many thousands, the low and ignorant being her principal dupes. In 1792 she announced herself as the woman spoken of in Revelation, chap. xii., and a disease favoured the delusion that she would be the mother of the promised Shiloh. She died 27 Dec 1814. In 1851 there existed in England & its congregations, professing to expect her return. Her successor, Mrs Peacock, died March, 1875, aged 103 (?).

SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY, from London to Folkestone, opened, 23 June, 1843, to Dover, 7 Feb 1844.

SOUTHERN CONFEDERATE STATES, see Confederates.

SOUTHERN CONTINENT. The Southern Ocean was first traversed by Magellan in 1520, and explored by Wallis and Carteret in 1766 and by Cook in 1773 and 1774. Of the southern continent little more is known than that it is rebound, and contains active volcanoes. It was discovered in the first instance by capt John Biscoe, on 27 Feb 1831, in lat 65° 57' S, long 47° 20' E, extending east and west 200 miles,—thus he named Enderby Land, after the gentleman who had equipped him for the voyage. Capt Biscoe also discovered Graham's Land on 15 Feb 1842, situated in lat 67° 1' S, long 71° 48' W. The Messrs Enderby equipped three other expeditions in search of the southern continent, the last (in connection with some other gentlemen) in 1838, when capt Balleny had command, who, on 9 Feb 1839, discovered the Balleny Islands, in lat 67° S, long 165° E, and in March, 1839, Sabina Land, in lat 65° 10' S, long 118° 30' E. In 1840, a French expedition, under the command of admiral D'Urville, and an American expedition, under the command of commodore Wilkes, greatly added to our knowledge in respect to the existence of a southern continent, and this was again increased by the expedition which sailed from England in 1839, under the command of capt Sir James Clark Ross, who discovered Victoria Land in 1841, and subsequently penetrated as far south as 78° 11'. Antarctic expedition proposed to the Argentine republic and the Genoa, 8 Sept 1881, the objects collected to be divided. Italian expedition under hut. Boce, 1881-2.

New South Polar expedition proposed by the Antarctic Exploration committee at Melbourne was rejected by the governors and others Aug 1890. The sum required for the expedition is 15,000. Sir Thomas Bligh subscribed 5,000 (the rest 10,000, 5,000, 1,000 for the other 5,000). See Antarctic Pole.

SOUTH KENSINGTON MUSEUM. M. neu Brompton old church (containing the pictures presented by Mr Vernon, Mr Sheepshanks, Mrs Ellison, and those bequeathed by Turner, the great painter, as well as specimens of sculpture and art, educational collections, products of the animal, vegetable, and mineral kingdoms, &c.), was opened on 22 June, 1857. A special exhibition of works of art, of immense value, lent for the occasion, was opened here in the summer of 1862, and closed in November. In July, 1873, a testimonial to Mr. (aft. an) Henry Cole, C.B., was proposed for his exertions in organizing this museum, and in promoting its objects.

Mr John Forster, biographer of Dickens, bequeathed his library of books, MSS., paintings, and drawings to this museum. He died 1 Feb 1876. Scientific Apparatus Loan Exhibition (which see) opened 23 May closed 30 Dec. Mr John Jones bequeathed a collection of works of art, &c. estimated value, 500,000, announced, Jan 1888.

SOUTHPORT, Lancashire, a watering place, founded in 1792 on a sandy waste, has rapidly progrewed, now possessing an esplanade 3 miles long, and many fine buildings. It was made a municipal borough in 1867, and received the British Association 19 Sept. 1883. Population, 1851, 4,765; 1871, 18,085; 1891, 43,006.

SOUTH-SEA BUBBLE commenced with the establishment of the South-sea company in 1710, which was at first unwisely and afterwards dishonestly managed. It exploded in 1720, ruining thousands of families, and the directors' estates, to the value of 2,014,000*l*, were seized in 1721 and sold. Mr Knight, the cashier, absconded with 100,000*l*, but he compounded the fraud for 10,000*l* and returned to England in 1743. Almost all the wealthy persons in the kingdom had become speculators, the artifices of the directors having raised the shares, originally 100*l*, to the price of 1000*l*. A parliamentary inquiry took place in Nov. 1720, and Aislabie, chancellor of the exchequer, and several members of parliament were expelled the house in 1721, see Law's Bubble.

SOUTHWARK (S. London), was governed by its own bailiffs till 1327. The city, however, found great inconvenience from the number of malefactors who escaped thither, in order to be out of the reach and cognizance of the city magistrates, and a grant was made of Southwark to the city of London by the crown, for a small annuity. In Edward VI's reign it was formed into a city ward, and was named Bridge Ward Without, 1550—Southwark bridge was designed by John Rennie, and built by a company, 1815-29 at an expense of 800,000*l*. It consists of three great cast-iron arches, resting on massive stone piers and abutments, the distance between the abutments is 708 feet, the centre arch is 240 feet span, the two others 210 feet each, and the total weight of iron 5308 tons. The bridge was freed from toll on 8 Nov. 1864, the company receiving a compensation from the city. An act for the payment of dividends to shareholders was passed in 1872—Southwark park was opened 19 June 1869. By the Seats Act (1885), Southwark sends three members to parliament.

City and South London Electric Railway (see l. n. rels) opened 4 Nov. and 18 Dec. 1890.

The priory church of St. Mary Overie (dating from the 13th century, was leased from the crown to the united parishes of St. Margaret and St. Mary Magdalene and became the parish church as St. Martin's in 1890. Since then many changes have been made. Mr G. Gwilt repaired the tower, the lady chapel and the choir 1848-49. The roof of the nave was removed in 1831 and in 1830 replaced by lath and plaster. The prince of Wales laid the memorial stone of a new nave 24 July, 1890, about 31,000*l* subscribed for the work up to 17 Feb.

The prince and princess of Wales visited the Evelina hospital, he lays the foundation stone of the new buildings of the R. S. London Ophthalmic Hospital 21 July.

SOUTHWELL, Nottinghamshire, an ancient Saxon town, where a church was founded by Paulinus, archbishop of York, 627, made collegiate before the conquest, refounded by Henry VIII., and made a bishopric by Henry VIII., 1541, dissolved by Edward VI. Collegiate church restored by Elizabeth, 1586. Near here Charles I. surrendered himself to the Scotch army in 1646. The Habeas Corpus act, authorizing the establishment of a seat at Southwell, was passed, 16 Aug. 1878. Constituted to consist of the counties of Derby and Nottingham, 2 Feb. 1884. The restored minister re-opened as cathedral, 2 Feb. 1888.

SOVEREIGN, an ancient and modern British gold coin. In 1489 224 pieces, in value 20*l*, "to be called the sovereign," were ordered to be coined out of a pound of gold. Ruding. In 1542 sovereigns were coined in value 20*l*, which afterwards, in 1550 and 1552 (4 & 6 Ed. VI.), passed for 2*l* and 3*l*. "Sovereigns" of the new coinage were directed to pass for 20*l* 1 July, and half-sovereigns for 10*l* 10 Oct. 1817, see Coin, and Gold. By the Coinage act, 1870, the weight of the sovereign is fixed at 123.27447 grains troy, specific gravity, 17.57 (916.67, gold being 1000) half-sovereigns, 61.63723 grains. The disigon sovereigns were re-issued in 1871.

SPA-FIELDS (N. London). Here about 30,000 persons assembled to vote at address from the distressed manufacturers to the prince regent, 15 Nov. 1816. A second meeting, 2 Dec. following, terminated in an alarming riot, the shops of several gunsmiths were attacked for arms by the rioters, and in the shop of Mr Beckwith on Snow-hill, Mr Platt was wounded, and much injury was done before the tumult was suppressed. For this riot, Lashman, a seaman, was hanged, 12 March, 1817. Watson, the ringleader, escaped to America.

Spafields Chapel, a dome building originally a place of entertainment named the Pantheon erected, 1770, was after several changes purchased by the greatest of Huntingdon and used as a place of worship for her connection (see Whitechapel). This chapel was pulled down in 1887.

SPEAKERS COMMENTARY, a name given to an edition of the Bible with a revised text and a commentary by several bishops and other theologians, edited by F. Cook. The undertaking originated, it is said, chiefly with Mr John Evelyn, Demosn, speaker of the house of commons, with the view of opposing the interpretations of Dr. Colenso, and was announced in Nov 1863. The publication, begun in 1871, was completed in 1881. The theory published in 1888.

SPEAKING-TRUMPET, used by ships at sea. One is said to have been used by Alexander, 335 B.C. One was constructed from Kucher's description by Saland, 1652. philosophically explained and brought into notice by Morland, 1670.

SPECIAL COMMISSION ACT, passed 13 Aug 1888. A commission constituted to try certain charges and allegations against certain members of parliament. See Parnellites and Ireland, 1888.

SPECIAL CONSTABLES are sworn in for the preservation of the public peace when disturbances are feared. The laws relative to their appointment were amended in 1831 and 1835. Louis Napoleon, afterwards emperor, aided as a special constable in London, 10 April, 1848, see Chartists, and London, Dec 1867. Instructions for their organisation were issued, 13 Jan 1868. On 28 Jan 52,974 in the metropolis, and 113,674 in the United Kingdom, had been sworn in. Their services were not required, and they were honourably dismissed by an order issued 21 March, 1868.

Special constables were sworn in in relation to the disturbances in Trafalgar Square (see Note) 17 Nov et seq, 1,500 held Trafalgar Square, Sunday, 20 Nov 1887, varied till 18 Jan 1888, and thanked.

SPARTACUS'S INSURRECTION (or Servile War) Spartacus was a noble Thracian, who served in an auxiliary corps of the Roman army. Having deserted and been apprehended, he was reduced to slavery and made a gladiator. With some companions he made his escape, collected a body of slaves and gladiators, 73 B.C., ravaged southern Italy, and defeated the Roman forces under the consul sent against him. Knowing the impossibility of successfully resisting the republic, he endeavoured to conduct his forces into Sicily, but was defeated and slain by Crassus, 71 B.C.

SPECIES Much controversy among naturalists arose in consequence of the publication, in 1859, of Mr Charles Darwin's "Origin of Species," in which he suggests that all the various species of animals were not created at one time, but have been gradually developed by what he terms "natural selection," and the struggle for life in which the strong overcome the weak.

'This preservation of favourable individual differences and variations and the destruction of those which are injurious I have called natural selection, or the survival of the fittest.'—Darwin

The idea was put forth by Lamarck in his "Philosophie Zoologique" 1809. Similar views appear in the "Vestiges of Creation" 1844. Mr Darwin says, that he infers 'from analogy that probably all the organic beings which have ever lived on the earth have descended from some one primordial form into which life was first breathed by the Creator. See Development and its caution.'

Charles Darwin was born 12 Feb 1809, and died 19 April 1882.

Statue of Darwin by J. E. Boehm paid for by universal subscription, received at the British Museum of Natural History by the prince of Wales, and unveiled by professor Huxley, 9 June 1885.

His Life and Letters edited by his son Francis Darwin published Nov. 1887.

Professor G. J. Roussier, Librarian wrote 'Darwin and after Darwin' was published in 1892.

SPECIFIC GRAVITIES. See under Weights.

SPECTACLES, unknown to the ancients, are generally supposed to have been invented by Alexander de Spina, a monk of Florence, in Italy, about 1285. According to Dr Plott, they were invented by Roger Bacon, about 1280. Vanni attributes them to Salvino, who died 1371. On his tomb at Florence is the inscription, "Qui genuit Salvino degli Amati, inventore di occhiali. Dio gli perdoni le peccati." ('Here lies Salvino degli Amati, inventor of spectacles. May God pardon his sins'.)

SPECTATOR The first number of this periodical appeared on 1 March, 1711, the last was No. 635, 20 Dec 1714. The papers by Addison have one of the letters of 1710 at the end. The most of the other papers are by Mr Richard Steele, a few by Hughes, Budgell, Eusden, Miss Shephard, and others.—The Spectator newspaper (philosophical, whig), begun 5 July, 1828.

SPECTRUM, the term given to the image of the sun or any other luminous body formed on a wall or screen, by a beam of light received through a small hole or slit, and refracted by a prism. The colours thus produced are red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet. The phenomena were first explained by Newton, whose "Optics" was published in 1704. Several of the colours are considered to be compounds of three primary ones by Mayer (1775), red, yellow, and blue,—by Dr Thos Young (1801), red, green, and violet,—by Prof Clerk Maxwell (1860), red, green, and blue. As the colour of a flame varies according to the substance producing it or introduced into it, so the spectrum varies. This led to the invention of a method of chemical analysis by professors Bunsen and Kirchhoff (1860), by which they discovered two new metals, and drew conclusions as to the nature of the atmosphere of the sun and stars, and of the light of the nebulae, by comparing the spectrum with that produced by flames into which iron, sodium, and other substances have been introduced. For the invisible rays of the spectrum, see Calorescentes, Fluorescentes, and Bolometric.

Frankhofer's Lines. In 1868 Dr Wollaston observed several dark lines in the solar spectrum in 1817, Joseph Fraunhofer not only observed them but constructed a map of them giving 500 lines or dark bands. By the researches of Fraunhofer and others the number observed is now about 2000.

Mr Fox Tall of observed the orange line of strontium in the spectrum in 1836 and later David Brewster observed other lines 1839-43. In 1863-3 Mr William Huggins analysed the light of the fixed stars and of the nebulae and in 1865 Dr Bunsen Jones by means of spectrum analyses detected the presence of minute quantities of metals in the living body, introduced only a few minutes previous.

A spectroscopic society in Italy, published a journal early in 1872.

H. Schieller's Spectroanalytische published 1870, new edition in 1883.

Sur H. Roze's Spectrum Analysis published 1867-8, 1869, la Rouaudière Spectres lumineux 1874.

Oxygen detected in the solar spectrum by Mr Draper.

The experiments of professor Dewar and others have shown that the spectrum of various gases are affected by temperature and pressure 1888-9.

SPECULATIVE SOCIETY, Edinburgh (which had included among its members David Hume), celebrated its hundredth anniversary on 14 Oct 1873, see Philosophy.

"SPELLING REES" meetings to test the proficiency in correct spelling introduced into London from the United States of America, the first at Holloway London, N., in the autumn of 1875. Geographic, musical, and other bees followed and all successful.

SPELLING REFORM A resolution in favour of it was adopted by the London School Board, in 1877, a conference and public meeting were held at the Society of Arts, 29 May, 1877.

A Spell of Reform Association formed by Dr Temple, a son of Revue Robert Fox of 13 York, and Mrs. Muller were among the mainstays 1879, as their association formed in the United States, professor F. A. March presided 1837.

Mr T. B. Spence's article on a Marriage and Mortality Table in the Journal of the Institute of Actuaries 1891 had according to the monthly column July, 1879.

SPHERES The celestial and terrestrial spheres and sundials are said to have been invented by Anaximander, 552 B.C., and the armillary sphere by Eratosthenes, about 225 B.C. The planetarium was constructed by Archimedes before 212 B.C. Pythagoras maintained that the motions of the twelve spheres must produce delightful sounds, inaudible to mortals, which he called the music of the spheres.

SPHYGMOGRAPH (from the Greek, sphugmos, a pulsation) an instrument for investigating disease, by showing the state of the pulse, invented by M. L. J. Marey, of Paris, and described by him in 1863.

SPOICES Imported into Great Britain cinnamon and other spices, exclusive of pepper, 1846, 1 910,584 lbs., 1856, 4,154,167 lbs., 1867, 12,831,953 lbs., 1877, 17,186,572 lbs., 1879, 19,340,817 lbs., 1883, 24,744,895 lbs., 1887, 23,783,960 lbs. 1890, 23,506,493 lb.

SPICHEREN, see Saxophone.

SPINET a clavichord or keyed instrument, used in the 17th century, a modification of the virginals which Mr Bull, Gibbons, Murchell, and especially Domenico Scarlatti composed for this instrument.

SPINNING was ascribed by the ancients to Minerva, the goddess of wisdom. Aracis, king of Aracada, taught his subjects the art about 1500 B.C. Tradition reports that Lucretia with her maids was found spinning, when her husband Collatinus paid a visit to her from the camp, that the wife of Tarquin was an excellent spinner, and that a garment made by her, worn by Servius Tullius, was preserved in the temple of Fortune. Till 1767, the spinning of cotton was performed by the hand spinning-wheel, when Hargreaves, an ingenious mechanic, near Blackburn, made a spinning jenny, with eight spindles, and also erected the first carding machine, with cylinders Arkwright's machine for spinning by water was an extension of the principle of Hargreaves; but he also applied a large and small roller to expand the thread, for which he took out a patent in 1769. At first he worked his machinery by horses; but in 1771 he built a mill on the stream of the Derwent, at Cromford. In 1774-9, Crompton invented the mule (which see).

SPIRES (in Bavaria). The emperors held many diets at Spire since 1309, and it was the seat of the imperial chamber till 1689, when the city was burned by the French, and not rebuilt till after the peace of Ryswick, in 1697. The diet to condemn the reformers was held at Spire, called there by the emperor Charles V. 1529, see Protestants.

SPIRIT-LEVEL. The invention is ascribed to J. Melchisedec Thvenot, who died 1692.

SPIRIT-MOTOR. Mr. Yarrow explained to the Institute of Naval Architects his method of employing vaporized spirit instead of steam in the propulsion of steam launches thus dispensing with the use of a boiler, &c., March, 1868. Petroleum is used as fuel.

SPIRITS, see Distillation. In all nations spirituous liquors have been considered as a proper subject of heavy taxation for the support of the state, see Alcohol, Brandy, Rum, Methylated Spirits, &c.

In 1840 England made about ten millions of gallons of spirits, Scotland about seven millions of gallons, and Ireland about nine millions of gallons.

In 1831 the number of gallons on which duty was paid for home consumption was 23,976,596. The total amount paid was 6,017,281, of which 3,758,186 was paid by England, 1,459,597 by Scotland, and 1,006,735 by Ireland.

In 1858, 9,195,551 were paid as duty on 27,370,934 gallons.

In 1855, methylated spirits of wine, for use in the arts and sciences, were made duty free.

In 1859, 27,657,727 gallons of spirits were distilled in the United Kingdom. The uniform duty of 8s per gallon was paid on 24,354,403 gallons for home consumption, producing 9,701,794. In the year 1865 the tax produced about 12,935,000, being the largest sum then raised by indirect taxation. In 1871-2, 16,768,341 (costs and excise); in 1873-4, 21,395,663; in 1877-8, 20,675,984; in 1881-4, 18,435,957; in 1887-8, 17,328,590; in 1888-9, 17,175,797; in 1889-90, 18,531,577; in 1890-1, 19,263,541.

In 1861 an act was passed repealing wholly or in part all previous acts, and embodying all regulations for the guidance of manufacturers and dealers in spirits.

In 1870, about 30,000,000, spent in spirits; 58,000,000, by working classes.

SPIRITS ACT (43 & 44 Vict. c. 24), passed Aug. 1880, consolidated and amended the law relating to the manufacture and sale of spirits.

SPIRITUALISM or SPIRIT-RAPPING. Spiritual manifestations (so called) began, it is said, in America about 1848, and attracted attention in this country about 1851, in the shape of rapping, table-turning, &c. Many inquisitive or credulous persons visited Mr. Daniel Dunglas Home or Home and Mr. Forster, noted "spiritual mediums." Mr. Home, secretary of the Spiritual Athenaeum, Sloane-street, Chelsea, published, in 1863, "Incidents of my Life," in which he states that the only benefit he derived from the "gift" was the convincing many unbelievers of the certainty of a life to come; the Times, April, May, 1868. The "Spiritual Magazine," began Jan. 1860; the "Spiritualist," 9 Nov. 1869. The London Dialectical society published a report on spiritualism in Nov. 1871. Mr. W. Crookes, in 1871, investigated the phenomena, and ascribed them to "psychic forces" ("Quarterly Journal of Science," July and Oct. 1871). Miss Kate Fox, said to be the earliest American medium (about 1852) was married to Mr. H. D. Jencken, in London, Dec. 1872.

The impostures of the Davenport brothers exposed in 1865.

In 1864 Messrs. Mackenzie and Cooke, and Dr. Lynn, exhibited tricks by which they said they demonstrated the impostures of spiritualism. Spiritualism discovered by a section of the British Association at Glasgow (supported by Messrs. Wm Crookes, A. Russell Wallace, and other eminent men), without result, 12 Sept. 1876.

20 spiritualist journals publishing, 1876. Dr. Henry Slade, a medium, and Geoffrey Simmons, his assistant, charged at Bow-street by judge 1 May Lancaster and others, with "unlawfully using certain subtle and crafty means and devices to deceive"; dealt with under Vagrant Act, 2, 10, 20 Oct.; Simmons discharged, Slade sentenced to 3 months' imprisonment with hard labour, 31 Oct. 1876, appeal to assizes; sentence quashed for a technical error, 29 Jan. 1877.

Wm. Lawrenson sentenced to 3 months' imprisonment for receiving money as a "medium," 16 Jan. 1877. See Trick, 1881.

SPIRALFIELDS (East London), so named from the priory of St. Mary Spittle, dissolved 1534. Here the French protestant refugees settled and established the silk manufacture in 1685. In consequence of commercial changes the weavers endured much distress about 1829.

SPLITHEAD, a roadstead near the Spit, a sand-bank between Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight. See Naval Review, under Navy of England.

SPLITZBERGEN, an archipelago in the Arctic ocean, discovered in 1553 by Sir Hugh Willoughby, who called it Greenland, supposing it to be a part of the western continent. In 1595 it was visited by Barents and Cornelius, two Dutchmen, who pretended to be the original discoverers, and called it Spitzbergen, or sharp mountains, from the many sharp pointed and rocky mountains with which it abounds; see Phipps.

A scientific expedition to Spitzbergen, organized by Herr Eschscholtz of Stuttgart, left Bremen about 29 July; returned 26 Aug. 1859.

SPLITZCAP, see Majuba.

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION of the human body, declared by most chemists to be impossible, although many cases have been recorded. The case of the countess of Gortlich, 1847, disproved by confession of her murderer, March, 1850.

SPONTANEOUS GENERATION. The origin of the germs of infusorial animals developed during putrefaction, &c., has been warmly debated by naturalists. Spallanzani (about 1766), and especially M. Pasteur and others assert that these germs are really endowed with organic life existing in the atmosphere. Needham (about 1747), and especially M. Pouchet and his friends in our day, assert that these germs are spontaneously formed out of organic molecules—Pouchet's "Heterogens" appeared in 1859. Bastian's "Beginnings of Life," 1872. The researches of professor Lindall, supporting Pasteur, and opposing Bastian, were published 1876-8.

"Spontaneous generation" (also termed generatio æquivoca and epigenesis), has been still further disproved by the laborious microscopic investigations of the Rev. W. H. Dallinger, 1875-8. He found germs to stand a much greater heat than peric. organisms.

SPORTING NEWSPAPERS. Bell's Life in London, began 1820, Sporting Life, 16 March, 1859; Sporting Gazette, 1862; Sporting Times, 1865; Sportsman, Aug 1865; The Field, 1853; Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News, 1874; Referee, 1877.

SPORTS. The first "Book of Sports," under the title of "The King's Majesty's Declaration to his Subjects concerning Lawful Sports to be used" on Sundays after evening prayer, was published by King James I., 24 May, 1618. The second "Book of Sports," with a ratification by his majesty Charles I., is dated 18 Oct 1633. On the publication of the first "Book of Sports," there arose a long and violent controversy among English divines on certain points, see Sabbatarians, Sunday, &c.—The book was ordered to be burnt by the hangman, and the sports were suppressed by the parliament. The sportsman's annual exhibition, at the Agricultural Hall, London, began in 1882.

SPOTTSYLVANIA (Virginia), see United States, May, 1864.

SPRINGFIELD (Missouri), near which was fought the desperate battle of Wilson's Creek, in which the federals had the advantage over the confederates, but lost their brave general, Nathaniel Lyon, 10 Aug. 1861.

SPURS. Anciently the difference between the knight and esquire was, that the knight wore gilt spurs (equus auratus), and the esquire silver ones. Two sorts of spurs seem to have been in use at the time of the Conquest, one called a pryck, having only a single point, the other a number of points of considerable size. Spurs nearly of the present kind came into use about 1400, see Plating.

SPURS, BATTLE OF. Henry VIII. of England, the emperor Maximilian, and the Swiss, in 1513, entered into an offensive alliance against France. Henry VIII. landed at Calais in the month of July, and soon formed an army of 30,000 men. He was joined by the emperor with a good corps of horse and some foot, the emperor as a mercenary to the king of England, who allowed him a hundred denarii a day for his table. They invested Terouenne with an army of 50,000 men, and the duc de Longueville, marching to its relief, was signally defeated on the 16th of August, at Guinegate. This battle was called the battle of Spurs, because the French used their spurs more than they did their swords. The English king laid siege to Tournay, which submitted in a few days. Hémeult. See Chevreuse, for another "battle of spurs."

S. S., see Collar.

STABAT MATER, a Latin hymn, by Jacopone, 14th century, sung during Passion week in Catholic churches. Rossini's music to this hymn (1842) is often performed.

STADE DUES. At a castle near the town of Stade, in Hanover, certain dues on goods were charged by the Hanoverian government. The British government settled these dues in 1844. They were remitted by the Americans in 1855, and were abolished in June, 1861. Great Britain paid 160,000*l.* as her share of the compensation (3,000,000*l.*).

STADTHOLDER, see Holland.

STAFF COLLEGE (Sandhurst), for providing an education to qualify military officers for the duties of the staff. The foundation stone was laid by the duke of Cambridge on 14 Dec. 1859.

STAFFORD, Staffordshire, a Saxon town. A castle was erected here by Ethelfleda, countess of Mercia, 917. A charter was granted by King John, 1207, and the grammar-school was rebuilt and endowed by Edward VI., 1550. Population, 1881, 19,977; 1891, 20,270.

STAGE COACHES, so called from the stages or inns at which the coaches stopped to refresh and change horses. Bailey. The stage-coach duty act passed in 1785. These coaches were made subject to salutary provisions for the safety of passengers, in 1810, to mileage duties, 1815. The acts were consolidated in 1832, and amended in 1833 and 1842. See Mail Coaches, &c.

STAGYRITE, properly Stagiite, see Asiaticum.

STAMFORD BRIDGE (York). In 1066 Tostig, brother of Harold II., rebelled against his brother, and joined the invading army of Harold Hadrada, king of Norway. They defeated the northern earls and took York, but were defeated at Stamford-bridge by Harold, 25 Sept., and were both slain. The loss by this victory no doubt led to his defeat at Hastings, 14 Oct. following. The claim of Mr. William Grey for the earldom of Stamford, was granted by the house of Lords, 3 May, 1892.

STAMP-DUTIES. By 22 & 23 Charles II (1670-1) duties were imposed on certain legal documents. In 1694 a duty was imposed upon paper, vellum, and parchment. The stamp-duty on newspapers was commenced in 1711, and every year added to the list of articles upon which stamp-duty was made payable.

Many alterations made in 1853 and 1857. In June, 1855, the stamp-duty on newspapers as such was totally abolished, the stamp on them being henceforth for postal purposes.

STANDARD for gold and silver in England fixed by law, 1300 Standard gold is 22 parts out of 24 of pure gold, the other two parts or carats being silver or copper. The standard of silver is 11 oz 2 dwts of fine silver alloyed with 18 dwts of copper, or 37 parts out of 40 pure silver, and three parts copper. In 1300 these 12 oz of silver were coined into 20 shillings. In 1312 they were coined into 30 shillings, and in 1527 into 45 shillings. In 1545 Henry VIII coined 6 oz of silver and 6 oz of alloy into 48 shillings, and the next year he coined 4 oz of silver and 8 oz of alloy into the same sum. Elizabeth, in 1560 restored the old standard in 60 shillings, and in 1601 in 62 shilling. The average proportions of silver to gold at the royal mint are 15½ to 1. The standard of plate and silver manufactures was affirmed 6 Geo I 1719 et seq, see Gold, Goldsmiths' Skills, Coinage, and Currency

STANDARD, BATTLE OF THE, see North allerton

STANDARD MEASURES In the reign of Edgar a law was made to prevent frauds arising from the diversity of measures, and for the establishment of a legal standard measure to be used in every part of his dominions. The standard vessels made by order of the king, were deposited in the city of Winchester, and hence originated the well-known term of "Winchester measure" of the time of Henry VII (1487). The bushel so made is still preserved in the museum of that city. Henry I also, to prevent fraud, in the measurement of cloth, ordered a standard yard of the length of his own arm to be made and deposited at Winchester with the standard measures of King Edgar. The Guildhall contains the standard measures of succeeding sovereigns. Camden—The standard weights and measures were settled by parliament in 1824. The pound troy was to be 5760 grains, and the pound avoirdupois 7000 grains. The "Standard yard of 1760," in the custody of the clerk of the house of commons, was declared to be the Imperial Standard yard and the unit of measures of extension. This standard having been destroyed by the fire in 1834, a new commission was appointed to reconstruct it, and researches for this purpose, in conformity with the act, which directed the comparison of the standard with a pendulum vibrating seconds of time in the latitude of London, were begun by Francis Bailey (died in 1844), continued by the rev R Sheepshanks till his death in 1855, and completed by G B Airy, astronomer royal. In 1855 was passed "an act for ascertaining and preserving the lost standards of weights and measures." The parliamentary copies of the standard pound and yard are deposited at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich. The standard weights and measures act was passed Aug 1866. The Standard Commission published reports, 1866 et seq.

The old standard yard and other measures and weights, supposed to have been burnt at the fire of the parliament houses in 1834, were discovered by Mr Bull & agents in the Journal Office where they had been deposited and left unnoticed July 1891. The real standard of the reign of Henry VII and Elizabeth are still in existence

"STANDARD," conservative newspaper, begun, morning, 1827, evening, 29 June, 1857

STANDARDS, see Banners, Flags, &c The practice in the army of using a cross on standards and shields is due to the asserted miraculous appearance of a cross to Constantine, previously to his battle with Maxentius. Eusebius says that he received this statement from the emperor himself, 312. The standard was named LABARUM. For the celebrated French standard, see Auriflamme—STANDARD OF MAROUFF, on this emblem no infidel dared look. Christians have been massacred by the Turkish populace for looking on it—The British Imperial Standard was first hoisted on the tower of London, and on Bedford Tower, Dublin, and displayed by the Foot Guards, on the union of the kingdoms, 1 Jan 1601

STANFORD COURT, Worcestershire, the ancient mansion of Sir Francis Winington, burnt 17 Dec 1882, valuable portraits, books, MSS &c, destroyed

STANHOPE ADMINISTRATION was named by James (afterwards earl) Stanhope and the earl of Sunderland, 15 April, 1717. Stanhope was premier and chancellor of the exchequer, lord (afterwards earl) Cowper, lord chancellor, earl of Sunderland and Joseph Addison secretaries of state &c. In March, 1718, Addison resigned, and the earl of Sunderland became premier

STANLEY AND AFRICAN EXHIBITION Pitons queen Victoria and the king of the Belgians. Mr Joseph Thomson the traveller chief superintendent, opened at Victoria Gallery Regent street, 24 March closed 8 Nov 1890

The exhibit included pictures and portraits African weapons historical objects and many interesting objects collected by Livingstonia Grant, Speke Johnstone and other travellers

STANLEY FUND Mr Stanley's wish that the surplus of the receipts from the exhibition should form a fund for building a steamer on the lake Victoria. Nyansa (17 May) agreed to it at a meeting, at the Marlborough house 5 June 500 given by the queen, 16 July, 5000 received Oct 1890

STANNARY COURTS of Devon and Cornwall for the administration of justice among the tin miners, whose privileges were confirmed by 33 Edw I 1305. They were regulated by parliament in 1641, and at many times since. A "Stannaries act" was passed in 1869, another act in 1887

STAPLE (literally that which is fixed). The chief English staple commodities which were traded in by privileged merchants, and on which customs were levied, were wool, skins, leather, tin, lead and sometimes cloth, butter, and cheese. Certain towns were appointed for the collection of the duties. Statutes relating to the staple were passed by Edward III, Richard II and Henry VI. Edward III's "ordinance stapleum" (ordinance of the staple) was enacted in 1353

STARCH is a sediment produced at the bottom of vessels wherein wheat has been steeped in water. It is soft and friable, easily broken into powder, and is used to stiffen and clear linen, with blue, its powder is employed to powder the hair. The art of starching linen was brought into England by Mrs Dughenn, a Flemish woman, i Mary, 1553. Stow Patents for obtaining starch from other substances have been taken out from potatoes by Samuel Newton and others in 1707, from the horse-chestnut by Wm Murray in 1790, from rice by Thomas Wickham in 1823, from various matters by Orlando Jones in 1839-40.

STAR-CHAMBER, COURT OF So called happily from its roof being garnished with stars. Coke This court of justice was called Star Chamber, not from the stars on its roof (which were obliterated even before the reign of Queen Elizabeth), but from the Stara, or Jewish covanants, deposited there by order of Richard I. No star was allowed to be valid except found in those repositories, and here they remained till the banishment of the Jews by Edward I. The court was instituted or revived, 3 Hen VII 1486, for trials by a committee of the privy council, which was in violation of Magna Charta, as it dealt with civil and criminal causes unfettered by the rules of law. In Charles I a reign it exercised its power upon several bold innovators, who gloried in their sufferings, and contributed to render government odious and contemptible. It was abolished in 1640. There was in this court from 26 to 42 judges, the lord chancellor having the casting vote. The judicial committee of the privy council is the Star-chamber revived under another name.

STAR OF INDIA, a new order of knight hood for India, instituted by letters patent 23 1 Oct, gazetted 25 June, 1861, and enlarged in 1866. It comprised the sovereign, the crown and miter, 25 knights (Europeans and natives), and extra or honorary knights, such as the prince consort, the prince of Wales, &c. The queen invested several knights on 1 Nov 1861. The prince of Wales held a grand chapter at Calcutta, 1 Jan 1876.

STARS, THE FIXED They were classed into constellations (which see), it is supposed about 1200 B.C. Hicetas, of Syracuse, taught that the sun and the stars were motionless, and that the earth moved round them, about 344 B.C. (thus is mentioned by Cicero, and perhaps gave the first hint of this system to Copernicus). Job, Hesiod, and Homer mention several of the constellations. The Royal Library at Paris contains a Chinese chart of the heavens, made about 600 B.C., in which 1460 stars are correctly inserted. The aberration of the stars was discovered by Dr Bradley, 1727, see Astronomy, and Solar System. Maps of the stars were published by the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge in 1839, and a set of Celestial Maps, issued under the superintendence of the Royal Prussian Academy, was completed in 1859. See Photometer.

A list of about 200 stars which vary in their brightness and sometimes disappear, has been published by Mr G F Chaboureau in his 'Handbook on Astronomy, 1880-90. A variable star named a Ceti, or Mira Ceti, observed by David Fabricius in Aug 1596 disappeared in Oct following. It was observed again in 1599 and 1698, and since Bessel discovered the annual parallax of star 61 Cygni (hence he calculated its distance from the earth to be about 60 billions of miles) 12 Feb 1841. Struve made it 40 billions (supported by Brünnow and E. S. Baily) 1853.

The calculations of T. Henderson (at the Cape) 1853 supported by D. Gill and others showed that probably a Centauri 14 the star nearest to the earth 1883 4.

A new star in Auriga in the Milky Way was discovered at Greenwich, by telescope, 2 Feb 1892. It had been photographed by prof. Pickering 1, 10, on Dec. 1891. It has been named Nova Aurigæ. Its brilliancy diminished, May, 1892. Aug 1892.

STARVATION Deaths attributed to it in the metropolitan districts, 1873, 107, 1875, 46, 1879, 80, 1883, 29. In London, 1889, 27. In England and Wales 1887, 250, 1888, 237. See Abstinence.

STATE MEDICINE, see under Sanitation, 2 May, 1888.

STATE PAPER OFFICE was founded in 1578, now merged into the Public Record Office. In 1856 the British government began the publication of Calendars of State Papers, invaluable to future historians.

STATES-GENERAL OF FRANCE An ancient assembly of France, first met, it is said, in 1302 to consider the exactions of the pope. Previous to the Revolution, it had not met since 1614. The states consisted of three orders, the clergy, nobility, and commons. They were convened by Louis XVI, and assembled at Versailles, 5 May, 1789 (308 ecclesiastics, 285 nobles, and 621 deputies or tiers état, third estate). A contest arose whether the three orders should make three distinct houses, or but one assembly. The commons insisted upon the latter, and assuming the title of the National Assembly, declared that they were competent to proceed to business, without the concurrence of the two other orders, if they refused to join them. The nobility and clergy found it expedient to concede the point, and they all met in one hall, see National Assembly. Centenary, see France, 5 May, 1889.

STATES OF THE CHURCH, see Pope, and Rome.

STATIONERS Books and papers were formerly sold only at stalls, hence the dealers were called stationers. The company of stationers of London is of great antiquity, and existed long before printing was invented, yet it was not incorporated until 3 Philip & Mary, 1557. Their old dwelling was in Farnoster-row.

STATISTICS, the science of the state political knowledge, is said to have been founded by Sir Wm Pott, who died in 1687. The term is said to have been invented by professor Achenwall of Göttingen in 1749. The first statistical society in England was formed at Manchester in 1833, the Royal Statistical Society of London, which publishes a quarterly journal, was established 15 March, 1834, for the purpose of procuring, arranging, and publishing "facts calculated to illustrate the condition and prospects of society." Jubilee Sept 22, 23, 24 June, 1885, incorporated, 1887. Similar societies have been established on the continent. International Statistical Institute constituted in 1885, met at Rome, 12-16 April, 1887. International Statistical Congresses are now held occasionally. The 1st at Brussels, chiefly through the agency of M. Quetelet, in 1853, 2nd at Paris, 1855, 3rd at Vienna, 1857, 4th at London, under the presidency of the prince consort, 16-21 July, 1860, 5th at Berlin, 6th at Florence, 7th at the Hague, 8th at St Petersburg, was opened 22 Aug 1872, 9th at Pesth, 31 Aug 1876 and since, one at Vienna 28 Sept 1891. The eminent statistician, Dr Wm Farr, died 14 April, 1883. Statistical Abstracts have been published annually by the government for many years. Mr M G Mulhall's "Dictionary of Statistics" published 1891.

STATUES, see Scriptura, &c. Two statues of Ramesses II. and one of his queen (about 1322 B.C.), 10 feet high, discovered at Aboukh by Darnous Pasha, Oct. 1891. Phidias, whose statue of Jupiter passed for one of the wonders of the world, was the greatest statutory among the monuments, 440 B.C. He had previously made a statue of Minerva at the request of Pericles, which was placed in the Parthenon. It was made of ivory and gold, and measured 39 feet in height. Aulus raised a golden statue to his father, the first that appeared in Italy. Lyappaus invented the art of taking likenesses in plaster moulds, from which he afterwards cast models in wax, 326 B.C. Michael Angelo was the greatest artist among the moderns. The first equestrian statue erected in Great Britain was that of Charles I in 1678. By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 10 (10 July, 1854), public statues were placed under the control and protection of the Board of Works. The following are the chief public statues in London—

* This statue is of brass cast by Le Sueur, in 1633, at the expense of the Howard Arundel family. During the civil war the parliament sold it to John River, a brasser, in Holborn, with strict orders to break it to pieces but he concealed it underground till the Restoration, when it was erected, in 1656, on a pedestal erected by Grinling Gibbons. The first equestrian statue of brass, founded at one cast was that of Louis XIV of France, 1699, it was elevated about 1724.

STATUTES, see Acts of Parliament, Clarendon, Merion, &c. Statute Law Revision acts were passed in 1863-1892. The subject was referred to a joint committee of both houses, 14 March, 1892. Statute Law Revision and Civil Procedure act, 44 & 45 Vict. c. 59, passed 27 Aug 1881. "Statutes Revised Edition (1325-1878)" in 18 volumes, published 1870-85. The number of volumes since greatly reduced. Select (common) committee on the subject, met 17 July, 1891.

STATUTORY DECLARATIONS By 5 & 6 Will IV. c. 62 (1835), persons objecting to oaths are permitted to make declarations before magistrates, judges, &c., commencing "I —, do solemnly and sincerely declare that"—an indulgence sometimes abused.

Mr. Alexander J. Chaffers having made a declaration against the character of Lord Trevelyan with of Mr. Trevelyan was prosecuted for libel. She with drew during the examination and the prosecution ceased but Chaffers was severely censured by the magistrate and by the attorney general in parliament.

STEAM CARRIAGE (for ordinary roads), invented by the earl of Cathness, was said to be successful in 1860. It travels over rough roads at the rate of 8 miles an hour, at a cost of less than 1d. per mile. His lordship made a journey of 140 miles in two days, see Road Steamers.

STEAM ENGINE* AND NAVIGATION. Hero of Alexandria, in his 'Pneumatica,' describes various methods of employing steam as a power, and to him is ascribed the Autopilot, which, although a toy, possesses the properties of the steam-engine. He flourished about 284-241 B.C. Roger Bacon appears to have foreseen the application of steam-power, see Railways, Locomotives, Road Steamers, &c.

STEAM GUN, suggested by Wm Murdoch, 1803. One patented by Messrs Perkins, in 1824, was ineffective
In Oct 1870 Mr H. Bessemer proposed the application of steam power to artillery

STEAM HAMMER, invented by Mr James Nasmyth in 1838, and patented by him 18 June, 1842. Its main feature is the absolutely direct manner by which the elastic power of steam is employed to lift up and let fall the mass of iron constituting the hammer, which is attached direct to the end of a piston-rod passing through the bottom of an inverted steam cylinder placed immediately over the anvil

In 1842 Mr Nasmyth applied his steam hammer to driving piles which has importantly assisted in the execution of great public works. Owing to its vast range of power forced ram work can now by its means be executed on a scale, and for a variety of purposes, with an ease and perfection not previously possible. Parts of gigantic iron steam engines, anchors, and Armstrong guns as well as the most minute details of machinery, as in 7 inch rifles, are executed by the steam hammer
A steam hammer said to be the then largest in the world, completed at Woolwich the falling portion weighs 50 tons and when used with top-stem (52 tons) has the force of 91 tons, April, 1874. One at Schneider's works, Creusot, France, built between 75 and 80 tons, Dec 1877
Mr Nasmyth, April 27, and 7 May, 1880. His Auto-biography, edited by Dr B. Emile, was published in 1883

STEAM-MAN. A figure constructed to drag a phæton received this name in New York in March, 1866.

STEAM NAVIGATION, see under Steam.

STEAM-PLOUGHS were patented by G. Callaway and R. A. Purkes, 1849; H. Cowling, 1850, and others. John Fowler's of 1854 is much approved.

STEAM-RAM (to be used in naval warfare), was invented by Mr. James Naumyth in 1836, and communicated to the Admiralty in 1845. Steam-rams built by Mr. James Laird of Birkenhead for the Confederates in N. America, were stepped and eventually bought by the British government, 1864.

STEAM-WHISTLES and STEAM-TRUMPETS, used in factories to summon or dismiss workmen, prohibited by an act passed Aug. 1872.

STEARINE (from stear, suet), that part of oils and fats which is solid at common temperature. The nature of these substances was first made known by Chevreul, in 1823, who showed that they were compounds of peculiar acids, with a base termed glycerine of these compounds the chief are stearine, margarine, and elaine, see Candles.

STEEL, metal, a compound of iron and carbon, exists in nature, and has been fabricated from the earliest times. It was certainly used by the Egyptians, Assyrians, and Greeks. It now largely replaces cast iron in ship building, &c.

Reaumur discovered the direct process of making steel by immersing malleable iron in a bath of cast iron.

A manufactory for cast steel is said to have been set up by Benjamin Huntsman at Handsworth, near Sheffield.

German steel was made at Newcastle previously by Mr. Crawley.

The inventions of Mushet (1800), Lucas (1804), and Heath (1839) were important steps in this manufacture, see Iron.

Reps patented his puddled steel.

Mr. H. Bessemer made steel by passing cold air through liquid iron, &c. By this method it is of crude iron has been converted into cast steel in 23 minutes.

Tungsten steel was made in Germany 1859, and Mr. Lenny made steel by bringing red hot iron in contact with carbonic oxide fumes.

M. Alfred Krupp exhibited an ingot of steel weighing 4500 lbs. in 1851, and one weighing 20 tons in 1862 (about 15,000 men were employed at his works at Essen 1887).

The subject much investigated by M. Caron 1861, 5 much attention was excited by cutlers made from a metallic sand in sight from Taruaki or New Plymouth in New Zealand.

Mr. John Heaton published his process.

Dr. Siemens by means of his regenerative gas-furnaces produced excellent steel, cheaply, in large masses.

Cutlery Company, London opened an exhibition.

Messrs. Bolekow Vaughan & Co. of Middlesbrough, by Thomas and Gilchrist's process, convert Cleveland iron ore into Bessemer steel by lining the furnace with radial bricks of magnesite in limestone and adding cold basic material, phosphorus being thereby removed.

The process reported successful.

Mr. J. B. Jeans published his important work, "Steel its History, Manufacture, Properties, and Uses."

The Cardiff, a steel sailing ship, 2,320 tons, 302 ft. length, 34 ft. 9 in. dia. 41 ft. breadth, launched at Belfast.

Umbreit, Oswald Iron, above 8,000 tons, 300 ft. long, 27 ft. 3 in. dia., 41 ft. breadth, launched on the Clyde.

Mr. B. H. Thwaites of Liverpool, and Mr. A. Stewart, of Bradford, introduced an improved "rapid" process for the manufacture of steel, announced Oct. 1887.

See under Steele.

* For this invention he had received 14 royalties, 1,057,748, up to 1879, also many foreign honours knighted June, 1879.

STEEL PENS "Iron pens" are mentioned by Chamberlayne in 1685. Steel pens, made long before, began to come into use about 1820, when the first gross of three-slit pens was sold wholesale for 7½ d. In 1830 the price was 8s., and in 1832, 6s. A better pen is now sold for 6d. a gross. Birmingham in 1858 produced about 1000 million pens per annum. Women and children are principally employed in the manufacture. Perry, Mitchell, and Gillett are eminent makers. Joseph Gillett, originally a mechanic, made a large fortune by steel-pen making. He died 5 Jan. 1872, aged 72.

STEEL-YARD An ancient instrument, the same that is translated balance in the Pentateuch. The Statera Romana, or Roman steel-yard, is mentioned in 315 B.C.—The STEEL YARD or STILL-YARD COMPANY, London merchants, who had the steel-yard in Thames-street assigned to them by Henry III., about 1232, were Flemings and Germans, and the only exporters, for many years after, of the staple commodities of England. Anderson. The company lost its privileges, finally, in 1578, and the merchants were expelled from England in 1597.

STEENKIRK, see Enghen.

STEFANO, SAN, a small village on the sea of Marmora, S.W. of Constantinople, here the grand duke Nicholas established his head quarters, 24 Feb., and here was signed a treaty of peace with Turkey 3 March, 1878, much modified by the treaty of Berlin, signed 13 July, following. The Russians quitted San Stefano, 22 Sept. 1878.

It established independence of Montenegro, Serbia, and Roumania constituted Bulgaria a tributary principality, required a heavy indemnity from Turkey for Russia, who was to gain a port on the Black Sea and Kara, to exchange the Dobruja for Bessarabia, to obtain rights for Christians to open the Bosphorus and Dardanelles in peace and war.

STELLA-LAND, see Trans-eal and Bach-euna-land.

STENOCHROMY, see Printing in Colours.

STENOGRAPHY (from stenos, narrow), the art of short-hand, said to have been practised by the ancients. Its improvement is attributed to the poet Ennius, to Lyro, Cicero's freedman, and still more to Seneca. The Artis Scribendi Characteres, written about 1412, is the oldest system extant. Dr. Timothy Bright's "Characterie, or the Arte of Shorte, Swift, and Secret Writing," published in 1588, is the first English work on short-hand. Peter Bales, the famous penman, published on stenography in 1590, and John Willis published his "Stenographie" in 1602. There are now numerous systems. John Byrom's (1767), T. Gurney's (1710), "Brachygraphy," based on Mason's (1750), "A Short-hand Dictionary" (1777), Taylor's (1786), Mavor's (1789), Pitman's (phonographic), (1837), A. M. Bell's Stenophonomography, (1852), J. D. Everett's (1877), Tocknell's Legible Short-hand (1881), J. M. Sloan's (1882). See Phonography.

The Short-hand Society met Nov. 1881. Sig. A. Nichola's stenographic machine for the alphabetic representation of phonetic sounds (about 200 words per minute) like a harmonium with a key-board exhibited at the Turin exhibition of 1884, successfully adopted by the Italian Senate. International Short-hand Congress at the Geological Museum, London, S.W. (48 systems noticed) 26 Sept.-1 Oct. 1887. Others since, Paris 1889, Munich, 1890, Berlin 30 Sept. 1891.

STEPHEN'S CHAPEL, ST (Westminster), built by King Stephen, about 1135. It was rebuilt by Edward III. in 1347, and by him made a collegate church, to which a dean and twelve secular priests were appointed. Soon after its surrender to Edward VI., about 1548, it was applied to the use of Parliament, see Parliament. It was destroyed by fire, 16 Oct. 1834. The Society of Antiquaries published memorials of it about 1810, and Mr Mackenzie's work appeared in 1844. The restoration of the beautiful crypt was complete in Jan. 1870.

STEPNEY, a parish, E London, the Stebenhude of Domesday book. Edward I. summoned a parliament here, 1209. Stepney suffered severely by the plague, 1625 and 1665. Stepney-green was restored and opened as a park by the Metropolitan Board of Works, Aug. 1872. Population, 1881, 58,543, 1891, 57,599.

STEREOCHROMY, a mode of painting in which water glass (an alkaline solution of flint, silica) serves as the connecting medium between the colour and the substratum. Its invention is ascribed to Von Fuchs, who died at Munich on 5 March, 1856. Fine specimens of this art by Kaulbach and Richter exist in the Museum at Berlin, and also at Munich.

STEREOMETER, by which is compassed the art of taking the contents of vessels of liquids by gauging, invented about 1750. Anderson M. Say's stereometer, for determining the specific gravity of liquids, porous bodies, and powders as well as solids, was described in 1797.

STEREOSCOPE (from stereos, solid, and scopein, to see), an optical instrument for representing in apparent relief natural objects, &c., by uniting into one image two plane representations of these objects as seen by each eye separately. The first stereoscope by reflection was constructed and exhibited by professor Charles Wheatstone in 1838, who had announced its principle in 1833. Since 1854 stereoscopes have been greatly improved.

STEREOTYPE, a cast from a page of movable printing-types, so named by the Prussian printer, Didot 1798. It is said that stereotyping was known in 1711. It was practised by Wm. Ged of Edinburgh, about 1730. Some of Ged's plates are at the Royal Institution, London. A Mr. James attempted to introduce Ged's process in London, but failed, about 1735. * Nichols. Stereotype printing was in use in Holland, in the last century, and a quarto Bible and a Dutch folio Bible were printed there. Phillips. It was revived in London by Wilson in 1804. Since 1850 the durability of stereotypes has been greatly increased by electrotyping them with copper or silver. Stereotyping used for printing the Times, 1856, et seq.

In the library of the Royal Institution is an edition of Ballast with this imprint: Edinburghi, Gulielmus God, auri faber Edinensis, non typis mobilibus ut vulgo huc solet, sed tabellis seu laminis fusiis excudit Oct. 1744. (Printed at Edinburgh by William Ged of Edinburgh, goldsmith not with moveable types as is commonly done, but with cast tablets or plates.)

STERLING (money). Ducange says (1733), "Esterlingus, sterlingus, are English words relating to money, and hence familiar to other nations, and applied to the weight, quality, and kind of money." "Denarius Anglus, qui vocatur sterlingus," stat. Edw. I. (The penny of England, which is called sterling.) Camden derives the word from austerling or asterling, observing that the money brought from Germany, in the reign of Richard I., was the most esteemed on account of its purity, being called in old deeds "nummi auster- ling." Others derive the word from the Easterlings, the first moneyers in England.

STETHOSCOPE. In 1816 Laennec, of Paris, by rolling a quire of paper into a kind of cylinder, and applying one end to the patient's chest and the other to his own ear, perceived the action of the heart in a much more distinct manner than by the immediate application of the ear. This led to his inventing the stethoscope, or "breast-explorer," the principle of which, now termed "auscultation," was known by Hippocrates (357 B.C.), and by Robert Hooke, 1661.

STETTIN (Pomerania), an ancient city, formerly held by the Sclavi and Venodes, was taken by Boleslas of Poland in 1121. After being conquered by the Swedes, Russians, and French, it was awarded to Prussia in 1814. Population, 1890, 116,239.

Visited by emperor William during military manoeuvres, 12 Sept. 1887.

STEWARD OF ENGLAND, LORD HIGH. The first grand officer of the crown. This office was established prior to the reign of Edward the Confessor, and was formerly annexed to the lordship of Hinclevy, Leicestershire, belonging to the family of Montfort, earls of Leicester, who were, in right thereof, lord high stewards of England, but Simon de Montfort, the last earl of this family, having raised a rebellion against his sovereign, Henry III., was attainted, and his estate forfeited to the king, who abolished the office, 1265. It is now revived only pro hac vice at a coronation, or the trial of a peer. The first afterwards appointed was Thomas, second son of Henry IV. The first for the trial of a peer was Edward, earl of Devon, on the arraignment of the earl of Huntingdon, in 1400. The last was lord Denman at the trial of the earl of Cardigan, 16 Feb. 1841. The duke of Hamilton was lord high steward at the coronations of William IV. 1831, and Victoria, 1838.

STEWARD OF THE HOUSEHOLD, LORD (an ancient office), has the sole direction of the king's house below-stairs, he has no formal grant of his office, but receives his charge from the sovereign in person, who, delivering to him a white wand, the symbol of his office, says, "Senechal, tenes le bouton de notre maison." This officer has been called lord steward since 1540, previously to the 31st of Henry VIII. he was styled grand master of the household. His function as a judge was abolished in 1849.

STICKLESTADT (Norway). Here Olaf II., aided by the Swedes, was defeated in his endeavours to recover his kingdom from Canute, king of Denmark, and slain, 29 July, 1030. He was afterwards sainted, on account of his zeal for Christianity.

STIPENDIARY MAGISTRATES, see Magistrates.

STIRLING (S. Scotland). The strong castle was taken by Edward I. of England, 1304. Here James II. stabbed the earl of Douglas, 13 Feb. 1452, and here James VI. was crowned, 24 July, 1567. Stirling surrendered to Monk, 14 Aug. 1651. The statue of king Robert Bruce unveiled, 24 Nov. 1877. A gigantic bronze statue of Sir William Wallace unveiled at the National Wallace Monument 25 June, 1887. Population, 1881, 16,013, 1891, 16,995.

STREUPS were unknown to the ancients. Gracchus fitted the highways with stones to enable the horsemen to mount. Warriors had projections on their spears for the same purpose. Stirrups were used in the 5th century, but were not common even in the 12th.

STOCKACH, a town in Baden, near which the Austrians, under the archduke Charles, defeated the French, 25 March, 1799, and Moreau defeated Kray, 3 May, 1800.

STOCKINGS of silk are said to have been first worn by Henry II of France, 1547. In 1560 queen Elizabeth was presented with a pair of knit black silk stockings, by her silk-woman, Miss Montague, and the next worst cloth ones any more. Houell. He adds, "Henry VIII wore ordinary cloth hose, except there came from Spain, by great chance, a pair of silk stockings," for Spain very early abounded with silk. Edward VI was presented with a pair of Spanish silk stockings by his merchant, sir Thomas Gresham, and the present was then much taken notice of. Idem. Others relate that William Rider, a London apprentice, seeing at the house of an Italian merchant a pair of knit worsted stockings from Mantua, made a pair like them, the first made in England, which he presented to the earl of Pembroke, 1564. Stow. The art of weaving stockings in a frame was invented in England by the rev. Mr. Lee, of Cambridge, in 1589, twenty-five years after he had learnt to knit them with wires or needles. Cotton stockings were first made in 1730, see Cotton. Digested stockings (like gloves), introduced 1882.

STOCKPORT (in Cheshire) has become eminent on account of the cotton trade. Heaton Norris, in Lancashire, is united to it by a bridge over the river. Here the Manchester blanketers were dispersed, 11 March, 1817, and here was a serious religious riot, when two Roman catholic chapels were destroyed, and the houses of many Roman catholics gutted, and their furniture and other contents smashed or burnt, 29 June, 1852.

STOKE, EAST (near Newark, Nottinghamshire) Near here, on 16 June, 1427, the adherents of Lambert Simnel, who personated Edward, earl of Warwick, and claimed the crown, were defeated by Henry VII. John de la Pole, the earl of Lincoln, and most of the leaders, were slain. Simnel was afterwards employed in the king's household.

STONE Stone buildings erected in England by Benedict Biscop about 670. A stone bridge built at Bow, in the 11th or 12th centuries, is accounted the first, but a bridge exists at Crowland, which is said to have been built in 860, see Bridges. The first stone building in Ireland was probably a round tower, see Building. Stone china-ware was made by Wedgwood in 1762. Artificial stone for statues was manufactured by a Neapolitan, and introduced into England, 1776. Stone paper was made in 1770, see Ransom's Artificial Stone, and Lithotomy. For stone implements, see Flints, and Pneumatics. An orchestra composed of wind instruments in side of terra-cotta appeared in London in 1874.

STONEHENGE (on Salisbury Plain, Wiltshire) is said to have been erected in the counsel of Merlin, by Aurelius Ambrosius, in memory of 460 Britons, who were murdered by Hengist the Saxon about 450. Geoffrey of Monmouth. Erected as a sepulchral monument of Ambrosius, 500. Polydore Vergil. An ancient temple of the Britons, in which the Druids officiated. Dr Stukeley. The Britons are said to have held annual meetings at Avebury and Stonehenge, when laws were made and justice administered. The curus near Stonehenge was discovered by Dr Stukeley, 6 Aug 1723. The origin and object of these remains are still very obscure. See W M Flinders Petrie's "Stonehenge Plans, Description, and Theories" 1880. The thorough preservation of Stonehenge strongly advocated Aug 1886.

STORTHING, the Norwegian parliament, said to have been first held at Bergen by Haac V. in 1223.

STOVES. The ancients used stoves which concealed the fire, as the German stoves yet do. They lighted the fire also in a large tube in the middle of the room, the roof being open. Apartments were warmed by portable braziers. Stoves on this old principle, improved, continue in use in many houses and public establishments in England, and generally on the continent. Dr Franklin and count Rumford (who invented a stove) pointed out the waste of fuel in our open fires, and Dr Neil Arnott patented his "improvements in the production and agency of heat," 14 Nov 1821. Dr C. William Siemens described his smokeless stove in "Nature" for 11 Nov 1880. See Chimneys, and Cottages' Stoves.

Mr T. Pradign Teale publishes his invention in which he revives the principles of count Rumford with additions, 1885-6.

SUICIDE (from suī, self; cedere, to kill), the slaying of himself. The first instances recorded in Jewish history are those of Samson, about 1120, and Saul, 1055 B.C. The Greek and Roman philosophers deemed it a crime, and burned the offending hand apart from the rest of the body. In the reign of Tarquin I., the Roman soldiers, thinking themselves disgraced by being ordered to make common sewers, destroyed themselves, 600 B.C. Cato committed suicide, 16 B.C.* In the Roman catholic church, in the 6th century it was ordained that no commemoration should be made in the Eucharist for such as committed self-murder. Thus ecclesiastical law continued till the Reformation, when it was admitted into the statute law of England by the authority of parliament, with the consecration of land and goods. Till 1823 the body of the suicide was directed to be buried in a cross-road, and a stake to be driven through it. A new act, suppressing the barbarous custom, was passed in 1882. It is now usually buried in consecrated ground without a religious ceremony. Thomas Cooper, the eminent Chartist, author of "The Purgatory of Suicide," an epic poem, published in 1845; died, aged 87, 15 July, 1892. Dr. Henry Morelli published "Suicide: an Essay," 1881. There were 7,572 suicides in France in 1887.

* Three instances of self destruction by fire: the philosopher Empedocles threw himself into the crater of Mount Etna; a Frenchman threw himself, in 1820, into the crater of Vesuvius; and an Englishman, who jumped into the furnace of a forge about the year 1811. Plutarch relates that an unaccountable passion for suicide seized the Milesian virgins, from which they could not be prevented by the tears and prayers of their friends, but a decree being issued that the body of every young maid who did self-murder should be drawn naked through the streets, a stop was soon put to the extraordinary frenzy.
